DYESS REVEALS HOW HE AND 11 PALS ESCAPED

They Just Walked Away from Japs!

The ruse by which he and 11 comrades escaped from a Jap prison camp on Mindanao Island in the Philippines is told today in the 22d instalment of the late Lt. Col. W. E. Dyess' thrilling story of life as a Jap prisoner of war. Col. Dyess died in a plane crash last Dec. 22 after reaching this country.

BY LT. COL. W. E. DYESS,
United States Army Air Forces,
As told to CHARLES LEAVELLE.
[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

We planned to make our escape by slipping away on Sunday, April 4. Our Filipino comrades, Ben and Victor, could slip away easily from the convicts' compound after the morning count.

If some of the details that follow seem a little vague, it must be understood I am blurring them purposely to protect those who remained behind.

Sunday morning dawned bright and clear. We were up early. Our men finished breakfast, then drew the regulation rations issued to details that are to work outside the barricade. Each man got a mess kit filled with rice. There were two large tin cans of soup to be heated at chow time. There was some additional equipment that had been accumulated at the last minute, and this we distributed about our persons.

Split Into Two Details.

Shifty led the first detail which was made up of Jack, Mike, and Sam. Lt. Comdr. M. H. McCoy led the second detail, made up of Maj. Stephen Mellnik, Paul, Bob, Leo, and myself. Ben and Victor made up a third party.

[Editor's note: Col. Dyess employed only given names where there was uncertainty that the men had reached the continental United States. The following have since returned: Mike, Maj. Michiel Dobervitch; Jack, Maj. Jack Hawkins, and Shifty, Maj. Austin C. Shofner.]

The first detail fell in and marched to the southeast gate, thru which it was passed without question, and proceeded straight east, crossing the main road and the tracks. Within a few minutes, the first four men were at the rendezvous.

Silent Prayer at Crisis.

Now it was our turn. I have spoken before of the prayers, silent prayers, we used to say at O'Donnell and Cabanatuan camps and of how I came to think of God as a man thinks of his commanding officer—as "The Old Man." I knew that the next minute or two would bring the supreme test for us.

I didn't exactly pray, but I thought to myself: "If the Old Man is with us, we'll make it. If He isn't, we wont."

We halted at the gate. McCoy, whom they had seen as a detail leader in the past, stepped up and saluted.

One of the guards stepped out into the road to look us over closely. Whether he actually was more suspicious than usual I don't know, but he did hesitate. Usually the guard made a swift count, then called it off to one of his partners, who would chalk it on a board.

Blessed Word, That "O. K.!"

This guard, however, continued to stand and look at us. There was plenty of chance for a slip. Even a cursory examination of our persons would have disclosed enough contraband to have lost all of us our heads. It seemed to me that I clanked when I walked.

It was a long moment. Then suddenly the guard snapped: "O. K.!" and stepped back. His partner chalked us down. We passed thru the gate.

We were in plain view of guards with binoculars on the northwest and southwest towers of the camp.

We walked as nonchalantly as possible, but it seemed to me that my heart was beating my brains out. I thought I could actually feel the guards' eyes on the back of my neck.

As we crossed a road one at a time, we were so close a guard could easily have knocked us off with his gun. Obviously he didn't notice us. There was no outcry.

When we were all across, I thought to myself: "The Old Man IS with us today. What we're hav-

U. S. to Raze Billion Worth of War Homes

New York, Feb. 19 [Special].—More than one billion dollars worth of homes erected by the national housing agency to provide temporary living quarters to war workers will be demolished when the war ends. This was announced here today by John B. Blandford Jr., NHA administrator, and Charles S. Ascher, regional director for the New York area.

The officials said the demolition program involves more than 400,000 dwelling units classified as demountable, temporary or stop-gap. The amount of housing scheduled to be torn down came as a surprise to many realty observers and housing officials who said that altho they had known temporary housing was to go, they had not anticipated it embraced such a large share of construction under the 2 billion, 300 million dollar war housing program.

Whole Villages Vacant.

Blandford said that housing of substantial type will be saved to become a part of the peacetime public housing setup when war needs subside. Such projects he described as being the slum clearance, low rent types. He admitted, however, that already a serious problem has arisen of finding occupants for NHA homes and that whole villages in new government housing in some parts of the New York and New England regions stand dark and unused.

The housing scheduled for demolition, Blandford said, is of the following classification and costs: 72,866 demountable family units, $306,104,000; 222,513 temporary family units, $613,859,000; 63,519 temporary dormitories, $52,657,000, and 41,953 stop-gap dwellings [trailers], $62,733,000. The total is 400,851 units costing $1,025,353,000.

When the houses are demolished, the sites will be turned back to the former owners in accordance with the Lanham act, under which the FHA program was established, Blandford said. He said lumber, brick, and other materials will have considerable salvage value, but part of that return will be absorbed in the cost of razing the buildings. The labor and most of the cost of the network of utilities brought into each war village will be lost, it was admitted.

Suggestions Pour In.

Plans for making use of the oversupply of war housing, most of it of a temporary character, are being studied here and in Washington, officials said. The houses are restricted to war workers and until recently many of the projects were open only to incoming migratory workers, a class of workers which has disappeared as a result of government job freeze orders.

In Geneva, N. Y., where a completed 250 family unit has never been occupied because of a shift in war production plans, an agricultural defense committee has proposed that the houses be turned over to Italian war prisoners who might be used to work on neighboring farms. Other suggestions reaching NHA officials include throwing the houses open to families of men in service or to returning discharged or disabled veterans.

Blandford admitted that there are several "very bad spots" in the housing program from an occupancy standpoint, adding they should be considered war casualties. At Niagara Falls, Messina, Mineville, and Geneva, N. Y., at Warminster, and other suburbs of Philadelphia, and in some Massachusetts cities rows of one and two story frame buildings spread as far as eye can see, it was said, waiting for tenants who never came.

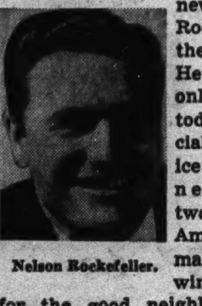
A ROCKEFELLER SWEATS IT OUT!

Nelson Finds Paper Scarcity Real Thing, Almost.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—Dear Boss:

If the government won't allow you enough paper to print the war news, Nelson Rockefeller's in the same spot. He had space for only 531 words today in his special feature service pamphlet for newspapers on two draft age American diplomats who are winning friends for the good neighbor policy by climbing mountains in Ecuador.



Nelson Rockefeller.

Nelson doesn't print on both sides of the paper, as you do, but then he's coördinator of Inter-American affairs.

Both 24 Years Old.

The diplomats are named Maxey and Engle. They're both 24. Maxey and Engle tie themselves together with a silk rope, but you'd better just make it a rope or lady readers who can't get silk stockings won't understand.

Nelson's story begins:

"QUITO—Two young attaches of the United States embassy here are winning the admiration of their Ecuadorian neighbors with a new type of inter-American conquest. They are James B. Engle, 24, vice consul, and John G. Maxey, 24, of the diplomatic service, whose leisure time climbing of Ecuador's highest peaks has won them a lasting niche in the affections of Quitenos everywhere."

No Space for Statistics.

Nelson says the young diplomats can climb even in the dark of the moon, and lists the heights of all the peaks they've scaled, but there's hardly space for the statistics.

There are eight articles in the 14 page pamphlet and the newspapers may reprint all of them, and the human interest stories, too. The city of David, in the Chiriqui province of Panama, is planning a $150,000 hotel to catch the travelers along the Pan-American highway. And Willy's Teresa Inka Sierra, a Brazilian cow, is setting milk production records.

Nelson knows there's a paper shortage, for one of his filler items for newspapers with too much paper tells how a Cuban editor had to publish on wrapping paper. The pamphlet's coming by mail in case you'd like to use the backs of the pages for letters.

Yours truly,
Washington Bureau.

Submarine's Thrilling Fight for Life Told by Skipper

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT A U. S. SUBMARINE BASE IN THE PACIFIC AREA, Feb. 12 [Delayed].—This is a true sea saga of an American submarine which by all odds should now be lying on the bottom of the sea, deep in Japanese waters.

For many hours two Jap destroyers attacked the sub, trailing her by oil and air escaping thru leaks caused by the first depth charge salvo. They gave up only when the rail stopped usually a sign that the sub had sunk.

The story of that fight was told today by the sub's skipper, Lt. Comdr. Marvin "Mark" Jensen of Sheboygan, Wis.

"Shortly after dawn we saw a Jap escort vessel swinging along the horizon," he said. "There was no other ship in sight, but the vessel was very plainly making a patrol to assure safe waters. Altho we had never heard of such a practice before, we decided that a large ship must be following her. So we hurried down the escort's wake. We didn't have far to go. The ship was there, and she was a big one.

Torpedoes Sent Home.

"From periscope depth we fired the two forward torpedoes. They went true. Smoke rolled up over the middle of the ship. Within a minute she was listing so badly the skipper could have leaned over and touched the sea. We scratched her off as sunk and started to move away. But the ship began to right herself. The Japs are experts at that now—they've had enough practice. Also, a Jap destroyer steamed up over the horizon.

"We squared away to renew our attack on the ship. The destroyer was almost on us when we fired our aft torpedoes. We knew that by so doing we would disclose our position.

"The Jap spotted this bubble and came plowing over. We went into a dive. And at the same time the depth charges came squarely across our stern. The ship took a deep angle, the stern far below the bow.

Escape Depth Charges.

"Again and again the depth charges came. But we were lucky. We took such a wobbly course that altho the Jap could trail us, we were always just to one side of his attacks. In time he adopted a waiting policy. He knew we couldn't get away, so he would attack only when our course became fairly straight.

"So now it was a game of wits. We'd sail a straight course until we thought the Jap was overhead. Then we'd swerve. Sure enough, down come the charges. All day and all night that game went on. We tried to hold on until all the Jap's charges were used. But before dawn his attack stopped. We thought we were safe. But soon another destroyer joined him—he had called for help. Run and dodge—run and dodge—all day that went on."

All the while the sub was becoming a hell hole. The temperature went up past the 120 degree mark. The pressure became almost unbearable. Every one had headaches so splitting that the eyesight was blurred. One man went blind—he recovered two days later.

Flood Compartments.

The men formed bucket brigades to haul water from the partly flooded torpedo room and dump it in the other compartments. Oxygen was bled into the sub to keep the men alive.

Every time the depth charges came, the diving officer, Lt. Comdr. Larry Bernard of Deadwood, S. D., would blow the tanks to maintain bouyancy.

The men tore out the equipment to get to the leaks. An electric fan, ripped from the wall by a depth charge, went scuttling across the knee high flooded room like a small torpedo. The men all laughed.

Surface to Make Repairs.

By midafternoon of the second day they had stopped the leaks. Up on the surface the Japs hung around to make sure the sub had sunk, and then pulled off.

"We couldn't take any chances," resumed the skipper. "We waited until dusk and then resurfaced. The sub lay on her side. But within a few hours we had her righted and began repairs, at the same time moving away into a safer area. In two days we were ready to go again."

Comdr. Jensen said there was one very unsatisfactory thing about the episode. The sub didn't know if the second torpedo salvo had sunk the ship. He had no doubts about their scoring hits.

DESTROYERS ALSO SHELL KAVIENG; MARINES TAKE MARSHALLS AIR FIELD

ALLIED HDQ., IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Feb. 20 [Sunday]—(AP).—American destroyers shelled Rabaul and its supplementary base of Kavieng Friday for the first time in the war.

Moving boldly to within four miles of those Japanese strongpoints on northeastern New Britain and northwestern New Ireland, they duelled with shore batteries and silenced them. They heavily damaged shipping. They blew up shore installations. Then they departed undamaged.

At Rabaul, they smashed Simpson harbor, which lies deep within Blanche bay. Huge fires were set in dock areas. At Kavieng, the destroyers remained until after daybreak.

Jap Tanker Explodes.

Rabaul, which the Japanese used for the anchorage of many warships until repeated air attacks made this too costly, was approached by the destroyers under cover of a smoke screen. The opposing shore batteries were knocked out. Flames were spread over the docks by the warships' shells.

The warships at Kavieng, 160 miles northwest of Rabaul, hit a tanker which exploded. Other shells fell on small coastal vessels in the harbor. The docks were engulfed in flames after being hit. Coastal batteries were rendered impotent to resist the naval raiders.

Twelve Ships Bombed.

The bombardments were disclosed today in a bulletin of Gen. MacArthur. He also reported that only the day prior to the shelling of Rabaul, torpedo and dive bombers from the Solomons hit 12 ships and 20 barges in the harbor there. Four medium sized cargo vessels and a tanker were believed sunk. Heavy damage was caused to two destroyers, a tanker, and a patrol vessel.

The bombardments occurred approximately at the same time. The Kavieng shelling lasted for 50 minutes—from 6:40 to 7:30 a. m. The shelling of Rabaul was slightly shorter in duration.

The warships at Rabaul moved into positions they would not have dared take even a few months ago. For a brief time, the destroyers there dueled with Jap shore batteries, but silenced them. A Japanese destroyer came out to oppose them, but thought better of it and retired.

Stand Four Miles Out.

The American warships started fires from a distance which a spokesman said "was no farther than four miles." The Americans could see fires blazing in troop bivouac areas.

At Kavieng, the Japanese sent one flight of planes against the destroyers but the raiders were driven off. Immediately after that attack started, some shipping in the harbor fled but 11 or 12 ships were hit and damaged.

The Kavieng shore batteries ceased operating after firing a few salvos. Pilots of Catalina spotter planes said Kavieng's batteries were destroyed. The only aerial opposition to the bombardment was at Kavieng.

In the Thursday air strike at Rabaul, 150 Dauntless dive bombers, Avenger torpedo bombers, Corsairs, and Warhawks got in their heavy licks despite the opposition of 50 Japanese planes, of which eight were

CRUCIAL BATTLE FOR BEACHHEAD AT ANZIO RAGES

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, Feb. 19 (AP).—American and British troops, battling along their Anzio beachhead line, in four days have wiped out as many as half of some Nazi units in one of the greatest and most crucial battles of the war, front dispatches reaching here disclosed tonight.

Fifth army troops fell back in one sector south of Rome but kept their lines intact and prevented a break-thru. Against them the Germans have thrown at least four divisions of infantry and armored forces.

Allied airmen in a day of intense activity shot down at least 17 Nazi planes and probably destroyed five others of the more than 100 aircraft which attacked the British and American ground troops.

The grim determination of the allied infantrymen was praised by Lt. Gen. Clark, who said that the soldiers had risen to new heights of courage and skill.

Battle Superior Forces.

He made this statement after another visit to his advanced headquarters at the beachhead, and said he was inspired anew by the way the allied troops had guarded their position against numerically superior forces. He had praise also for the 5th army tankmen and the allied naval forces.

In the day's air battles American medium bombers shot down eight out of 20 German planes that tried to intercept their bombing of Nazi supply dumps around Carroceto. Returning pilots said that five more German planes were so badly damaged that they probably crashed. Seven German planes were shot down by British fighters and two by American fighter bombers.

Nazi Drive Being Held.

A dispatch from the beachhead front at noon summed up the situation as of that hour by saying: "Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's offensive is being held.'

Telling a story of swaying battle in which the Germans attacked with "almost reckless sacrifice of lives," the dispatch said that the American doughboys and tankmen hit back and recovered "in two hours some ground that the Germans had paid for with a heavy loss of lives in 24 hours' continuous fighting a day earlier."

As many as 90 German tanks swarmed in the front zone at one time Friday after the major battle had been renewed at 5 a. m.

"This obviously is the fullest-scale effort to throw the allied forces back into the sea," said an allied headquarters spokesman.

With German infantry and tanks attempting to split the beachhead defenders in the middle and drive down the Albano-Anzio road to the coast, allied troops withdrew yesterday a short distance below Carroceto.

[The German war bulletin declared the Germans had gained 2½ miles south of Carroceto, or within 7½ miles of Anzio.]

New Troops at Cassino.

In the fighting for Cassino, where Indian and New Zealand troops have been thrown into the battle for the first time on this front, there was little change altho the Germans were using more artillery.

[Knife wielding Kurkhas storm Cassino hill. Story on page 10.]

The Germans counter-attacked four times against allied troops who seized a crest opposite the monastery hill, but all the attacks were beaten off. This position was being consolidated in preparation for a future drive to push the Germans out of the abbey rubble and down hill. Other troops still were holding a narrow bridgehead over the Rapido river south of the town.

American troops who have been holding a few blocks of scarred buildings in the town of Cassino again engaged in street fighting when the Germans attacked with hand grenades last night.

U. S. Prisoners in Java Get Comfort Kits—Tokio

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Tokio radio said today that American war prisoners interned in Java had been given "comfort kits" sent from the United States at the time of the exchange of Japanese and allied civilians several months ago.

Eniwetok Islands Seized, 750 Miles from Truk.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Feb. 19 (AP)—American marines captured Engebi Island with its important air base one day after landing on Eniwetok atoll in the Marshalls, and several other islands also have fallen to the Americans, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Preliminary reports indicated American casualties have been light.

Other islands of the atoll captured were not named, but islands from that area include Muzinbaarikku, Yeiri and Rujiyoru, southeast of Engebi, and Bogon, Bogarikk, Elugelab and Bogallua to the northwest. Engebi is the northernmost of the main islands of Eniwetok atoll, which has a total of 30. It is about 21 miles north of Eniwetok island.

750 Miles from Truk.

Assaults on other portions of the atoll are proceeding on schedule, Adm. Nimitz said. His announcement did not indicate how much resistance the Japanese offered.

The capture of Engebi puts our forces 750 miles west of the great Japanese fortress of Truk, which was attacked by a great force of American carrier-based planes this week. For the first time Truk is within range of American land-based planes. Ponape, 425 miles southwest of Engebi, is within easy range even of medium Mitchells and their 75 mm. cannon.

There was no mention of army troops in today's announcement.

Has 5,000 Foot Runway.

A triangular shaped island, Engebi is approximately one mile long on each of its three sides. The 5,000 foot runway is located on the northwest shore and bears east to west.

As a prelude to the major attack on Truk and Eniwetok, army and navy planes and warships joined in neutralizing attacks on Ponape and Kusaie, both important Nipponese bases in the Carolines, and other bases in the Marshalls.

Warehouses and docks were hit at Ponape and harbor installations at Kusaie. Four eastern Marshall atolls were hit and at one a fuel dump was blown up, a small cargo ship damaged, and three smaller ships were sunk.

In going after Eniwetok the powerful American force, supported by carrier borne planes and battleships, by-passed four more atolls, none prominent as a Japanese base.

Japs Stress Faith in Navy.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Tokio radio said today that "the Japanese people must have faith in the navy, which will not force itself into unnecessary battles," thus for the first time referring to the unanswered question of the whereabouts of the Japanese fleet.

"The Japanese navy has good fighting strategy for achieving the final great victory," a Tokio Mandarin language broadcast said, while other Japanese speakers still stressed the "importance and seriousness of the war situation" for the homeland.

One Tokio broadcast said "the decisive battle of the Pacific has entered its actual phase at last," and warned that "the current strong raid on Truk is the enemy challenge."

"Twenty years ago the navy of the enemy United States trained itself for this operation with the so-called task force having aircraft carriers as the main body," a Japanese language broadcast said. "The objective is, needless to say, to try to divest Japan of her mastery of the sea. The distance between Truk and Tokio is 2,100 miles. With planes with a speed of over 300 miles per hour, covering these 2,100 miles will take less than seven hours. I need not describe here again the importance and seriousness of the war situation."

DYESS ESCAPES JAPS AND FINDS HAVEN IN JUNGLE

Rain Masks Party's Trail But Hampers Flight.

Skirting the southern boundary of the hospital and chapel compounds, we crossed a wide open space and neared the main road, which was to be our greatest hazard. A guard was stationed there, about 20 yards from where we were to cross.

Pose as Official Detail.

It had been our intention to slip across, one by one, but as we were about to do so we saw a Filipino, whom we did not know, coming down the road between us and the guard. He saw us. There was only one thing to do.

Snapping into detail formation, we walked boldly across, looking neither right nor left. The Filipino said nothing. The guard made no move. We stepped into the tall grass on the opposite side and kept going.

If the guard had shouted or fired, he would have attracted the attention of a second Jap on a smaller road to the east and a large Jap outpost farther south. A slip would have brought the entire camp down upon us.

The last bad place was just ahead—the small road to the east. We crept up and waited at its edge. Watching our chance, we infiltrated across, one by one, using the tactics some of us had learned when we fought as infantry on Bataan. We now were in the banana plantation, thru which we moved northward, passing Jap headquarters almost hidden in the trees.

Find Supplies Soaked.

We continued thru the thick foliage until we reached our cached supplies. As expected, they were soaked. We wrung them out, slung them across our backs, and in a few steps reached the rendezvous. Shifty and the others were waiting. We made an equitable distribution of the equipment. We now had only to wait for Ben and Victor and we would be on our way.

We stood silently in the jungle fastness. We could hear nothing. It seemed like an hour that we waited, keenly conscious that every minute we lost was a minute gained for the Japs—and they would be able to travel much faster than we because of our weakened condition. I wondered if the two Filipinos could have given us away in the hope of speeding the pardons promised by the Japs.

Then, like a wraith, Victor materialized out of the jungle. He whispered that Ben was waiting a short distance off, that he would fetch him. Waiting, I stood silent in the dim twilight of matted vines and trees. Then I heard some one coming noisily. I drew my fighting bolo. Presently I could see a Filipino, a stranger, making his way along. He passed with 3½ feet of me and disappeared. Then we heard the blows of his bolo as he chopped at trees.

Rain Comes to Cover Tracks.

It was about now that the daily rain started coming down. From his place of concealment, Leo whispered: "Good old rain. It'll cover our tracks."

"Cover our tracks, hell!" said Shifty. "I wish those guys would come on so we could start making some tracks."

Ben and Victor appeared shortly afterward. They explained that on leaving the compound they had met some Filipinos they didn't trust and had to linger to allay suspicion. They were just about 30 minutes late.

At 10:15 a. m., April 4, we plunged into the dense Davao jungle, strung out in single file, Victor in the lead. One man hung to the rear to give the alarm in the event we were pursued. The rain continued to come down. The ooze was knee deep and the dim path often dipped thru water filled gullies. There were mosquitoes by the millions.

The going immediately grew more difficult. It was necessary to slash a path thru the undergrowth. Once the Japs found this trail, they would be up with us in no time.

Our course led across many jungle streams, swollen by the rains. Some were too deep to wade and we had to chop down trees to use as bridges. Some one had brought some rope, which proved invaluable. Because our strength was not up to par, we soon grew weary. The rain soaked packs grew heavier and heavier.

Get Water from Vines.

About 30 minutes before dark, we halted. We had drunk all our water, and as we could not drink jungle water we had to find another supply. Victor knew the answer to this. He pulled down some buhuka, the serpentine, straggling vines that grow among the trees, and snipped off the ends. [The water contained in these hollow stems has been purified by vegetable action. The end of the vine is held in the mouth and the water trickles down.]

We pushed on a little farther that night, then came to the bank of a stream so swollen we didn't want to tackle it in the darkness. We cut down trees and from the trunks and smaller branches built four raised beds to keep us above the water. We ate the rice drawn that morning. It had soured during the day. Then we tried to sleep.

We felt fairly secure, knowing the Japs would be unable to find us that night.

The rain had stopped. The jungle grew weirdly silent. We could hear only the bubbling of water in the stream and the whine of dive bomber mosquitoes. We were dozing when there was a resounding crash followed by some of the most spectacular profanity I ever have listened to. The marines' bed had collapsed, dropping them into the water and ooze.

Shifty was the only one of us who didn't sleep that night. He insisted he could hear jungle drums, booming intermittently during the dark hours. I won't say he didn't. I came to know in the days ahead that you can hear anything in the jungle.

Lt. [j.g.] William Mansfield Pearce, whose wife is the former Miss Helen Johnson of 202 Greenwood blvd., Evanston, was stationed in the Philippines as manager of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet interests at the outbreak of war.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, he held a commission in the naval reserve and entered active service a few weeks before Pearl Harbor. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Pearce of East Orange, N. J.

His wife recently received a letter and two post cards from him, in which he reported that his health was good.

Rudolph Masa, 31, boatswain, was a sailor for 11 years before the outbreak of war, and was stationed in the Philippines when Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Before his enlistment in the navy, he was a shipping clerk for a furniture company. Masa was born in Czecho-Slovakia and came to Chicago when 14. He attended Agassiz Grammar school. His father, Emanuel of 2338 S. Central Park av., a carpenter, received a postcard from him two months ago in a Philippine Island prison camp.

"We wish the war department would send more aid to the Southwest Pacific," his mother said yesterday.

Pvt. Lester I. Tenenberg, 24, cabled his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Tenenberg, 1412 Chase av., Nov. 16, 1941, when he reached the Philippines. The war department notified his parents two months ago that he has been removed from a Philippine island to a Japanese prison camp.

After attending Lane Technical High school, Pvt. Tenenberg worked at Liquid Carbonic Co. until his enlistment in October, 1940. He trained at Fort Knox, Ky. A brother, William, is in the Seabees.

"We wonder if anyone remembers the prisoners on Bataan any more," Mrs. Tenenberg said yesterday."

ACCEPT WITHDRAWAL OF COL. M'CORMICK FROM APRIL PRIMARY

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The name of Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will not appear on the April 11 Illinois primary ballot as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, Lewis Vogel, chief clerk in the secretary of state's index office at Springfield, said yesterday.

Despite Col. McCormick's formal declination of the candidacy, William J. Grace, secretary of the Republican Nationalist Revival committee, on Friday asked the secretary of state to "give no legal effect" to the colonel's withdrawal.

"McCormick has filed a legal statement of withdrawal under oath in this office and in accordance therewith his petitions have been withdrawn from the files of live petitions. His name will not be on the ballot," Vogel said.

Amid discussion of Col. McCormick's name as a possible candidate, he said he did not wish to run. Grace's committee filed nominating petitions anyway, after which Col. McCormick formally withdrew.

In his latest move, Grace contended that Illinois election laws made "no provision for the withdrawal of Presidential candidate petitions whatsoever."

BRUNDAGE TELLS PLATFORM WHILE DECISION WAITS

Avery Brundage, who has been urged to make the race for governor in the Republican primary, released yesterday a platform of 11 planks on which, he said, he will make the race if he decides to become a candidate. His final decision will be made tomorrow, Brundage said, and will depend on whether he can arrange his personal affairs to give sufficient time to the campaign.

His first plank included "win our wars and bring our boys back." Others urged "restore America to Americans," "throw out all New Dealers," "ration burocracy instead of the people," and "regain state sovereignty."

Taking Democratic leaders at their word that "this is a free and open primary," Stanley T. Gross, attorney, 5436 Leland av., has filed for congressman in the 7th district and will oppose William Link, the organization's selection to succeed the late Leonard W. Schuetz, in the Democratic primary April 11.

Gross, an assistant state's attorney under Thomas J. Courtney for four years, resigned in 1942 to enter private practice.

The lawyer said he had the support of numerous civic and business organizations in the 7th district, the nation's most heavily populated congressional district, and denied any intentions of withdrawing in favor of Link. He served prior to 1938 as secretary of the Jefferson Park Chamber of Commerce.

Opposition in the Republican primary for the 7th district congressional nomination was indicated in the filing of Justus Mozart, 5029 N. Tripp av., a former assistant state's attorney.

ANTI-NEW DEAL REVOLT GROWS, WOODRING SAYS

National committeemen and committeewomen for more than half of the states in the Union already have been selected by officers of the American Democratic National committee, the organization formed to wrest control of the Democratic party from New Dealers, Chairman Harry H. Woodring of Topeka, Kas., announced here yesterday.

Woodring, former secretary of war under President Roosevelt, left last night with Robert E. O'Brian, committee secretary, for New York to confer with eastern Democrats opposed to the New Deal and a fourth term. He said committee members for all 48 states probably would be named within the next 30 days and the committee then would select complete state organizations.

Tested Democrats Selected.

The former cabinet officer, who launched the anti-New Deal movement within the Democratic party with a speech in Chicago Feb. 4, said the committee members already selected had "earned the confidence of Democrats in the past" by service in public office or in party leadership.

Woodring said selection of the time and place for the committee's national convention would not be made until the national committee has been completed. An executive committee probably will be named within the next 10 days. So far the only officers named are Woodring, O'Brian, and Otha D. Wearin, former Iowa congressman, who was named vice chairman.

No effort will be made to fight for delegates to the Democratic national convention that meets in Chicago July 19. Woodring pointed out that federal appointees and New Dealers were so strongly entrenched in the leadership that it would be hopeless to combat them.

Contributions Paying All Bills.

O'Brian said the committee had been able to pay all current bills and keep a comfortable balance from the outset. Checks and cash are arriving in small amounts in every mail, as well as pledges of financial support from Democrats who, he said, "welcomed the opportunity to express their opposition to the New Deal without leaving the party." O'Brian said a number of corporation checks had been returned, not because the committee objected to corporations, but to prevent even a suspicion of the committee's motives and performances.

O'Brian said many Democrats, who publicly were supporting the fourth term, privately berated the New Dealers as much as any one, but were "afraid to put themselves on record."

Plans to Meet State Needs.

Woodring said he would recommend a course of action adapted to fit the varying laws and political situations of each state. "Laws pertaining to political parties vary in almost every state," he pointed out, "and different steps must be taken to shoulder the New Dealers out of control."

He conferred in Chicago with party leaders from Louisiana and Iowa and plans to meet New England and east coast leaders in New York next week, returning by next week-end to Chicago, where committee headquarters have been established in the Palmer House.

COURTNEY GIVES F. D. R. BRUSH-OFF IN OPENING TALK

Makes Brief Mention of Party Leader.

BY THOMAS MORROW.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 19.—Thomas J. Courtney, state's attorney of Cook county, opened his campaign for nomination for governor on the Democratic ticket today by echoing the Jeffersonian sentiment that the best governer are the least governed. He spoke before 350 downstate Democrats at a luncheon meeting in the St. Nicholas hotel.

Courtney followed the state party line by making sparse mention of the President. In paying tribute to the fighting men of the United States, he said that their military accomplishments were achieved under the direction of the commander in chief. He made no further mention of Roosevelt.

Cites Downstate "Initiative."

"For some time past," Courtney said, "the people of downstate Illinois have expressed the opinion they had not been given proper consideration in the selection of candidates for state office. They were critical of the policy of Cook county taking the lead in suggesting candidates and expecting the people of downstate Illinois to follow. This time you took the initiative."

"State government should be simplified," Courtney told his listeners. "It should be truthful; it should be straight forward; it should be mindful of the people's needs. But it should be further mindful that the least governed are the best governed."

Present at the meeting and hopeful that Courtney would put some life into the Democratic campaign in Illinois were Scott Lucas, candidate for reëlection as United States senator; Mrs. Paul Douglas, for congressman at large; Edward C. [Ted] Hunter of Rockford, for lieutenant governor; Sveinbjorn Johnson, professor of law at the University of Illinois and candidate for attorney general, and Earl W. Merritt of Salem, for state treasurer.

"If the President does run—and I think he will—he will benefit by the issue made by the Republicans of the soldier vote bill," said Lucas. "The parents back home will take care of the politicians who failed to take care of the boys."

"If the senate and house fail to bring out a uniform federal ballot," he added, "they will be telling 11 million in our armed forces that the congress is not willing to let these citizen-soldiers participate in the election."

Mrs. Douglas Talks Peace.

Mrs. Douglas, wife of the former alderman of Chicago's 5th ward, said that the trouble with Americans is that "every one wants peace and liberty, but many do little about that desire."

Johnson asserted that he had but one thought for the people of Illinois—that the office of attorney general, if he wins it, will become a law office, not a campaign issue.

Petitions naming Corp. Edward J. Barrett of Wilmette, former state auditor now stationed at Pearl Harbor, as a candidate for secretary of state were filed today.

BARE NEW DEAL'S FEAR IN PLOT TO HALT FCC PROBE

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—Administration fears that congressional investigation of the federal communications commission, if permitted to continue, will "destroy the New Deal," is at the bottom of a burocratic conspiracy to stifle the quiz, it was learned reliably today.

The inquiry was brought to a halt last Wednesday by the secret vote of three Democratic members, composing a majority of the FCC investigating committee, to suspend hearings into the forced sale of a New York City radio station under pressure alleged to have originated in the White House.

The finishing blow to the investigation, in the opinion of Republican members who assailed the majority action as "a cover-up of unsavory facts," will come with the forced resignation of Committee Counsel Eugene L. Garey which may be announced next week.

Blow-Up Likely in House.

A blow-up on the house floor shortly thereafter is predicted by congressmen acquainted with the details of hidden maneuvers to kill the inquiry.

Garey has been a foe of dictatorial agency practices since early in the New Deal and has made hundreds of speeches before bar associations, discussing the dangerous trend of centralizing powers in Washington bureaus. When offered the committee job by former Chairman Cox [D., Ga.], whom he had never met before, he accepted it reluctantly, stipulating that he should have a free hand in conducting the investigation and emphasizing that he had no purpose other than to reveal the truth about FCC's dominance of the radio industry.

Warned He's Defying F. D. R.

After the forced resignation of Cox last September, Garey was persuaded to remain by committee members. But when he began to present evidence revealing that FCC Chairman James L. Fly had interfered with attempts of the navy to halt Japanese broadcasts from Hawaii before the attack on Pearl Harbor and had forced the virtual "cashiering" of an admiral, the following message was reported to have been relayed to him:

"You are defying the President of the United States and no one can get away with that."

Not long afterward, the justice department began putting pressure upon various persons with a view to ousting Garey, it is reported.

Yanks Like Overseas Tribune; Officials Keep It from All but One Front; Congressman to Ask Lend-Lease Curb if British Persist in F.D.R. Boom

New Methods Used in Special Edition.

For six months THE TRIBUNE has been producing a special newspaper for service men overseas. Known as The Chicago Overseas Tribune, it provides news from home in an attractive format that resembles the large CHICAGO TRIBUNE but still uses so little paper that 1,000 copies can be printed from 53 pounds of newsprint. It is given free to fighters, or, if circumstances require that it be sold, the price is limited to 2 cents a copy, regardless of cost of production and distribution.

While this special edition has been printed for some time at one point—Honolulu where its circulation is 10,000—lack of coöperation in some instances and definite opposition in others both in Washington and in England has prevented extension of its distribution to other fighting fronts.

From the start of this war, THE TRIBUNE began planning an Overseas Tribune. It was encouraged to do so by the popularity of the army edition of THE TRIBUNE which was published in Paris for soldiers of World War I.

Within two weeks after Gen. Pershing landed in France, the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE was supplying homesick Americans with features they had been following all their lives and with news that didn't look important to British newspapers but which was life itself to the Yanks. So well was this edition received that the demand of Americans in Europe kept it going for more than a decade after the war ended.

Fresh News Provided.

In the present war, while most Americans under arms still were training in this country, they were able to obtain THE DAILY and SUNDAY TRIBUNE, and to ease their hard pressed wallets they got these papers at special low subscription rates. The mails carried Chicago news to Chicagoans while it was fresh.

When troops began to move out in large numbers for foreign duty, plans for The Overseas Tribune became specific. Complaints of lack of news from home and expressions of gratitude for TRIBUNES which reached boys at the fronts stimulated the plans.

To accomplish this aim, two things were necessary—small size and fast transportation. The problem of size was met by a paper that was 12 by 9½ inches, weighing two-thirds of an ounce, and by an even smaller paper made by reducing the same material photographically and printing it by offset on pages 9 by 6 inches. The offset paper weighed less than a third of an ounce.

Resembles Daily Tribune.

The front page of this little paper closely resembles the Daily TRIBUNE, with the familiar cartoon, the same headlines, and other details. The front page and page 3 carry general news, stressing Chicagoland events. Page 2 is filled by Terry and the Pirates, a week's daily strips being carefully edited to carry on the complete narrative. Readers are kept up to date on four other cartoon serials—Dick Tracy, page 5; Gasoline Alley, page 7; Smilin' Jack, page 8, and Little Orphan Annie, page. 9.

On page 4 are found the columns "A Line o'Type or Two" and "Front Views and Profiles," and news of movies, radio, and other entertainment. Page 6 carries a short editorial, the "Voice of the People," a selected cartoon of "The Neighbors," a specially drawn cartoon on events of the day, and a specially written "Friend of the Yanks" column giving information about policies and changes in rules which affect the soldiers, sailors, and marines.

Pages 10 and 11 are devoted to sports, including "In the Wake of the News," and the back page is given over to photographs of home and other nonmilitary subjects.

Plastic Plates Used.

Printing materials for this paper, which is set in type and made up in the Tribune Tower, were to be supplied by THE TRIBUNE at its expense in any form desired — negatives or contact prints for offset printing; dry or plastic matrices [mats] for stereotype plates; or vinylite plastic printing plates. The plastic printing plates, weighing 11 ounces to the page, are ready to be tacked onto a block of wood and placed on the press. Even the crudest of printing presses can turn out a workmanlike job with them.

All these methods — negatives, mats or plastic plates — were suitable for solving the transportation problem. The materials, except the blank paper, could be done up in a light package and flown across the ocean with ease. The paper could be shipped a long time in advance.

Negotiations to put out this paper proceeded apace in every major theater of operations, and officers and men fell in with the idea most happily. In Hawaii plans were discussed for publishing it as a supplement of the Mid-Pacifican, service men's paper printed in Honolulu, but authorities ruled out this idea.

Printed in Honolulu.

Arrangements then were made to print the Overseas Tribune at Tribune expense in the plant of the Honolulu Advertiser, a newspaper, and to distribute the paper thru army exchange service outlets at army posts in the islands and thru a private news distributor.

The paper is printed from plates made in Chicago and shipped to Honolulu by airplane. By this means of transportation it is possible to circulate in the Hawaiian Islands a newspaper which had gone to press in Chicago only a few days before. The air shipment was made possible by priority orders obtained from the army for the air shipment to San Francisco and from the navy for the shipment from San Francisco to Hawaii.

A package of plastic plates shipped from Chicago on Thursday night for an Overseas Tribune bearing the date of the following Saturday now reaches Honolulu on Sunday or Monday. At present the circulation of the Honolulu edition of the Overseas Tribune is 10,000.

Enthusiastically Received.

Jan Jabulka, Tribune representative in Honolulu, found service men and officers enthusiastic about The Overseas Tribune, "especially," he cabled, "its excellent comics." Among several officers in key staff positions, the officer in charge of the recreational program in the area was quoted as being particularly eager to have The Overseas Tribune made available to men in the islands.

Success of The Overseas Tribune in the Hawaiian area was not matched elsewhere abroad. THE TRIBUNE offered to print in every theater, European, Mediterranean, British Indian, far east, Australian —anywhere—and its representatives approached the proper authorities.

Officers in the field welcomed the chance to publish The Overseas Tribune as a supplement to Stars and Stripes, being printed in Italy, Sicily, and four cities of North Africa. Realization of this plan, however, was contingent on approval by the commanding general. For several months it seemed likely that The Overseas Tribune would publish in the Mediterranean region, but on Feb. 1 the war department in Washington wrote THE TRIBUNE that the commanding general at Algiers had decided no commercial newspapers would be published in that theater.

Alaskan Facilities Inadequate.

The Alaskan department reported its facilities inadequate to print anything but post publications. Printing facilities were arranged in Australia but a request for permission to ship newsprint sufficient to print 15,000 copies of The Overseas Tribune a week was turned down.

From the start of negotiations it seemed probable that publication would be feasible in the British Isles. Officers and men there, who received copies of The Overseas Tribune by mail, appealed for a London edition.

After six months of negotiating there, The Tribune representative cabled on Dec. 16: "Progress is being made and matters are moving along." Five days later he wired that he could obtain press facilities to print a sample edition from plastic plates, but THE TRIBUNE was unable to get air priorities to fly the plates to England.

Then in Washington THE TRIBUNE was informed that publication of The Overseas Tribune in additional theaters had been ordered stopped. Instructed to verify or disprove this report, the chief of THE TRIBUNE'S London office cabled:

"Your information correct."

50,000,000 DOLLARS TO BEAT F.D.R.

ROOSEVELT'S opponents are ready to spend 50,000,000 dollars to beat him—as they assumed—he makes his fourth term bid for President at the November elections.

Despite this, no political expert is willing to put his money down and bet Roosevelt will be beaten.

BIG OFFENSIVE

In the unofficial anti-Roosevelt campaign, which is already booming, "constitutional clubs" in 250 key constituencies controlled from New York and supported by many industrialists, are attacking the New Deal, food subsidies and high taxation.

One of the results is, that organised labour, with the exception of John L. Lewis, the miners' leader, is again rallying behind the President.

Mr. Roosevelt's personal physician, Rear-Admiral Ross McIntyre, recalling that the President's birthday was on January 30, said that he was "basically in fine shape for a man of 62."

LIVING COSTS JUMP

The cost of living in the U.S. ...reased by 4.5 per cent...

...gress should raise.

Published by the MINISTRY OF INFORMATION, and printed by ASSOCIATED SCOTTISH NEWSPAPERS, LIMITED, at KEMSLEY HOUSE, GLASGOW.

These are three sections from a four page, official British pamphlet handed to American soldiers as they landed in England. The pamphlet has been attacked in congress as British meddling to promote a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

Left: Leading article in page 2 of the pamphlet, asserting that opponents of Roosevelt are ready to spend 50 million dollars to beat him; that labor is rallying to the President, and mentioning that his health is sound. Upper right: Page 1 of the pamphlet, showing Prime Minister Churchill giving salute. Lower right: Official sponsorship of the pamphlet, printed on page 2 in lower right hand side.

Taber Warns English Against Meddling.

Refuse Inspection

An Associated Press dispatch from London yesterday said the British ministry of information had refused to permit an Associated Press reporter to examine a copy of the publication it has been distributing to newly arrived American troops containing 4th term propaganda for President Roosevelt. The ministry told the Associated Press that the paper, a four page tabloid, is for American soldiers only, and not for general publication.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—Disclosure by THE TRIBUNE of British meddling in American politics brought agitation today for limitation of the flow of lend-lease billows to Great Britain.

Rep. Taber.

Rep. Taber [R., N. Y.], ranking Republican member of the house appropriations committee, warned in an interview that he will press for limitation of lend-lease if the British do not cease interfering in American politics.

Taber denounced an official British government publication which made a direct bid among American soldiers landing in England for support of a fourth term for President Roosevelt. The bid for soldier votes was made in a British ministry of information publication welcoming American soldiers to Britain.

Boosted by British Papers.

Several British newspapers have boosted the fourth term during past weeks. These included the Yorkshire Post, which is considered the mouthpiece of Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and a Church of England publication.

These stirred congress, but not to the denunciations which followed disclosure that an official British government publication was propagandizing for the fourth term by charging that capitalists had amassed a 50 million dollar fund to defeat the President.

"It looks as if the British are trying to build a case for us to stop supporting them," Taber asserted. "If lend-lease funds are to be used to provide food for the British people and the proceeds which the British government collects from sale of this food are to be used to provide political propaganda to permit Britain to control our elections, then they are going to force a limitation on that appropriation."

Battle on Floor Possible.

It was thought the incident might provoke a floor fight when the new bill to extend the lend-lease act comes before congress, probably within the next two weeks. The act expires June 30.

Other congressional comment on the British information ministry's bid for votes included:

Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.]—We Americans never try to tell the British whom they should elect to office and never tell the Russians or Italians whom they should have as dictator, even tho we might have a preference. It seems to me the British would do well if they kept their noses out of American politics.

Sen. Nye [R., N. D.]—The British position is alarming, and their attitude seems to be becoming more possessive. It is an indication of a feeling that we are not going to do what they want done.

Rep. Short [R., Mo.]—The effort of the British to influence our elections is so brazen it's amazing.

Rep. Brown [R., O.]—American service men overseas are being given only one side of the story in the election year.

LT. FELDMAN SALUTES CHINESE FOR AID IN HIS 19 DAY ESCAPE

Lt. A. D. Feldman.

Lt. Abraham David Feldman, 23, a bombardier in the 14th air force in China, had to walk 19 days across Jap held territory to reach his base after he bailed out during an air battle, said a letter received yesterday by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Feldman, 4415 N. Central Park av.

Lt. Feldman, who had been listed as missing in action Jan. 19, said friendly Chinese assisted him at every turn of his journey. He also praised parachute manufacturers, in whom he said he "never had much confidence" until his parachute bore him safely to earth.

The flyer is a graduate of Roosevelt High school. He was employed by the Central Sheet Metal works, 160 N. Des Plaines st., before he joined the army air forces.

LT. A. F. LILIENTHAL, ILLINI FENCER AND NAVY PILOT, KILLED

Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Lilienthal, 533 Belmont av., were notified yesterday by the war department that their son, Lt. [j. g.] Albert Frederick Lilienthal, 24, pilot of a navy dive bomber, had been killed somewhere in the Pacific.

Lt. A. F. Lilienthal.

A recent letter from the lieutenant told his parents of a crash landing at sea, after which he and his radio man floated all night on a rubber raft before being picked up.

Lt. Lilienthal was graduated from Lake View High school, and from the University of Illinois, where he was fencing champion. He enlisted in the navy in August, 1941, and received his wings a year later at Pensacola, Fla. He was sent to Hawaii last March, after submarine patrol duty at Seattle.

Girl, 5, Found Injured on Railway, Loses Foot

Ruth Swanson, 5, of 1221 School st., was found on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railway tracks near Melrose st. and Racine av., yesterday with one foot so badly crushed, supposedly by a train, that it was amputated in the Illinois Masonic hospital. The child was too hysterical to explain how she was injured.

AN ATOLL RID OF JAPS LIKES U. S. 'CO-PROSPERITY'

Natives at Kwajalein Hail Emancipation.

BY HAROLD SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KWAJALEIN ISLANDS, Feb. 9 [Delayed].—Now that the shock of the Americans' violent arrival on Kwajalein has worn off, the Marshallese natives exhibit the same friendliness encountered in the Gilberts, where Jap subjection dates back only two years. To understand this it should be emphasized the islands have been ruled by Spain, Germany, and Japan—since their discovery.

Soon after the war's outbreak in 1914 a Jap expeditionary force took over here. The Japs began their civil administration on April 1, 1922, under the Versailles treaty. After the Jap withdrawal from the league of nations, white entry was discouraged, and in 1938 all three island groups were closed completely to Europeans.

No Whites on Islands.

Thus, when we arrived Jan. 31, it was the first time in more than five years that whites could value the recent Jap engineered changes. On none of the atolls we've taken was any white person found. The best information from natives indicated the Japs sent all whites to atolls removed from military installations. It is recalled the three Muller brothers [Marshalls born Germans, found on Makin Island when we seized the Gilberts], had been sent there by the Japs.

Natives said they feared our coming because the Japs had warned them we would torture them. Even when treated kindly, the natives at first refused food, fearing poison. Then some bold leader ate and failed to die. Thenceforward, all pitched into the GI rations.

Relish American Food.

With Maj. F. A. Thompson, former St. Paul, Minn., physician, the writer stood at the chow line on Ennylabegan Island for the feeding of 60 native men, women, and children gathered from the various islands. Their white teeth flashed as man sized portions of canned salmon, creamed potatoes, canned peas, spinach, peach halves, graham crackers, and synthetic lemonade gravitated past their adam's apples.

"They like everything but GI stew," Maj. Thompson said. "I guess that proves they're not so dumb." In a long, wooden, Jap built shed, where 40 natives were recovering from bombardment wounds, diminutive Elsie, 54, gave the clew to Jap unpopularity. Elsie formerly lived in the home of an American missionary ejected in 1939 and learned bookish but passable English from her.

"At least 80 per cent of my people are Christian," she said. "Long ago Japs told us Jesus left the island and would not come back. They just try convert us to their strange faith.

"But our people like Jesus—trust in God. Japanese make us work on Sunday. We did not like. We just sorry. They use our churches to store rice. Last Christmas they keep us from church, but we go by ourselves to hiding place Christmas eve and sing.

Tells of Japs' Propaganda.

"I don't know how to live with Jap to talk with them. I'm used to whites. Japs do not know about Jesus. They have not heard about our heavenly Father.

"Japanese told us whites do not like black skin and will kill us. First my people feared you, but now they like you and will give you anything they own. We are very glad you came." Elsie said the Japs paid for labor in Japanese money, but it would buy only rice and the natives preferred their own food—breadfruit, coconut, papaya, taro, fish, chicken, and port. Our military made a hit by rustling up muslin for native dress material, togging the males out in government issue fatigues.

Both she and Brown Smith, 58, chief petty officer of the Fiji naval voluntary reserve, a Jaluit born Marshallese interpreter and pilot, said the Japs long since curtailed native fishing, and in recent months commandeered the native catches because of the food shortage. Smith criticized the Japs as "too rough—all time take stuff no pay."

The Marshall natives are very similar in appearance and manner to the Gilbertese but have quite a different language and wear European clothing, reflecting the missionary influence.

U.S. Destroyers Bombard Enemy Bases Near New Guinea

shot down. The raiders lost four planes.

This air and naval blasting of shipping at Rabaul and the naval blows at Kavieng added to the disaster wrought Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday just northwest of Kavieng on a 17 ship convoy rushing supplies to those two bases. Fifteen of those ships—12 merchantmen, a destroyer, and two corvettes—were wiped out in repeated attacks by Catalinas, Liberators, and Mitchells.

On some of the Green islands, which Americans and New Zealanders invaded Tuesday to cut off supplies to 22,000 Japanese on other islands to the south, some ground fighting continues. A spokesman said today that our forces on Sirot Island, one of the Green group, moved Wednesday and Thursday against a small group of Japanese, driving them toward the southern tip. The allies sustained light casualties.

On the coast of New Guinea, along the approach to Madang, mopping up patrols south of Saidor reported finding 340 enemy dead. The Japanese made light attacks 10 miles west of Saidor Wednesday night and early Thursday, but were repulsed.

AMERICAN LEND-LEASE KEEPS NEW ZEALAND WITHIN ITS BUDGET

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Feb. 19.—Lend-lease aid is keeping New Zealand within its war budget, figures on national finances for the nine months to Dec. 31 show.

Lend-lease supplies were valued at 85 million dollars at current exchange rates, almost as much as the whole war time taxation yield of 89 millions and 14 per cent of all war spending.

In the same period lend-lease was almost triple the war aid received by this country from Britain under the 1939 agreement. The latter totaled 31 million dollars. Virtually the whole balance of the war budget was financed by loans.

Report Allies Evacuating 18,000 Italians from Anzio

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The allied radio at Algiers said today in a broadcast recorded by CBS that the allies had "begun the evacuation of the 18,000 Italian civilians from the Anzio beachhead in order to bring them outside the range of the bombardment."

DYING ILLINOIS YANK SIGNALS; SAVES PATROL

CAPE GLOUCESTER, New Britain [Delayed]—(AP).—A combat patrol of marines walked warily along the jungle trail, leading thru the foothills. Above them was volcanic Talawe and beyond was Tangi, mighty mountains.

The men walked slowly scanning the trees for camouflaged snipers. In the lead was Cpl. Jack E. Williams, known as "Black Jack," the patrol's scout and well trained in brush craftsmanship. Cpl. Williams, tal, blond, and 225 pounds, was the 22 year old son of Mrs. Rachel Williams of Canton, Ill. A machine gun burst sprayed the trail. The well camouflaged Japanese ambush had been exploded prematurely.

"It all happened in the twinkling of an eye," Cpl. Jim Kaissee of Norwood, O., said later. "We were running up to where Black Jack had fallen. He was out of sight of the Jap machine gun now, but he saw us and he raised up and waved us back. The Japs saw him raise up, too. The machine gun opened up on him again, this time for keeps. When he signaled us he saved our lives, and the lives of a lot of others as well."

LUCK PLAYS BIG PART IN BATTLE, SAYS SPRUANCE

Have to Figure It's Going to Be Bad.

ADVANCED NAVAL BASE IN MARSHALLS, Feb. 11 [Delayed]—(AP).—Lessons learned at Tarawa in the Gilberts are saving many American lives in the Marshalls campaign, says the nation's newest and youngest nominee for full admiral—Raymond A. Spruance.

The 58 year old commander of the mightiest battle fleet in history attributed success of the whirlwind Kwajalein operation to painstaking preparation blessed by favorable breaks and a strong element of surprise.

Interviewed aboard his flagship, Spruance said:

"Credit should go to many men, and not one; and to all arms of the service. It wasn't a one weapon show.

Chance Plays Part.

"If we don't have infantrymen the objective cannot be taken. Infantrymen cannot reach their objective without ships, and ships can't be sure of getting there without aircraft. From experience gained at the Gilberts we laid more ammunition on our targets before landings were made. We gained a great area at a relatively low cost of 300 lives.

"One of these amphibious operations is the most complicated in warfare. The element of chance is bound to play a big part in its successful execution. We have to play it as if we were going to have bad luck. We have no business going into an operation unless we can steamroller our way thru if it becomes necessary."

Surprise Is Vital.

The Central Pacific commander called it a fluke of tide which laid the reef shelving bare for more than two days during the marine landing at Tarawa. That was a case, he pointed out, where it was necessary to fight thru on sheer power.

"This time," the admiral said, "we gained a great deal from the element of surprise. The Japs expected us to hit them from the logical direction of Pearl Harbor. We didn't. I don't believe the enemy knew where we were until we hit them. The enemy didn't know for two days after all-out air attacks began where our landings were to take place. By that time it was too late. Their air power was gone and their fields neutralized.

"Fog of war is a military expression, and I imagine the Japanese commanders had a lot of it this time. Their communications broke down. They could see and report only from their own atoll, and it is a very confusing picture from that perspective."

U. S. SUBMARINES SINK 13 SHIPS; BRITISH ADD 19

Penetrate Far Into Japanese Seas.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—Allied submarines, ranging from Japanese waters to the Atlantic, Mediterranean, and the southeast Asia area, have sunk 32 enemy vessels, probably six more, and damaged eight others.

Thirteen of the vessels were Japanese merchantmen, which were sent to the bottom by two American submarines. For the first time, in announcing the sinkings today, the navy disclosed the general areas covered—"deep in Japanese empire waters."

Big Ships Included.

This seemed to indicate that the strength and ability of the submarine fleet has grown to such an extent that the Japanese have full knowledge it is operating regularly along the shores of Japan itself, penetrating mine fields and evading anti-submarine patrols on the surface.

1,844 Toll of Jap Ships.

The extent to which those merchant craft have been battered by allied forces is shown in the total of 1,844 Japanese ships of all types that have been reported sunk, probably sunk or damaged by submarines, airplanes, and surface craft. Of that total, 968 enemy craft of all types have been sunk, 99 probably sunk and 777 damaged.

The British admiralty announced that the sinking of 19 additional enemy ships, probable sinking of six others and damaging of eight more occurred "in theaters of war extending from the Arctic circle to the eastern limits of the Indian ocean."

The sunken vessels included the largest types of supply vessels, the admiralty said.

REDS ADD 10,200 NAZI TROOPS TO TOLL AT KORSUN

Capture 130 Communities in 3-Way Pskov Drive.

LONDON, Feb. 20 [Sunday]—(AP).—The Russians last night said they not only had killed or captured 73,200 Germans in the 14 day battle of the Korsun trap but had seized an immense armory of Nazi equipment, including 10,000 trucks, 618 guns, and 116 tanks.

The announcement said 10,200 more Germans had been counted since figures on German losses in the Dnieper bend debacle were revealed Thursday. Among these were 3,000 dead, making a total of 55,000, and 7,200 additional prisoners for a total of 18,200.

At the same time the Moscow war report, recorded here by soviet radio monitor, said Russian forces in the north captured 130 more communities, including the rail station of Plyussa, 58 miles northeast of Pskov, in a three-way advance on that rail junction and gateway to the Baltic states.

More than 30 hamlets were reported taken by the Russians coming down the rail line from Luga on the way to Pskov. To the east, south of Lake Ilmen, the Russians captured over 100 populated places as they cleaned up the western shore of the lake between Shimsk and Staraya Russa. Towns 11 miles west and 21 miles southwest of Staraya Russa were reported taken.

Report General Slain.

In a statement broadcast immediately after the short daily war bulletin, Moscow said the German general, Wilhelm Stemmermann, commander of the encircled Nazi Eighth army troops, was among the dead in the Korsun trap in the Dnieper bend.

The Germans announced the close of a battle which they alone had announced as begun, for the Russians never have acknowledged it was in progress. The Germans termed this battle the "second defensive battle of Vitebsk.

GERMAN WAR REPORT

Of Russia, Germany's Saturday war bulletin, broadcast by Berlin, said:

"Near Krivoi Rog [Dnieper bend], the enemy has increased his pressure. His attacks, carried out thruout the day, were repulsed in hard and fluctuating fighting and breaches of some depth were checked at various points.

"Near Vitebsk [White Russia] our troops withstood an onslaught of more than 50 rifle divisions and numerous enemy tank detachments in stubborn fighting between Feb. 2-16. They have thus scored a new defensive victory in the second defensive battle which has now come to a conclusion.

"West of Cherkasi [upper Dnieper bend] numerous enemy counterattacks were repulsed in spite of the difficult terrain.

"Between Lake Ilmen and Lake Peipus and in the area of Narva [northern front] strong enemy attacks, supported by tanks and ground attack aircraft, were repulsed."

DIPLOMATS SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS FOR FINN TRUCE

BY JOHN H. COLBURN.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Feb. 19 (AP).—The delicate machinery needed to start the Finnish armistice negotiations with Russia rolled into motion slowly this week but at least 10 days are expected to pass before even the preliminary decisions are made to get Finland out of the war.

Diplomats tonight saw encouraging signs for agreement in the continued presence here of the Finnish diplomat, Juhu K. Paasikivi, who came to Stockholm for "private business"—but that private business was to see if he could negotiate with the soviet union.

Only an Armistice Seen.

From all the speculation and rumor two facts seemed to emerge quite clearly: only an armistice and not a peace will be negotiated; Finland will not accept unconditional surrender until its army is crushed.

The peace treaty between Finland and Russia is expected to be deferred until a peace is drafted for Europe after the defeat of Germany. Terms of the armistice probably have been discussed but the talks did not seem to have reached the stage of actual negotiation.

Flashback to 1940.

For a man who said he came to Stockholm to "read books," Paasikivi has been very busy, reading little except newspapers. I have talked to both Paasikivi and Mme. Alexandra Kollontay, veteran soviet minister to Sweden and diplomat extraordinary. For both of them the situation is a flashback to 1940, when preliminary contacts were made in Stockholm leading to an end of the winter war.

A Finnish legation source has said that Paasikivi saw Mme. Kollontay this week. He insisted to me, however, that he had not seen her and asked me about her health, she told me, "nothing is going on now." My impression is that indirect contacts were established thru a neutral source—and the United States is not the intermediary.

SOVIET JOURNAL CHARGES PEACE PLOTS BY NAZIS

Move to Split Allies Laid to Berlin.

BY HENRY C. CASSIDY.

MOSCOW, Feb. 19 (AP).—The soviet trade union journal, War and the Working Class, said today that Germany, employing "unofficial diplomacy and under-handed methods," was trying to make separate peace agreements to split the allies. The soviet magazine predicted failure of all such German efforts.

The main agents in this maneuver to escape the full burden of inevitable defeat, said the journal, are Franz von Papen and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht. Both held important government posts in pre-Hitler Germany and are well known in allied nations. Von Papen is now ambassador to Turkey and Dr. Schacht, a former president of the reichsbank, is reichsminister without portfolio.

Points to Intrigue.

Without referring directly to Pravda's recent publication of a Cairo rumor that German-British peace talks were under way, War and the Working Class, after naming Von Papen and Dr. Schacht, said:

"Of course, we cannot doubt the number of such ambassadors is much greater, but most likely the other participants in such intrigues remain in the dark for various reasons. . . .

"There is no doubt that under the conditions of the present World war, complete defeat will end the operations of the German war machine on the battlefield. Most likely this also will be the fate of all attempts of bandit Hitlerite diplomacy."

Declaring that the war front is "incessantly approaching the borders of the third reich," the magazine praised both present and future allied operations and particularly lauded the allied air bombardment of Germany.

Raps Finns and Rumanians.

The Finns and the Rumanians are now showing fear of invasion and will have to pay for past "crimes," the magazine said.

Another article directed hostile fire at the Spain of Generalissimo Franco, which, it said, had been established by Hitler and Mussolini.

In an article on post-war trade policies, the publication presented a hopeful outlook for soviet trade with the United States, Canada and Britain.

The soviet union will be an important seller as well as a buyer in the post-war world market, and trade must be based on "mutual trust and respect for laws and regulations existing among the partners," the magazine said.

TELLS HOW JAPS HAILED DEATH OF DOOLITTLE'S MEN

Wildly Applaud Movie of Blindfolded Flyers.

[Yin Tso is the assumed name of a 24 year old Chinese native of Manchukuo, one of the very few witnesses of events inside Japan to reach allied territory in recent months. He was a student in a Tokio university for three years. After graduation last summer he went to Japanese held Peking and from there made his way into free China, arriving a few days ago in Chungking. In the following article he tells of Japanese feelings toward Americans.]

BY YIN TSO.

CHUNGKING, Feb. 19 (AP).—In a Tokio theater near the Imperial palace I saw a packed house clap in a wild spontaneous burst of jubilant approval of a newsreel indicating that five of the American airmen who had bombed the Japanese capitol on April 18, 1942, had been put to death.

The newsreel, entitled "Punishment of American Pilots Who Bombed Tokio," consisted of three scenes. The first was a plane at an airdrome. Out stepped an American airman in a black jacket, his eyes blindfolded by a black cloth. He was led away by two soldiers holding him by the arms. The same thing happened to four others.

The second scene showed four of the airmen inside a speeding train, still blindfolded. There was nothing to indicate their destination.

The third and last scene depicted a stern faced officer of the ministry of war's information department reading a document. Slowly and carefully he read: "All American or British pilots who bomb Japan or territory under Japanese military occupation will be put to death if captured."

Hold U. S. No. 1 Enemy.

The Japanese regard America as enemy number one.

They deliberately mispronounce the word Yankee as "Yangkwe" meaning foreign devil, and in many Japanese publications the character for "dogs" follows all references to Americans.

The phrase "eat rice" is slightly mispronounced to become "eat American." "Let's eat Americans" is now a common phrase heard everywhere in Japan, sometimes accompanied by a pantomimic smacking of the lips, occasionally with a vengeful expression of determination.

A writer for the Tokio Asahi said American prisoners of war were haughty, insolent, and shamefully unresponsive to Japanese kindness. He illustrated his point by saying that in a prisoner of war camp in Japan a Japanese soldier had offered an American captive a cigaret.

"Why do you think I gave you this?" the Japanese soldier asked.

"Because," the American replied, "you hope that when American troops capture you they will give you a big fat cigar."

"Do you hate the Japanese?" his captors asked him.

"Very much," he replied.

"We are going to kill you unless you change your attitude," his captors threatened.

"I still hate you," the American answered.

This, said the Asahi in recounting the story, was only another evidence of the necessity for "destroying America."

The Japanese used to speak of the war against "Britain and America." Now they talk of "America and Britain." Their cartoonists, with more repetition than originality, delight in portraying droves of American and British prisoners, arms upraised in surrender and faces distorted with terror.

On the eighth day of every month the Japanese commemorate the outbreak of the Pacific war — it was on Dec. 8, 1941, according to Japanese time.

Ready for Water

U. S. aircraft carrier Shangri-la which will be launched Thursday at Portsmouth, Va.

Portsmouth, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—The aircraft carrier Shangri-la will be launched at the Norfolk navy yard here Feb. 24. Sponsor will be Mrs. James H. Doolittle, wife of Maj. Gen. Doolittle who, on April 18, 1942, led 16 United States army bombers in the first raid on Japan.

Mrs. Doolittle's only attendant will be Mary McClellan, who was chosen as flower girl to represent the navy yard employes. She is the daughter of a machine shop "lead man."

A 27,500 ton ship of the Essex class with modifications, the Shangri-la was built with money obtained in a nation-wide war bond and stamp campaign. Some 750,000 man days were required to build the new carrier, whose deadweight at launching will be 20,500 tons. After the raid on Japan President Roosevelt told newsmen the bombers took off from a secret base in "Shangri-la"—a fictitious site used in a book by Novelist James Hilton.

JAPS, WHO HAVE THE RUBBER, NOW SYNTHETIZE IT!

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—The Japanese, of all people, say they are making synthetic rubber on a large scale. The Japanese captured 90 per cent of the world's natural rubber supply in Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

Yet the Tokio radio boasts that synthetic rubber already is being manufactured in Japan in five plants "on a large scale," that it "excels natural rubber" and is made by a simpler method than that used in other countries—apparently by the acetylene process.

These broadcasts could mean that Jap shipping losses have been so heavy that enough rubber can no longer be brought from the southern regions.

STALIN'S REPLY WAITED ON NEW POLISH ISSUES

LONDON, Feb. 19 (AP).—Marshal Stalin's reply to Prime Minister Churchill on the latest Polish proposals for settling the Russo-Polish boundary dispute is being awaited as an indication of whether the Russians are willing to accept some compromise, or force complete submission of the London Polish government to soviet demands.

The Poles want all boundaries fixed on a temporary basis, with permanent frontiers to be established after the war.

Seek Post-War Basis.

It was said unofficially today that the Polish government had accepted the proposal of the Curzon line as the boundary, but with the areas east of the line to be regarded as logally and formally in dispute until after defeat of the Germans.

Observers believe Moscow will insist on acceptance of a modified Curzon line now, leaving the western border of Poland for post-war discussion, when the Poles would be given some parts of Germany.

U. S. Still Ready to Aid.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—A hint from President Roosevelt that the United States is keeping its diplomatic door open for settlement of differences between Poland and Russia was made public today by Rep. Mruk [R., N. Y.].

The President wrote Mruk that "our government . . . will not rest in its efforts to free all victims of aggression and to establish a just and enduring peace based on the Sovereign equality of all peace loving states, large and small."

JAP PUSH HALTS BRITISH ADVANCE IN BURMA: LANZA

Foe May Force Withdrawal of 15 to 20 Miles.

[This is the first of two articles analyzing the war in southeast Asia and in Russia.]

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

The border between Burma and India is a mountainous one, and just about 1,000 miles long. In this long stretch there are only four routes between the two countries. The most important one is along the Burma coast in the province of Arakan.

Across this route a British army has been confronting the Japanese for nearly two years. During this time there has been little change in the positions of the contending forces. The country is a difficult one for maneuvering. There are many estuaries and creeks close to the shore, and hills and mountains a short distance inland. The country is covered with jungle, which is infested with insect pests; the climate is hot and damp, and a large part of the territory has a disagreeable odor.

Supply Not Easy.

British supplies from India move along the road parallel to the coast. Altho it is being gradually improved, it is not yet a first class road. It has numerous bridges, but if one is gone it is difficult to detour around it in the jungle. Motor transportation is used as much as possible, but mules, donkeys, elephants and buffaloes are all employed. They are aided by native pack bearers. With all these methods, supply has not been easy.

Until recently the frontier zone was relatively quiet. Only occasional patrol activities occurred. Last month the British began to increase the number and size of their patrols. They made bigger raids. For the first time tanks were used in this sector. More artillery was employed, and did a lot of shooting.

On Jan. 23 the British organized their Burma front forces into the 14th army and placed Gen. George Giffard in command. He seems to have speeded up things on all four routes into Burma. On the coastal route the British attacked the Japanese left around Maungdaw by daily small advances. They made headway.

Japs Strike Back.

Japanese statements have interpreted this revival of activity as indicating that the British were about to start the long threatened invasion of Burma. They decided to seize the initiative and launch an attack themselves.

On Feb. 4 the Japanese started an offensive on the Mayu river near the center of the British front. This river runs southeast and is nearly parallel to the coast. The lower part is an estuary of the sea.

The Japanese attack appears to have been in considerable strength. The Japs got thru the British lines. A part of them then turned to the right and advanced north on the west side of the Mayu river, in the rear of the British lines.

While this fight was on, a second Japanese force made a wide detour around the north end of the British left. It must have started some days before. From the Japanese point of view, the movements of their two forces were well planned.

Jap Forces Join.

The two Jap forces then started toward one another in the rear of the British lines. One force moved north and the other south. On Feb. 6 they joined and seized a bridge on the British main supply road. There they planted themselves and stopped food, ammunition, and supplies from getting forward. At last reports they were still hanging on.

Of course, these Japs were attacked by the British, who must reopen the supply or quit in this area.

The British are hoping that the Japs, who are themselves surrounded, or believed to be, will die of starvation, or else that their ammunition will give out.

The result of this campaign is that the British advance has been suspended. If the Japs in the British rear can stay where they are long enough, they may force the British line back, say 15 or 20 miles. This would be nearly a repetition of a somewhat similar situation which arose a year ago.

BRITISH FLYERS BOMB MANDALAY RAILWAY YARDS

NEW DELHI, India, Feb. 19 (AP).—British heavy bombers made a successful attack on Mandalay last night, blasting railway yards and other targets and leaving fires which returning pilots said were visible 50 miles away, an allied bulletin said today. Medium bombers attacked Hehl air field and the town of Myingyan, 60 miles southeast of Mandalay.

American bombers continued their attacks on Japanese troops, supply depots, and communication lines in northern Burma, destroying rolling stock and starting fires.

Allied troops pressing to clear the Ngakyedauk pass thru the Mayu mountain range in Arakan met bitter enemy resistance. The Japanese launched several sharp attacks against British positions at the southeast end of the pass Wednesday night but were thrown back with losses.

Getting Up Nights Makes Many Feel Old Too Soon

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles.

Worry, Colds, working too hard, or overeating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Seventeen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

3 Day Trial Offer

To prove that Cystex may be the very medicine you need make this fair-play trial offer: Get a three-day supply of Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c. MANY AREAS HIT HARD IN NAZIS' BIG LONDON RAID

Several Dozen Are Killed; Large Fires Set.

LONDON, Feb. 19 (AP).—Widespread damage was found in half a dozen districts of London today after waves of German bombers dropped tons of explosives and incendiaries in their strongest bid to set the capital ablaze since the all-out attacks of 1940-41.

Several dozen persons were killed in last night's raid, in which the Germans may have used as many as 150 planes.

With the dawn London began to assess its damage. The bombs hit at least three churches, two hospitals, a convent, an old folks' home, school buildings, stores, dwellings and other buildings. Fires ringed the city, lighting the horizon, but all were under control by morning.

Hunt Trapped Victims.

Dozens of injured were taken to hospitals and rescuers dug in the debris thruout the day seeking many believed to be still trapped.

The first unofficial reports of German planes shot down by ground defenses came from a district where American gun crews were in action and claimed five raiders destroyed.

Berlin said only five planes were lost from a force of several hundred bombers which "caused extensive fires and destruction."

The German news agency DNB said that "no comment is available in competent quarters of the reich capital as to the question of whether this new attack is a prelude to the future battle of London."

Save 60 at Old Folks' Home.

One bomb demolished the wing containing the women's wards at an old people's home housing 550 persons. At least nine persons were killed. Sixty persons were taken from the wreckage alive.

Nine persons were trapped in a burning building in one district and hope was abandoned that they would be brought out alive. A building accommodating 500 refugees from Gibraltar was badly damaged, but no one was injured. A convent escaped serious damage, altho an adjoining church was set ablaze. Two babies were born in one damaged hospital while flames were at their height.

It was the fourth attack in eight nights but the first since Feb. 13 and it broke the longest lull in weeks in the European air war. Allied bombers have been inactive since the Feb. 15 R. A. F. blow against Berlin—history's greatest assault. There was no official disclosure that Britain-based daylight raiders were out today.

Hear Mobilization Drains Reich of Catholic Priests

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 19.—The International Christian Press and Information service in Geneva reports tonight that the growing burdens of war are imposing increasing sacrifices on Roman Catholics in Germany. Organization of Roman Catholic priests for war service, it says, has brought about a shortage for regular pastoral work. Of the 18,379 pastoral posts which existed in 1943 thruout the Reich 5,953 now are unoccupied owing to mobilization.

GERMANS CHARGE SISTINE CHAPEL 'PLOT' TO ALLIES

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Nazi Transkontinent agency, which serves the controled press of central Europe and the Balkans by wireless from Vienna, reported tonight that a time bomb had been found in the famed Sistine chapel in Rome and said it was part of a "plot" by the allies and "Communists."

The German language propaganda dispatch, datelined Rome, and reported by United States government monitors, said the alleged bomb was found by Swiss guards in "one of the old chests in the vestry Thursday afternoon, and was timed to explode that night."

No such incident has been reported by any other source.

NAZI TRAVELER TELLS OF RUINED GERMAN CITIES

MADRID, Feb. 19 (AP).—Eight days ago a German who must be called Hans Schmidt, because Hans says it's healthier that way, left Berlin for Spain by train. Here is the story of his trip in his own words:

"What Berlin looks like now, the world knows. There are more ruins than inhabited houses, more government buildings evacuated than still functioning.

"It is not hard for the German authorities to realize that the stomach of a German has lots to do with morale. Berliners, even thru the bombings, have been getting the food their ration cards call for, and have been getting it regularly. It is not much, naturally, but the rations have not been much for a long time and Berliners are accustomed to that. The important thing is that what is due them, they get.

Hundreds Leave City.

"When I went to the station—which, by the way, is more ruin than station—I found a weekly batch of 300 women, 50 babies, and 250 children sent to Koenigsberg in East Prussia, with hundreds of other Berliners being evacuated on the usual daily special trains.

"No sooner had I found my seat, reserved for weeks in advance, than the Gestapo men came for examination of my papers and travel passes. Their work was made a lot more difficult by the allies, who drop blank travel passes along with bombs, but this examination was so thoro that I thought it most likely would be the worst.

"I was wrong. From Berlin to the Spanish frontier Gestapo agents examined papers and cross-questioned me and all my fellow travelers exactly 51 times. I spent hours waiting to be examined.

"The train went thru Halle, Kassel, and Cologne. I never have seen more complete and thoro demolition and destruction than those cities.

Dessau Also Wrecked.

"Dessau was a wreck, too. The Siemens-Halske and Siemens-Schuckert plants seemed 75 per cent destroyed. The Leuna chemical works at Halle were smashed to rubble. In Kassel the only two buildings I saw standing were reinforced concrete anti-aircraft towers.

"The trip to the French frontier was uneventful, except for the devastation I saw from the windows and the constant fear of air attack.

"Once we entered France there was a new worry—sabotage. But we arrived safely in Paris and left immediately on the trip toward Bordeaux. The constant examinations and cross-questionings increased.

"A man and a woman entered our compartment and questioned us in a friendly, confidential way like fellow travelers, but after they left at one of the way stations the Gestapo called out one German whose answers to the couple had been a little frank.

Questioning Goes On.

"Before we reached Bordeaux what everybody feared came. The anti-aircraft batteries on the flat car of the train opened fire. Everybody hit the aisles and tried to crawl under the seats. An allied plane attacked with machine guns, but missed the locomotive. A number of passengers were injured.

"The last day of the trip was the hardest, for the constant police questioning in the presence of Gestapo men among the fellow travelers as we approached Bordeaux and before we reached the Spanish frontier meant tremendous pressure on even the most innocent travelers.

"Those who finally crossed the frontier were exhausted mentally and physically, as if we had finished a five months' walk from Berlin instead of a five day ride."

KNIFE WIELDING GURKHAS STAGE BIZARRE BATTLE

Storm Cassino Hills in Eerie Light of Moon.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, Feb. 19.—In the eerie light of a winter moon, there was fought at 4 a. m. today, one of the most bizarre battles of the allied drive to smash the German line across Italy.

High in the Apennine mountains, swarthy Gurhkas from India engaged the Germans in hand-to-hand combat. Their battle ground and the prize for which these Indians and Nazis struggled were the crests west of Monte Cassino. The swarthy ones are dreaded warriors who fight at close quarters with curved knives.

Flashes Light Valley.

The entire Rapido river valley was almost as bright as day. From vantage points on the hillsides the flashes of American and British guns reflected against the dull sky.

As plain were the sheets of flame where the shells were landing on the German positions on the forward slopes of the hills a couple of miles away.

The enemy replied with shells directed at our batteries, adding to the din and the confusion as well as the lighting effects. And the Germans repeatedly hurled bright flare clusters into the air along the Rapido river and Highway No. 6, which leads to Rome.

Other shells came like rockets from behind the enemy lines, leaving wide flashing trails of sparks and flame across the sky and landing with blood chilling explosions on all sides.

Sleep Is Impossible.

Sleep was impossible. The ground shook and seemed to heave convulsively. Onlookers merely could cling to their rocky crags.

Under cover of the night the Indian troops climbed five hours on their hands and knees to reach the summit of the hills west of the battered Benedictine monastery.

For communication they carried separate sections of a radio set as well as guns, rations, and ammunition. They launched their attack before dawn. Down one hill and into a shallow draw they plunged and then up the steep heights.

They went in with grenades and tommy guns, according to a British officer. When their ammunition was gone, out came their legendary kukris with their scythelike blades. Their sanguinary custom requires that once the blade is out it must draw blood before being sheathed again.

Gurkhas Are Wild Tribesmen.

The Gurkhas spring from the wild tribes of the border between India and Tibet and are grim looking, slender muscled men, strongly disciplined and wearing turbans along with the regular British uniform.

After one strong action they reported to their officers that many enemy soldiers were entrenched with rifles and machine guns. The Nazis succeeded in holding them off today with the fire from these weapons.

American and German artillery thundered thruout the day, filling the valley with smoke and noise. This is the first day since Tuesday that the Mount Cassino abbey has not been bombed by American and British planes. The ancient building has been reduced to a pile of stones and wreckage in three successive days of bombing preceding the present attack.

AVIATION BOARD TIGHTENS CADET SCREENING TEST

Seeking better air crews to fly and fight improved planes the army air forces are getting, aviation cadet procurement boards are screening youths more closely before they are assigned for specialized training. No longer, said Lt. Col. Lauris M. Eek, air liaison officer of the 6th service command, will college training be promised.

Under the new recruiting system, youths and their parents will be informed fully of the opportunities in the air forces, but not all 17 year old reservists who can qualify for the aviation cadet training program will be selected for training as pilots, navigators and bombardiers.

Hereafter large numbers will be trained as gunners and will attend technical schools rather than colleges. This does not mean, Col. Eek said, that thousands more will not be commissioned. It does mean that every effort will be made to place a youth in the training for which he is best fitted.

The air forces now afford virtually the only opportunity left for a commission in the army. Other branches of the service have all the officers they need and there still remains a large pool of men without assignment. For this reason many older men are being placed on inactive status or retired.

Hero Claims Bride

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Sgt. Jack Hand and Miss Rosemary Curran at marriage license bureau.

Staff Sgt. Jack Hand, 21, of Miami Fla., a marine veteran of the battles of Guadalcanal, Munda, and Bougainville in the South Pacific, and Miss Rosemary Curran, 19, of 1310 Winona st., obtained a marriage license yesterday in the county building. They announced their marriage was to follow immediately in the Country Church of the City, Granville and Lakewood avs. The couple met in Miami, Fla., six years ago, they said.

Sgt. Hand, wearing the decorations he had won in heavy fighting in the South Pacific, said he had had many narrow escapes but never was wounded.

PURSE STOLEN IN OFFICE.

Mrs. Rose Conway, 6527 Greenview av., reported to police yesterday that, while she was absent from the office where she works, at 85 W. Harrison st., some one stole her purse containing several dollars and a check for $23. The empty purse was found later at the rear of 626 Federal st.

10 MILE MARCH? A PIECE OF CAKE IN INVASION TEST

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AN AMERICAN TRAINING BASE, Somewhere in England, Feb. 19.—If you stood in the shade, the wind knifed thru your jacket, wool shirt, and long handled underwear. But after a week of thick clouds and steady rain the sun swept down from a clear sky today, making it ideal for training and the men appreciated it.

Dull days usually are reflected in the spirits of soldiers. Today, the sunlight and wine tanged air seemed to give zip to soldiers performing routine training maneuvers which must have seemed like old stuff. It wasn't spectacular, but it was basic.

"Right now we are concentrating on small unit training," said Regimental Comdr. Lt. Col. Jeff Seitz who calls Lake Forest, Ill., his home since his wife moved there from Winnetka, "and it will, we hope, help develop leadership among the squad, section, and platoon leaders at the same time we are training men how to advance and stay alive."

In Thick Woodlands.

We were in woods so thick you could only see a few yards thru the trees. Nature still wore subdued winter clothes but was beginning to daub her old face with a few splashes of spring. Near the chow line lay a bed of tiny yellow flowers like crocuses peeping thru dried grass and intermingled with dainty snowdrops. Some already had been crushed under the clumping galoshes of soldiers more interested in food than aesthetics.

They had marched 10 fast miles carrying full pack to get there but the men were in good shape, none of them even breathing hard. Pvt. David G. Maxwell of Oregon, Ill., grinned when I asked him about it. He said, "this is just a piece of cake. You should see us knock off a 20 mile march."

A smile of satisfaction spread over the face of an old friend, the battalion commander, Lt. Col. John T. Corley of Boston, Mass., or "John T. for Thomas" as we used to know him. John T. for Thomas' brick red face was alight with enthusiasm. He thumped his chest and said, "my guys are tough. They're good, too." John T. for Thomas had a right to do a Tarzan act. If he had been in dress uniform his coat would have borne the ribbons of as many combat decorations as any ground force officer.

Maneuver Thru Trails.

His men moved off thru the woods by platoons and companies, taking staggered columns along the sides of the trails and keeping well within the tree shadow. They were presumed to be taking up positions to cut roads leading to a town just taken from a German regiment. Every now and then the forward patrols would signal, columns would melt behind cover and then resume the advance lugging rifles, mortars, or machine guns. I followed along with one company.

"Get him! There he goes!"

Only he was a she. The column had flushed a startled doe which bounded thru our ranks, her white puff ball tail bobbing. Pvt. Raymond Tervo of Plummer, Minn., lifted his rifle enviously in mock fire. Under our feet a frightened rabbit took off thru the underbrush. The whole woods seemed alive with game, as indeed the entire division area is. Too much so, in fact. The general has issued an order forbidding any soldier to shoot game with his weapons. Too many farmers have been complaining of lost pheasants, too many British shooting parties startled by carbine slugs cutting down the quarry.

The column pushed on, sliding along hedges, darting across roads one man at a time, then taking up good positions along high ground and the problem was over. John T. for Thomas smiled. Col. Seitz smiled, smacking his trousers with a swagger stick. Another day of invasion training had ended.

201,150 TONS OF JAP SHIPS SUNK BY CHINA FLYERS

CHUNGKING, China, Feb. 19 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the 14th United States air force, announced today that his airmen had sunk 201,150 tons of enemy shipping from Oct. 1, 1943, to date. The announcement listed 38,700 tons as probably sunk and 80,250 tons damaged. In addition, 214 small boats, four gun boats, two tugs and four barges were destroyed.

Declaring it had been his "conviction for many years that China was the logical place for defeating Japan," Chennault said he was in accord with Adm. Chester W. Nimitz' plan to drive across the Pacific and land air and ground forces on the China coast.

"China must be used in the final defeat of Japan," the general emphasized.

Dunham Avers Failure to Act Forced Hand.

BY GORDON SCHENDEL.

President Dunham of the park district yesterday charged that his action in his controversy with the Back of the Yards Neighborhood council had been "forced" by Bishop Bernard J. Sheil's "failure to fulfill his promise" to end the council's three and one-half year occupation of the Davis Square park fieldhouse.

Dunham's charge was made in reply to a statement Friday by Bishop Sheil in which the bishop deplored the controversy as an unfortunate issue which, he said, may affect adversely the welfare of thousands of children.

"The park commissioners agree that the controversy is 'deplorable' and 'unfortunate,'" Dunham said. "However, the bishop could have avoided the entire controversy.

Promise Broken, He Charges.

"Last June I called on him and pointed out the seeming impropriety of the council's occupancy of the Davis Square fieldhouse and its absorption of the time and attention of Joseph B. Meegan, the park supervisor. He then assured me that if he were permitted to handle the matter he would terminate the situation both as to the occupancy and the dual service of our park supervisor. He forced the park action in December by his failure to fulfill his promised action and result."

Asserting that "Bishop Sheil failed to comment on the two main issues in the controversy," Dunham listed them as:

1. Is it proper to permit a private welfare agency to occupy a public building, constructed, maintained, and operated from public tax funds?
2. Is it proper for a public employe, paid from public tax funds, to devote his time and interest to promoting the activities of a private welfare agency?

Questions Bishop's Statement.

Dunham questioned Bishop Sheil's statement that the yards council had reduced the delinquency and infant mortality rates in the "back of the yards" district.

"The park district had used its parks and their facilities thruout the entire city to directly minimize juvenile delinquency for 30 years before the council was conceived, and will continue its strenuous efforts," he said. "As to reducing infant mortality, that credit belongs to Chicago's health department and the Infant Welfare society.

"The welfare of thousands of children always is uppermost in the minds of the commissioners, who aim to give service to all the children and not a selected few."

Asserts Only Half Told.

Dunham said the people have been told only half of the facts of the controversy. He promised that "when they understand why the council now sponsors 61 lunch programs scattered all over the city, compared with only seven programs last June, the conclusion will be inevitable that a purpose other than children's welfare inspires Saul Alinsky."

Saul Alinsky, 35, the "man behind the scenes" in the Back of the Yards Neighborhood council, reputedly directs its maneuvers from his Michigan av. suite of offices.

BLOWS AGAINST DICTATOR SEEN IN BRITISH VOTE

Democracy Upheld, Say London Papers.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 19.—West Derbyshire has voted for democracy and against dictatorship, said an editorial in the Sunday Pictorial, referring to the defeat this week of the Conservative party candidate in the by-election there. C. F. White, son of a cobbler and an independent, defeated the 26 year old marquess of Hartington, son of a duke, 16,336 to 11,775. The marquess was supported by Prime Minister Churchill.

"The result of the by-election in Derbyshire is a warning that the people cannot be fooled even by a man whom they trust most," the Pictorial asserted. "It is a declaration that the people won't compromise the democracy for which they are fighting. It is an indication of the rebirth of popular political understanding."

"Warning to Labor Party."

It also said the rank and file "are sick of the coalition, and Labor ministers have had a definite warning . . . if the Labor party fails now, the one hope for the common people will be that a new party of greater courage, greater vision, and greater faith will arise."

The conservative Sunday Times, in an editorial on the by-elections, declared, "It is plain that party discipline is in some districts breaking up. . . . We have often said that such developments as these, if unchecked, must be fatal to the coalition government. The truth of that may soon be demonstrated."

Reveals Tories Warned.

Results in West Derbyshire come as a "surprise and shock" to the government, says the ultra-Tory Daily Telegraph.

The liberal News-Chronicle takes the view that the electors are "fed up with the political truce and 'dictation' from London."

The Daily Herald, labor organ, says "there has been an immense swing to the left thruout the British community" and blames the government for a lack of urgency and decision in post-war planning.

White's victory was described by the Daily Mail as a "victory of the independence of British thought" and asserts "Churchill should lead the nation and not descend to what appears to be party politics."

He urged all Americans to observe it by donating to the relief agency's 1944 minimum war fund need of 200 million dollars.

ARGENTINA GIVES DETAILS OF JAP, NAZI SPY RINGS

Names German General as Head of One Group.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Feb. 19 (AP).—Shortly after a federal police report named Gen. Friedrich Wolff, German military attache, as the leader of an espionage organization in Argentina, the undersecretariat of information and the press announced that he would not be subject to trial and had been released from house arrest so that he could be repatriated.

[It was the order confining Wolff to his home that led to a German protest which precipitated a palace revolution ousting Foreign Minister Gen. Alberto Guilbert on Feb. 15.]

The police report said that three axis espionage organizations were working in Argentina. It named Wolff as the leader of one ring.

Report U. S. Data Cleared.

German espionage in America, the police report explained, was divided into east and west coast sections. The information which the spies collected was said to include the news on the development of the United States war effort, military organization, armament, production of ships and planes, and political and economic information relating to all the American countries and particularly the United States.

In addition to Wolff, the Japanese naval attache, Rear Adm. Katsumi Yukishita, and his assistant, Capt. Tadashi Kameda, also were released from house arrest and will not be subject to trial, the undersecretariat said. Explaining the reason for this action the government agency said:

"Keeping in mind the progress of the investigation and the fact that the freedom of the trio at the present time will not affect its development, considering the diplomatic character of these persons and also that the facts now proven were committed before the rupture of diplomatic relations, it was decided today to lift this measure while means were provided to insure their leaving the country and the obtaining of safe conducts necessary to their repatriation."

Chilean Woman Named.

The report gave the names of Argentines, Spaniards, a German and a Russian who, it said, were implicated in espionage activities. Also named was a Chilean, Gertrudis Hostovsky de Schlosser, 23, wife of Herbert Schlosser, one of the German suspects.

The police said Schlosser and his wife acted as spies in another South American country and came to Argentina five months ago to study wireless.

Among disclosures in the investigation, police cited a plan by Gen. Wolff to bring axis agents to the Argentine coast from a submarine which also would carry material for espionage activities. Wolff's men were said to have leased a big ranch in Mar Del Plata Sud as a landing place.

News Agencies Accused.

The German news agencies, DNB and Transocean, were charged with taking part in espionage activities in Argentina.

The federal police announced that a supplementary report would be issued within two weeks when additional details of German espionage activities would be published. Within three days, police said, a separate report will be released on Japanese espionage.

Receipts for expenditures were found and were described as showing that the German organization worked with "unlimited resources."

Referring to the method of transmitting information to Germany, the police report said: "It is necessary to point out the important role played in this respect by the crews of ships sailing under neutral flags."

The report mentioned several alleged agents who appeared to be employes of the German Bayer chemical firm. Others were said to have belonged to the Spanish falange.

Capt. Ambrose Elected Again by G. A. R. Group

Capt. Thomas Ambrose of 4355 Drexel blvd. again was chosen commander of the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial association at its first 1944 meeting, held at 85 E. Randolph st. last night. As a result he will be grand marshal of the Memorial day parade for the sixth consecutive year. Because Memorial day this year falls on a Tuesday and the association desires that its observance not interfere with war production, arrangements for the parade were deferred until the next meeting at 8 p. m. March 18.

Chicago Area Navigators in Pacific

In 5th Air Force

Lt. Marshall G. Solomon, 25, was a laboratory technician before going into the air forces Aug. 17, 1942. The son of Dr. S. I. Solomon, 2908 Addison st., the young officer was graduated from Roosevelt High school and Wright Junior college. He married Miss Virginia F. Fox on Oct. 25, 1941, and the couple make their home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Fox, 2140 Cornelia av. The flyer, who has been overseas since last August, met his brother, Tech. Sgt. Norman Solomon, in the Southwest Pacific area.

A graduate of Morton High school and junior college, Lt. Frank C. Reynolds, 28, was a clerical employe of the navy department in Washington, D. C., before becoming an army air force cadet in April, 1924. He too, went overseas last August. Recently he wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Reynolds, 2733 Grove av., Berwyn, that he had received his silver first lieutenant's bar at Christmas. Lt. Reynolds is single.

SPEAKER TELLS EFFECTS OF WAR ON FAMILY TIES

The war has had both a stabilizing and a demoralizing effect on family life, Dr. David M. Levy of New York City yesterday reported to the war emergency committee of the American Orthopsychiatric association at a session of the association's three day 21st annual meeting in the Palmer House.

The dangers and the hardships of the war in many cases have strengthened family ties, he said. He also cited examples of handicapped or long unemployed men who have regained their self-respect because the war boom gave them a chance to find work. He said many women benefitted by doing war work and freeing themselves from family situations that bred tensions in them.

On the other hand, Dr. Levy pointed out that the adolescent revolt against parental authority was speeded up by the present high earning power of teen-age boys and girls. Juvenile delinquency, he added, is likely to increase when the mother of a family accepts employment.

TRAIN KILLS WAR WORKER.
George Earl Taylor, 74, of Genoa City, Wis., was killed yesterday in Woodstock, McHenry county, when he stepped in front of a North Western passenger train after quitting work in a war plant.

LABOR IN BRITAIN FINDS MANY OF ITS JOBS MISSING

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Despite repeated government exhortations for increased man and woman power to speed war production, more than 76,000 able bodied men and women are lining up daily at Britain's labor exchanges for work, it was reported tonight.

This coincided with recent reports that during the past three months unemployment figures have increased by more than 4,000—many of them skilled war workers.

From all over the country, men and women who have been working in factories since the war began said they suddenly are finding themselves jobless.

"Sorry, we are not doing your special job here any more," they are told when they apply for work. "Go along to the labor exchange. They'll take your name and you'll be directed to a job in your own line at home or some other place."

The report added that sometimes the workers are forced to wait two or three days and often as long as two weeks.

In one factory near London the management reportedly waits each day for instructions on specialized jobs. Yet, almost daily men and, particularly, women are being fired.

"True, we've had to fire a good few," said a factory official, "but we always act on the ministry of supply and labor instructions. As the course of the war changes and weapons and methods become almost obsolete, changes have to be made."

Some workers, however, describe the firings in this particular factory as "wholesale" and "out of all reason."

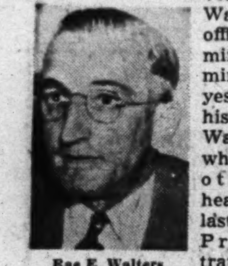
FOOD RATIONING CUTS IN OFFING, SAYS OPA CHIEF

Warns Germany's Defeat Means Terrific Drain.

Civilian prospects for food, tires, gasoline, and fuel oil are unfavorable, Rae E. Walters, regional office of price administration administrator, said yesterday upon his return from Washington, D.C., where he and other regional heads conferred last week with Price Administrator Bowles and his staff.



Rae E. Walters.

Walters predicted that if Germany is defeated this year, the food rations of American civilians will be reduced substantially late this year and next year because of the tremendous quantities of food that will be shipped abroad to feed the populations of liberated countries. He forecast lend-lease food shipments of "terrific" proportions which will be needed as the allies force axis armies out of conquered territory.

Rubber Production Lags.

Walters reported that motorists whose driving is nonessential will have "tough sledding" getting tires until synthetic rubber output is increased. Used and reclaimed rubber tires are becoming extremely scarce, he said.

The regional OPA administrator predicted that local ration board allotments of passenger car tires will be reduced soon, perhaps by March 1. He admitted there is a more acute tire shortage, including tires for trucks, than anticipated.

Walters attributed the unexpected shortage to increased military demands and lower production than originally anticipated. According to present estimates, there will be 18 to 22 million new tires produced this year, or no more than last year, he said.

Fuel Oil Crisis in East.

Indicating that he is not hopeful present gasoline allotments will be maintained, Walters said that the first cut in rationing probably will be felt by A book holders.

Walters disclosed that the fuel oil situation in the east has become "very, very tight," and that industrial users there are now limited to a 10 day supply.

Ex-Convict Returns East to Face Draft Charge

Albert Di Stefano, 37, a New York ex-convict known as Al the Barber, waived extradition yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on a charge of failing to report to his New York draft board for a medical examination Sept. 17. Di Stefano also is wanted for the $4,000 robbery of a Jersey City [N. J.] restaurant and as a parole violator in New York.

50 Varieties Shown

The second annual azalea show, including approximately 1,550 plants in 50 varieties, is open now in Garfield park conservatory. About 350 species of the azalea, or rhododendron, are known, and there are many forms and varieties. Azaleas grow naturally in the colder and temperate regions of the northern hemisphere, in the mountains of tropical Asia, in New Guinea, Australia, central and western China, and the Himalayas. The conservatory is open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Today, next Sunday, and March 5 and 12 the doors will remain open from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.

106 MILLION GAP IN BOND QUOTA; ONLY WEEK LEFT

Pointing out that Chicago and Cook county must purchase 106 millions of dollars worth of individual bonds during these final seven days of the fourth war loan if the county's quota is to be attained, Frank McNair, county chairman of the campaign, said yesterday that federal figures indicated a vast amount of idle money in the country is being hoarded.

"Much of this is slacker or foolish money," he added, "for it is working neither for the war nor for its owner." He suggested that the hoarders buy war bonds.

As of Friday night, McNair said, Cook county bond sales to individuals totaled $145,810,000, or 58 per cent of the goal of $251,959,800 which must be reached Feb. 26 if the drive is to be a success.

Corporation sales, which are still being processed even tho the campaign closed Tuesday, stood at $681,769,000 Friday night. This is 145 per cent of the corporation quota of $469,858,600.

The M. P. Hines Machine company, 6300 Northwest highway, received the treasury department's award of merit yesterday for oversubscribing its quota of $100 for each of its 200 employes.

Navy League Names New Vice Chief and Director

CROWDED HOUR OF 'LA BOHEME' DELIGHTS 4,600

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

Surely not even the most stubborn holdout on opera can resist Puccini's "La Boheme." Most poignant, and most disarming, of music dramas, it was chosen by the Chicago Theater of the Air last night to star Marion Claire as Mimi, the role that marked her Italian operatic début and brought her back to Chicago for success on the Auditorium stage. Apparently the only reason that just 4,600 people attended the Medinah Temple performance was that there was no room to wedge any one else in.

Cut to a crowded hour of music, this "Boheme" concentrated on the quartet of lovers, brilliantly supported by Henry Weber's W-G-N Symphony orchestra, and spiced with an excellent chorus and bits of dialog woven with uncommon deftness to blend the story and the song. A better than average English translation projected the story without sacrificing the flowing warmth of the score.

True Air of Opera House.

Miss Claire's performance brought the true air of the opera house to the microphone without forgetting that an opera house is also a theater. Anticipating television, perhaps, she wore an enchanting costume not quite in the Mimi tradition, but completely in the Mimi character of demure coquetry, and she sang with the personal radiance, the sensitivity of musical line and the richness of operatic projection that long since made her Mimi famous.

Particularly in the death scene, she caught the nostalgia of the music as exquisitely as Mr. Weber evoked it from an orchestra remembering in gentle, almost frail melodies, what it earlier had played with such lush and Latin splendor.

"Ping" in Tucker's Voice.

I can't imagine where I have been not to have heard Richard Tucker before, because he is a brilliant Rudolph. He has the ardent tenor, the outpouring ease of tone, the soaring notes, and that "ping" in the voice that means operatic accent. Bruce Foote's mellow baritone was admirable for Marcello, and Virginia Sellers was a sympathetic rather than a saucy Musetta, a characterization that reaped its reward in the prayer of the final scene.

But singing is only half an opera, and much of the credit must go to Mr. Weber's dynamic direction, and to the remarkable playing of the orchestra, keyed to Robert Quick's sensitive obbligatos. Puccini isn't as easy as it sounds, but when it sounds right, it sounds wonderful.

W-G-N AUDIENCE BUYS $357,500 IN WAR BONDS

Six hundred persons paid a total of $357,500 for war bonds in exchange for tickets to the world premiere of the motion picture, "None Shall Escape," presented in the main audience studio of W-G-N last night in coöperation with the special events division of the treasury department.

The film depicts Nazi atrocities in the village of Litzbark, Poland, and the post-war trial of the war criminals.

In the preliminary program, talks were made by Dr. Karol Ripa, consul general of Poland, and Boatswain's Mate Steve Mittl of the coast guard, a veteran of the South Pacific war. Marion Schroeder sang the national anthem, accompanied by Wallace Bradley. Leslie Fear of the treasury department announced the show, arranged by Don McKiernan, manager of the special events division with the help of B. H. Neuman.

ROBNETT SUES WINCHELL ET AL. IN NEW ACTION

Amended complaints seeking a total of $1,200,000 damages for alleged libel and conspiracy were filed in federal District court yesterday by Atty. J. A. Cobbey in behalf of George Washington Robnett, executive secretary of the Church League of America. The suits developed from the publication, sale, and promotion of the book, "Under Cover."

Three amended complaints were filed. Defendants are, respectively, the E. P. Dutton & Co., publishers, being sued for $100,000; the Blue Network Co., Inc.; the Andrew Jergens Co., and Walter Winchell, radio gossipmonger, from whom Robnett seeks 1 million dollars, and John Roy Carlson, foreign born writer and possessor of at least six aliases, author of the book. He is sued for $100,000.

Original suits against the first two defendants were dismissed in federal court by Judges William H. Holly and John P. Barnes, the latter ruling that no facts were set forth in the complaints that would entitle Robnett to recover damages. The court, however, granted the plaintiff leave to file amended complaints.

Altho no action had been taken on the original complaint against Carlson, an amended bill, to conform with the other two, was included in the new filing.

HITLER'S CRAZY AS A FOX, SAYS WOMAN REFUGEE

Wagner Kin Describes Dictator's Pose.

New York, Feb. 19 [Special].—Adolf Hitler, far from being the maniac he has been pictured in some of the best sellers of returned foreign correspondents, is shrewd and cunning, a consummate actor who is convinced he is a genius, Miss Friederlind Wagner, 25, who was pursued by the Nazis and was thrown into a British prison camp when she fled to England, said today in an interview. She is the granddaughter of the famous composer.

"Hitler is completely sexless, and he weeps over ailing animals while ordering the butchery of humans, but he is shrewd and everything he does he does consciously—for effect," she said. "His fits of temper and rug chewing outbursts are exaggerated. He throws the fits for effect."

Miss Wagner, who escaped into Switzerland five days before the Nazis ordered her arrest, has known Hitler since 1923—when she was 5—when he began visiting her father, the late Siegfried Wagner, and her mother, Winifred. She is a fair skinned, golden blonde and has been in the United States two years.

Love of Music Called Sham.

Hitler's annual appearances at the Wagnerian festival at Beyrouth and his professed love for the music of Richard Wagner were a sham, Miss Wagner said, to impress Germany with his pretended love of art. And as for rumors of his romantic interest in her mother, that is just so much "baloney," she said.

"Mother was enthusiastic about Hitler and completely devoted to him, even in the early 1920s, because she felt he was the coming savior of the world, but he was interested in mother only as a friend and loyal supporter of the Nazi cause," she said.

"Hitler admired the British so much that, like most Germans, he sought them out. Of course, his hatred for them is rooted in his knowledge that he cannot be like them. Mother is not only British but the daughter-in-law of Richard Wagner, so by seeing her he could gratify his desire to be around an Englishwoman and also carry out his pose of being a lover of Wagnerian music.

His Real Favorites Told.

"Actually, Hitler's favorite music is the 'Merry Widow' and 'Madame Butterfly.' He wept buckets over the death of Madame Butterfly every time he saw the production."

Miss Wagner's troubles with the Nazis started when she returned to Germany after completing her schooling in England.

"After my return I came to hate the Nazis, all of them, and I voiced my opinions," she said. "Mother was warned to restrain me. I saw Hitler in our Beyrouth home, in Munich, and in the chancellory in Berlin. I last saw him in 1938, when I returned from Paris to visit my mother.

Flees to Switzerland.

"When I returned to Paris I learned that the Nazis were seeking me. I fled to Switzerland. Mother visited me there to persuade me to return to Germany. She said that if I did not come back the Nazis had threatened to kidnap me, and failing this, would destroy me. They accused me of being a British spy."

Miss Wagner refused to return to Germany and in March, 1940, was invited to go to London to do propaganda work. Later, however, she was interned and on Dec. 3, 1940, Beverly Baxter, a member of the house of commons, denounced the action in debate in the house. He charged that he had arranged for her to write an expose of Hitler but that because police found pictures of her and Hitler together they were convinced the internment was necessary.

Released by British.

The British home office subsequently released her and she went to Argentina and after a few months came to the United States, where she has made shortwave broadcasts to Germany for the office of war information, participated in war loan drives, and written a book now in the hands of publishers.

She believes that the German people will be more obedient after the war if the country is occupied by the Russians, because "they'll understand them and be afraid of them."

Miss Wagner said she hasn't any ideas for educating German children to peace after the war.

"A few days ago I was invited as a lecturer to answer arguments set forth by Miss Sigrid Schultz [former Berlin correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE] in her book on the hopelessness of trying to educate German children to peace. I had to explain that I feel as hopeless about them as Miss Schultz."

NEW WITNESSES SUBPENAED FOR DRAKE INQUEST

Two new witnesses were served with coroner's subpenas yesterday in connection with the investigation of the strange slaying Jan. 19 of Mrs. Frank Starr Williams in her room in the Drake hotel, Supervising Capt. John Ryan of the Chicago avenue police district disclosed.

The two witnesses are Pierre Courtois and Cecille Courtois of 10 W. Elm st., operators of the Pierre and Paul's Beauty salon, where Mrs. Williams had obtained a shampoo shortly before she returned to the hotel and was fatally shot by a middle aged, red haired woman who lurked in the bathroom.

Mrs. Williams had been joined at the beauty salon by her daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, who accompanied her to the hotel, where she, too, was a target for the assassin's bullets, but was unhurt. The two women, police said, left the salon at 5:55; the slaying occurred about 6:35.

The two Courtois were told to appear at the inquest hearing in the county morgue at 1 p. m. March 3.

Capt. Ryan said Pierre Courtois formerly worked at the Saks Fifth Avenue store, where a second daughter of Mrs. Williams, Miss Elizabeth Born, also was employed. He said Courtois had known the Williams family for many years.

Coroner Brodie also issued a subpena for Mme. Marguerite Pick, modiste at 127 E. Chestnut st., who, police said, had fashioned gowns for the murder victim.. She was out of the city and the summons was not served.

Seek Bits of Information.

The coroner said his request for the Courtois couple and Mme. Pick to appear as witnesses was prompted by his desire to learn as much about the slain woman's background from her former business acquaintances as possible. Investigators, he said, might learn from their statements apparently irrelevant bits of information which possibly could fit together into a mosaic indicating a motive for the murder.

BARUCH'S PEACE BLUEPRINT HITS SNAG IN SENATE

George Brands It 'Rule by Executive Decree.'

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—Methods proposed in the New Deal post-war program for taking the government out of business and restoring the nation's economy to a peace time basis were assailed as dictatorial today by Sen. George [D., Ga.], chairman of the powerful senate finance committee.

Sen. W. F. George.

He charged in a statement that the administration plan, issued under the signature of Bernard Baruch, capitalist and New Deal adviser, and John M. Hancock, New York investment banker, would control the country's economic policies by executive directives.

He insisted economic policies should be shaped by congressional legislation, the democratic process, as contemplated in a bill introduced a week ago by himself and Sen. Murray [D., Mont.]. George is head of a special subcommittee on post-war plans and Murray heads a subcommittee on termination of military contracts.

Vandenberg Agrees.

Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], a member of the committee, supported George's viewpoint with the declaration that the committee is not willing to leave such decisions to "executive lieutenants" but will insist on the establishment of an authority accountable to congress.

The bill for termination of war contracts would give manufacturers a quick settlement of contracts and cash to ease them back into peace time activities when the war ends. Both industry and labor have given support to the measure, which was submitted along with a report prepared by the special subcommittee.

Under the Baruch-Hancock report the top job of policy making for the reconversion of industry would be directed by the office of war mobilization under Director Byrnes.

Prompt Action Expected.

The President and Byrnes, who adopted the Baruch-Hancock report as the New Deal program—at least in the Presidential campaign year—were expected to act promptly on its recommendations.

"The two reports sharply outline the question of whether the economic destiny of the country is to be settled by executive directives or by policies established by the elected representatives of the people," George said. "That issue is so basic that the two reports can never be reconciled.

"The senate post-war committee would do the job thru an agency created by congress. The Baruch report would do the whole job by executive order."

Theorists Opposed.

The senator has bitterly fought efforts of New Deal theorists to employ the exigencies of war to effect social and economic reforms.

He has insisted that industry and the individual must be permitted to build reserves to meet post-war financial reserves. The New Dealers are bent on taxing so heavily that it will be impossible to build reserves, so that industry and individuals will have to beg for federal doles at the cost of heavier federal controls, according to critics of the administration policy.

KNUTSON CALLS ROOSEVELT TAX DEMAND RUINOUS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—The American taxpayer will be "flat as a pancake," Rep. Kuntson [R., Minn.] warned tonight, if President Roosevelt wins his fight for 10½ billion dollars in additional taxes.

Knutson, ranking Republican member of the house ways and means committee, is one of the men who wrote the present tax bill, which is now awaiting Mr. Roosevelt's veto or approval. The house and senate cut the President's demands to 2⅓ billion dollars.

Poor to Be Hit Hardest.

Speaking by radio, Knutson warned that if new taxes are imposed they will fall upon the people in the lower and middle income classes. Blaming Mr. Roosevelt and his administration for wasteful spending that caused the nation's greatest debt in history, Knutson said:

"The President says that he wants you to pay 10½ billion dollars in new taxes and wishes he had the nerve to suggest more. It should strike any logical American as strange that Tax Expert Franklin Roosevelt, who thinks you can afford so many new taxes, is the same man as Politician Franklin Roosevelt who yesterday vetoed the so-called anti-subsidy bill because he says you can't buy groceries without a government dole.

Economy Suggested.

"This is the same man who thinks that he and his burocrats are infallible and that this congress is a poor substitute for his old rubber stamp congresses."

Knutson suggested that the President try to save money instead of wasting it, illustrating with the war department building, the Pentagon.

"The Pentagon," Knutson said, "was originally scheduled to cost not more than 35 million dollars. It acutally cost 75 million by the time the burocrats got thru having a joyride at the taxpayers' expense."

"Eight Riotous Years."

Telling more of New Deal spending, Knutson said:

"Mr. Roosevelt, during his first riotous eight years in office, filled the pockets of New Deal spendthrifts with money the nation has not yet paid back in full. In those eight years, he spent as much as it cost to run our government from the days of George Washington thru the last day of the administration of Woodrow Wilson, including the World War I. expenditures."

Knutson said his committee is trying to simplify tax returns as well as the entire taxing system.

"It may be," he said, "that we will have to wait until we get a Republican administration next November before much progress is made on this idea. But we have waited 11 years for some relief and must be patient for a few more months."

VISIONS BROADER HOSPITAL CARE IN POST-WAR U. S.

A post-war era in which hospital care will be made available to a greater percentage of Americans was foreseen yesterday in the closing session of the two-day convention of the American Hospital association, in association headquarters, 18 E. Division st. The group was warned, however, by Frank J. Walter, president, that careful planning and research into hospital needs should be made before any action providing wider hospital care was taken.

"Few individuals realize the importance of education and research in planning a health program," he said, "but the advances made in hospital care in the last 50 years indicate the value of such planning.

Dr. Snelzer said the association is coöperating with the government thru its physical rehabilitation section, thru the United States public health service, thru the emergency medical service of the office of civilian defense, and in the maternity care offered to wives of service men.

ROOSEVELT DEMANDS ANNULMENT.

The federal ballot mystery may open up on simple examination without using a lie detector, without tailing the suspects, or getting their finger prints. Why do officers and representatives of the United States, sworn to support the Constitution of the United States, knowingly undertake to annul it? That's our mystery.

Have they ever read the Constitution? Mr. Roosevelt says he has. That's why he knows, as he says he does, that there must be a national election this year. Some one had asked why bother. Mr. Roosevelt took a superior tone. He said that persons making such suggestions had never read the Constitution. He has. He knows, therefore, that his term of office, according to the Norris amendment, expires Jan. 20. The office is vacant after that date unless there has been a choice by the Presidential electors or, in an occurrence of negligible possibility, by the national house of representatives.

Mr. Roosevelt's voluntary testimony that he has read the Constitution is welcomed and will be accepted for the record. Can it be assumed that he also understands it? If so, then he knows that congress cannot pass any valid act stipulating how the Presidential electors shall be chosen—"appointed," the Constitution says. Congress has no more authority to do so than the American Bar association, the Rotary clubs, or the Junior Association of Commerce. The supreme federal law delegated the power to the various state legislatures and no act of congress can set up any other procedure.

Congress may set the day for the selection of the electors. Congress can set the day when the electors meet and cast their votes. Congress cannot pass a lawful act otherwise affecting the electors, either by providing a ballot or by indicating how the individual voter's choice may be indicated.

A President is taking a chance when he uses a message to congress to advocate nullification. What induced Mr. Roosevelt to ask for annulment? What led him to the audacity of telling the country, and by short wave the service men overseas, that congress would "perpetrate a fraud on the people" if it obeyed the Constitution? He was pretty sure of himself. He was pretty sure that the house of representatives would be too timid to vote his impeachment and that the senate would be too partisan or too timid or both to put him on trial. Here we begin to get the solution of our mystery.

The fourth termers are, of course, convinced that if they can rig the federal ballot it will be to their advantage in taking the uniformed vote. At this point the controversy degenerates lower than barroom politics. Here the administration has all the advantage because it controls the means of communication with the soldiers, sailors, and airmen. It has already poisoned their minds with the suggestion that the lawful ballot is a political fraud and that the Republicans hope to keep the service men from voting.

There is another reason. The provision for the selection of a President by the electors is probably the softest part of the Constitution. The alternative, at the time the method was devised, was election by the two houses of congress or by the state legislatures. If either of the alternatives had been adopted it is probable that the Republic would have fallen apart. Now the device which produced an independent chief executive seems archaic. People may have forgotten that they do not vote directly for the President. The provision for electors appears as the most negligible part of the organic law, unsuited to our modern methods of election, and a dispensable relic of the past.

A proposal for nullification striking at this soft spot could be calculated to arouse little popular opposition. Mr. Roosevelt, indeed, seems to have had considerable success in appearing as the champion of the people's rights while he undertakes to annul a provision of the organic law. He has never been pleased with the Constitution. He could rule better without it. Personal displeasure was the high note of his quarrel with the Supreme court until he shaped it to his liking, and of his many quarrels with congress whenever it undertook to be a coördinate branch of government.

Mr. Wallace says the profound revolution which is coming will require the surrender of many constitutional rights. Here in the service vote bill was a chance to slip under the guard and knock out a piece of the Constitution by a congressional act. The fourth term candidate boldly accepted the opportunity. If he succeeded a precedent would be established. Designing radicals have applauded him and many confused people have helped him.

The continuity of such a Republic as ours is established by its organic law which protects rights and provides orderly procedure. When the organic law is kicked about by adventurers the Republic will fall. Orderly procedure is established for the amendment of the law. If the people want to get rid of the electors the way is open. An amendment can provide for election of the President by direct vote of the whole country. Mr. Roosevelt and every other Democratic candidate has had the benefit of the electoral vote system. If Mr. Roosevelt proposed the abolition of the electors by constitutional process he might get a solid Republican support.

That is not his game. He proposes nullification as a precedent and an illegal vote.

VETERINARY MEDICINE.

The state veterinarians' association, which is urging that the University of Illinois establish courses in veterinary medicine, has been promised careful consideration of its recommendation by members of the university's board of trustees.

The veterinarians have sound grounds for their recommendation, not the least of which is the fact that Illinois students who wish to enter this field are severely handicapped in getting training. There aren't many schools of veterinary medicine in the colleges and universities of the country, and Illinois has none. All of the first-rank schools have more applicants for instruction than they can accommodate and tend to give preference to students from the state that supports the institution. That leaves the applicants from Illinois out in the cold.

Illinois is one of the great meat producing states in the Union. This industry needs veterinarians, and they also are required as technicians in the field of public health. Cattle testing, dairy and meat inspection, and kindred activities call for increasing numbers of trained men. Another public health activity that concerns them is the control of rabies, which in Illinois is as serious a problem as it is anywhere in the country.

The college of agriculture at the state university already teaches animal pathology and many of the other basic courses necessary to veterinary training. Establishment of the full course in veterinary medicine should not require too large additions to the present faculty.

The university trustees were well advised, however, to approach the problem with one reservation. If they establish a veterinary school or department they should go at it thoroly or not at all. Arrangements should be made not only to give instruction but to carry an active and comprehensive research program.

American universities, and particularly tax supported institutions, are under constant pressure to expand their courses and give instructions in specialized fields. In consequence, many of their activities have never risen far above the level of a good vocational high school. This is as much an injustice to an institution's graduates as it is to the institution itself and the taxpayers that put up the money.

A student turned out by a department or school engaged solely in instruction gets second rate training. It is only when instruction is tied closely to well planned and liberally supported research programs that first rate men are graduated in any scientific or technical field. Veterinary medicine offers excellent opportunities for research. The Mayo Foundation engages in it, and it is certainly not beneath the dignity of the University of Illinois.

BOND QUOTAS AND SALES.

There were two major objectives in the 4th war loan. The first was to raise 14 billions to cover war expenses in excess of taxes. This end has been achieved. There was never any doubt of that.

The second objective was to borrow 5½ billions from individuals and thus to drain off this amount of purchasing power which otherwise would be available for bidding up the prices of consumers goods. Here there has been a failure. Sales in the United States to persons fell 33 per cent below the quota. Chicago, it appears, did not come up to the national average, despite the most thoro canvass under the forceful leadership of Mr. Frank McNair.

Subscriptions are still being sought and the treasury has announced that sales of the various types of war savings bonds made any time this month, are to be counted. Those in charge of the campaign hope that the quota among individuals will be met here or at least that the percentage of full success will be up to the national average. Soldiers and sailors from here would be chagrined if they were to read in the service papers that Chicagoans' bond buying performance was below the national par.

It should be apparent, however, that the objective set for individuals in this country for the 4th bond drive was excessive. Members of the white collar class in particular have been unable to buy all that was asked of them. With their salaries frozen at 1942 levels, with the income taxes payable from 1943 and 1944 incomes increased because of the special instalment required by the transition to the current year basis, and with the cost of living up, those in the middle income range have been unable to add very much to the bond buying program they were already following.

The treasury's failure to estimate accurately the amount of war savings bonds which could be sold to individuals was the consequence in part of a faulty estimate by another government department of the size of the so-called "inflation gap." This is the term applied to the amount by which the total income of the people after deducting taxes exceeds the supply of goods available.

Fifty-eight billion dollars worth of goods were sold at retail in 1942. The government said that sales of the stores would fall to 48 billions in 1943. Instead of a 10 billion drop there was a 5 billion increase. The government missed the mark by 15 billions. The "inflation gap" thus was 15 billions smaller than it had been assumed to be. As the investable funds of individuals on current account were less than the government had estimated, sales of individual bonds have proved disappointingly small. It is to be hoped that the treasury will be more realistic in setting future bond quotas. Nevertheless every person in Chicago should try to buy at least one more baby bond this month. That much is needed to go over the top.

THE FIRST ARGUMENT FOR 'UNION NOW'

Most Americans are familiar with the treason of Benedict Arnold, but many have never heard of the explanation he made for his attempt to betray his country and deliver the fortress of West Point, which was under his command, into the hands of the British for £10,000. Arnold's apology was made in a broadside which appeared in New York Oct. 7, 1780, under the title, "To the Inhabitants of America," the text of which follows:

"I should forfeit even in my own opinion, the place I have so long held in yours, if I could be indifferent to your approbation, and silent on the motives which have induced me to join the king's arms.

"A very few words, however, shall suffice upon a subject so personal, for the thousands who suffer under the tyranny of the usurpers in the revolted provinces as well as to the great multitude, who have long wished for its subversion, this instance of my conduct can want no vindication, and as to that class of men who are criminally protracting the war from sinister views at the expense of the public interest, I prefer their enmity to their applause. I am therefore only concerned in this address to explain myself to such of my countrymen as want abilities or opportunities to detect the artifices by which they are duped.

"Having fought by your side when the love of our country animated our arms, I shall expect from your justice and candor what your deceivers with more art and less honesty will find it inconsistent with their own views to admit.

"When I quitted domestic happiness for the perils of the field I conceived the rights of my country in danger, and that duty and honor called me to her defense. A redress of grievances was my only object and aim, however I acquiesced in a step which I thought precipitate, the declaration of independence: To justify this measure many plausible reasons were urged, which could no longer exist when Great Britain with the open arms of a parent offered to embrace us as children, and grant the wished for redress.

"And now that her worst enemies are in her own bosom I should change my principles, if I conspired with their designs: yourselves being judges, was the war the less just, because fellow subjects were considered as our foes? You have felt the torture in which we raised our arms against a brother. God incline the guilty protractors of these unnatural dissentions, to resign their ambitions, and cease from their delusions, in compassion to kindred blood.

"I anticipate your question, was not the war a defensive one until the French joined in the combination? I answer that I thought so. You will add was it not afterwards necessary, till the separation of the British empire was compleat? By no means, in contending for the welfare of my country I am free to declare my opinion, that this end attained, all strife should have ceased.

"I lamented therefore the impolicy, tyranny, and injustice, which with a sovereign contempt of the people of America, studiously neglected to take their collective sentiments of the British proposals of peace, and to negociate under a suspension of arms, for an adjustment of differences, as a dangerous sacrifice of the great interests of this country to the partial views of a proud, ancient, and crafty foe.

"I had my suspicions of some imperfections in our councils, on proposals prior to the parliamentary commission of 1778; but having then less to do in the cabinet than the field [I will not pronounce peremptorily as some may, and perhaps justly, that congress have veiled them from the public eye]: I continued to be guided in the negligent confidence of a soldier. But the whole world saw, and all America confessed that the overtures of the second commission exceeded our wishes and expectations, and if there was any suspicion of the national liberality, it arose from its excess.

"Do any believe we were at that time really entangled by an alliance with France, unfortunate deception! and thus they have been duped, by a virtuous credulity in the incautious moments of intemperate passion to give up their felicity to serve a nation wanting both the will and the power to protect us, and aiming at the destruction both of the mother country and the provinces.

"In the plainness of common sense, for I pretend to no casuistry, did the pretended treaty with the court of Versailles amount to more than an overture to America? Certainly not, because no authority had been given by the people to conclude it, not to this very hour have they authorized its ratification. The articles of confederation remain still unsigned.

"In the firm persuasion therefore, that the private judgment of any individual citizen of this country is as free from all conventional restraints, since as before the insidious offers of France, I preferred those from Great Britain thinking it infinitely wiser and safer, to cast my confidence upon her justice and generosity, than to trust a monarchy too feeble to establish your independency, so perilous to her distant dominions; the enemy of the Protestant faith, and fraudulently avowing an affection for the liberties of mankind, while she holds her native sons in vassalage and chains.

"I affect no disguise, and therefore frankly declare that in these principles I had determined to retain my arms and command for an opportunity to surrender them to Great Britain, and in concerting the measures for a purpose in my opinion, as grateful as it would have been beneficial to my country: I was only solicitous to accomplish an event of decisive importance, and to prevent as much as possible in the execution of it, the effusion of blood.

"With the highest satisfaction I bear testimony to my old fellow soldiers, and citizens, that I find solid ground to rely upon the clemency of our sovereign, and abundant conviction that it is the generous intention of Great Britain, not only to leave the rights and privileges of the colonies unimpaired, together with their perpetual exemption from taxation, but to super-add such further benefits as may consist with the common prosperity of the empire. In short, I fought for much less than the parent country is as willing to grant to her colonies as they can be to receive or enjoy.

"Some may think I continued in the struggle of these unhappy days too long, and others that I quitted it too soon—to the first I reply, that I did not see with their eyes, nor perhaps had so favorable a situation to look from, and that to our common Master I am willing to stand or fall.

"In behalf of the candid among the latter, some of whom I believe serve blindly but honestly—in the bands I have left, I pray God to give them all the lights requisite to their own safety before it is too late, and with respect to that herd of censurers, whose enmity to me originates in their hatred to the principles, by which I am now led to devote my life to the reunion of the British empire, as the best, and only means to dry up the streams of misery that have deluged this country, they may be assured that conscious of the rectitude of my intentions I shall treat their malice and calumnies with contempt and neglect. B. ARNOLD."

STATISTICAL OBSERVATION.
[New York World-Telegram.]

There are about 75 million men and women in this country 25 years of age and over.

Of these, according to the United States office of education, only about 10½ million completed four years of high school.

In addition, about 26 million completed grammar school.

Which leaves, roughly, half the population of 25 years or over lacking even eight years of common school education.

And there are also, it should be added, more than a few college graduates with mathematics majors who don't understand that income tax form, either.

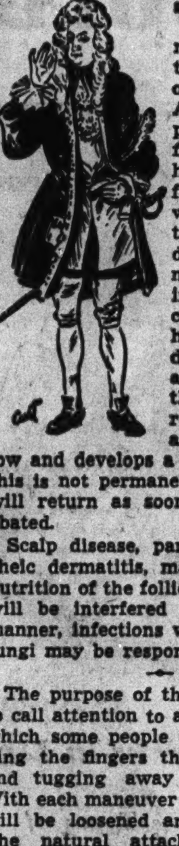
THE HAIRPULLING HABIT.

Baldness exists today—just as it has for centuries. The wearing of wigs as a part of court dress, so common in the 17th and 18th centuries, may have originated in an effort to disguise a billiard ball scalp.



Fortunately, many cases of thinning hair are only temporary. Any one who experiences a high fever may lose his locks, at least for a time. When we had far more typhoid than we do now it was not unusual, during convalescence, for the head to become denuded. We are all familiar with the babe who rubs his head against the pillow and develops a bare spot. But this is not permanent and the fuzz will return as soon as friction is abated.

Scalp disease, particularly seborrheic dermatitis, may so alter the nutrition of the follicles that growth will be interfered with. In like manner, infections with bacteria or fungi may be responsible.

The purpose of this discussion is to call attention to a nervous habit, which some people exhibit, of running the fingers thru the strands and tugging away for dear life. With each maneuver a few filaments will be loosened and come away. The natural attachment is not strong enough to resist a powerful "yank." When children are addicted, it is wise to keep the "mane" cut very short. As soon as the tot finds that there is nothing to grasp he will forget about it.

Pulling at the mustache or the eyebrows is a similar manifestation. Many will do this automatically as an aid to concentration. In other words, doing something with the fingers seems to be a compensation.

Recently attention has been called to certain types of coiffures wherein portions of the thatch are drawn tightly. The effect is to wear out the tiny muscles about the roots and oblige them to let go. This same effect is produced whenever curls are retained in an unnatural position by means of pins, combs, ribbons, or other devices. Particularly around the edges will the tresses give way. Thus we find a fair number of instances of marginal "molting." The regions exhibit a stubble which resembles a field of cut wheat.

Combing or brushing, without creating tension, appears to be more helpful than otherwise. But the structures will suffer under rough treatment. Furthermore, if infection is not present, the chances are that it will be planted sooner or later as the digits may not be clean always.

One of my colleagues has a patient whom he has carried thru three pregnancies. On each occasion she uprooted the hair above the left ear. The space covered an area of about an inch in diameter. After the birth of her babies the tendency disappeared.

We must look upon this practice as a desire for satisfaction, which must be treated if baldness is to be prevented. Not infrequently the capillary adornment will fail to regenerate. We dare not forget the personality asset which a luxuriant "crown" affords.

STAIR CLIMBING.

I. R. writes: Before shoe rationing I used to walk four miles daily to and from work. In this way I kept my weight down and my hips slim. Now I walk up five flights of steps three times daily. I am out of breath by the time I reach the top. Is this an injurious practice?

REPLY.

Two or three flights all at once may overwork the heart. Much depends on age, weight, and general health. Take the last part of your journey leisurely.

COLDBLOODED.

S. A. Y. writes: I am always cold. Could a blood pressure of 112 be a factor?

REPLY.

It may be. Increase your activity and protect against chill with adequate clothing.

ENTERITIS.

F. O. writes: Where is regional ileitis located?

REPLY.

In the last 12 or so inches of the ileum [small intestine], before it joins the ascending colon. It is sometimes called "Crohn's disease."

REQUIRES CALCIUM.

Mrs. J. R. writes: I need additional calcium. Will eating lettuce daily supply a sufficient amount?

REPLY.

Yes, if you take enough. A quart of milk will do the job more efficiently.

PROBABLY NOT.

K. H. writes: Could acidosis be to blame for a continual sour taste in the mouth?

REPLY.

No. Some form of indigestion is responsible. Check your diet.

AN AFTERMATH.

N. E. writes: Is Parkinson's disease considered of virus origin?

REPLY.

The malady is a sequel of encephalitis, which is a virus infection. Symptoms may not appear for a long time.

FLUID REMAINS.

L. E. writes: What is "unresolved pneumonia"?

REPLY.

When the exudate [fibrin and cells] within the air sacs fails to dissolve [heal].

BEMUSED LADY VOTERS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—The national League of Women Voters finds flaws in the Constitution. According to these starry-eyed females, "The pattern of world conditions today does not match the pattern of our Constitution." And: "The Constitution was adopted by the people of thirteen states, with a population of 3 million people. They could not foresee the difficulties of uniting the opinions of 135 million in 48 states. They in their time rescued the United States from anarchy. We in our time have to rescue from anarchy the world in which we live and have our being." O, boy, what an order!

Well, ladies, let us ponder on a saying of William Gladstone, "One example is worth a thousand arguments." What about the example we are setting, with the country divided into hostile political groups, with crime waves engulfing cities, rotten machines utilized by politicians and the country confronted with scarcity? It's high time we "rescued" ourselves from the incredible mess in which we are involved, before attempting to "rescue" the world. And the ladies wax eloquent about foreign "complexities" which cannot be solved under our Constitution but fail even to mention the ever increasing complexities at home.

The League of Women Voters at the next election will discover what the American people think of their plan to change our Constitution.

EDMUND K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

OUR POST-WAR ASSIGNMENT.

Greencastle, Ind., Feb. 8.—It was amazing to find that so many people really think that after the fighting is over our part of the war is also over. Perhaps these people who believe that we can isolate ourselves from the rest of the world don't know, after all these months, what we are fighting this war for. I would say that it was about time that they found out. Winning the war is of prime importance right now, but winning the peace after the war is even more important. This is a war where the statement "to the victor belongs the spoils" must not and cannot be true.

It is our job to see that after this war an international peace is established instead of the farce that followed the World war. People don't seem to be able to understand the importance of a world-wide peace. Without it we are going to fall into the same period of turmoil that followed the World war. It is going to be our job to see that England and Russia do not overrun the defeated axis countries and help themselves to whatever they deem is theirs. Prime Minister Churchill said he had not become the king's first minister to preside at the liquidation of the British empire. This can mean only that England will sacrifice nothing for the final peace. This will in turn result in suppression which will be followed by continued uprisings which will in turn set off the spark for world war III.

The idea of isolationism should by now be thoroly realized to be a foolhardy idea. It would appear that most people would be in great favor of international coöperation after the war. Some day soon we all hope that these armchair patriots will give up their ideas and the government can run smoothly on without crack-brained ideas from a not too understanding public.

OPERA IN ENGLISH.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—As a member of the American Opera Society of Chicago [national]—the pioneer society founded in 1921 by the late Eleanor Everest Freer [Mrs. Archibald Freer] for opera in our language—I wish to express gratitude for your fine presentations in English over W-G-N on Saturday evenings. Standing so magnificently for American institutions, as THE TRIBUNE has done and is doing, you are not overlooking American idealism in music. While these broadcasts are most pleasurable, they, at the same time, involve a principle, and they refute the thread-worn argument that opera in English is not understandable. You are proving that opera is not only understandable, but beautiful in English.

BIRD FEEDING.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—My husband has been feeding and watering the birds and squirrels for years. This winter, besides the cardinals, we have a robin and flicker that come each day to peck at the cooked soup bones he puts out in the forks of our cherry tree limbs, and do they like it! These bones take the place of the suet of other years. He puts an old dishpan in a bushel basket that has been filled with paper or excelsior, and in this pan of water he has an old electric curling iron that he plugs into a socket in the garage. In the morning it is turned on for 10 minutes to melt the ice crust. Water is very necessary if not the most important to the winter birds. It's lots of fun.

ROME'S MAGIC DEFENSES.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 3.—Now that allied leaders have announced their determination to capture Rome however stiff the German resistance, one may tremble for the fate of the city which has been called Eternal. And yet, on countless occasions Rome has been threatened and saved almost miraculously. Italy appeared to strike a strang awe into the hearts of her northern invaders, and too, all her attackers seemed to meet with misfortunes and strange deaths. Doom overtook all of them.

Hannibal camped within three miles of the walls, and yet he did not conquer it, but was himself conquered, and, managing to escape, he dragged out a few years and then took poison. In 409, Alaric, having crossed the Julian Alps, besieged the city, and starved it into surrender. He collected a ransom of almost 4 million dollars. He conquered it a second and a third time. After this, he intended invading Africa because of its bountiful harvest of wheat, but a fierce storm sank many of his ships, and soon after he died.

Then in 452 Attila with his enormous army marched on Rome. On the banks of the Po, he was met by Pope Leo I. and two diplomats, and here the pope talked with him. The strange spell of the ancient town seemed to take possession of him. At any rate, he returned northward leaving the city untouched. Attila died shortly afterward, having a hemorrhage on his wedding night.

Totila in 545 captured Naples and then Rome, which he plundered. On his second attempt against the city, he was defeated by the great Roman Gen. Belisarius, but when he went against it for the third time, he was able to enter it thru the treachery of some of its defenders. He looked on the place as a fort, and wished to destroy it. He threw down a third of the walls, and was preparing to burn all the finest buildings in Rome, when he received a letter from the Roman Gen. Belisarius, then lying ill, who said, "Fair cities are the glory of the great men who have been their founders, and surely no wise man would wish to be remembered as the destroyer of any of them."

Totila was so impressed with the words of the general, that he spared the city, and withdrew the greater part of his troops to the Alban hills, 20 miles southeast. Totila was defeated and killed at Tagina in July, 552.

WANTS "CRY ROOMS."

Chicago, Feb. 10.—So many times I have wondered why the Chicago theater chains have not installed "cry rooms" in some of the smaller neighborhood theaters. Tonight a news commentator on W-G-N again brought the subject to mind. He remarked that they might be something new, and that parents of howling offspring could enjoy [or see] a movie without disturbing any one except parents of more howling offspring.

Five years ago we lived in Vincennes, Ind., and at that time there were two of the local theaters in which "cry rooms" were very much in operation. Chicago is only five years behind the times.

JUST A MOTHER OF TWO.

FROM AN AUSTRALIAN COLONIAL.

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 6. — Mr. William Lilly of Woodlure, Hamlin Lake, R. F. D. 3, Ludington, Mich., U. S. A., posted me a copy of your issue of the 1st November last wherein on page 16 appeared a sub-leader supposedly written in vindication of the five American senators who, after enjoying the hospitality of parts of the British empire, the greatest the world has ever known, on their return to America made very offensive, uncalled for, and provocative remarks which naturally brought forth some home truth replies from a few of the English newspapers. These replies furnished the opportunity for your paper to once more attack and ridicule England, forgetful of the all-important and of the for-all-time enduring fact that the marvelous people of that amazing land from 3d September, 1939, until the United States got into its proper stride somewhere about May, 1943, saved the world, including your immense country, from disaster.

While I, an Australian of the second generation, was reading your subleader I had in mind an article written by a thoughtful, honest American which had been adapted from the United Nations Review, New York, by the magazine Digest of Toronto under the title of "Lend-lease Is Paying Dividends" and is to be found on pp. 99-102 of the Digest's issue of August last. As Ex-President Hoover made so much of what America had done and was doing for this war I commend the said Digest's article to this gentleman in the hope that he will retract his exaggerated statements as to America's contribution to the war compared to Great Britain's and will give full credit to that country, whose population is only one-third that of America's. May I here remind him that when England had her back to the wall from September, 1939, onward America, or rather some Americans whose voices were loud and some American newspapers whose influence for the time was considerable, insisted on that much worried and sorely pressed England not only paying cash for but having to arrange the transportation of commodities required to fight the enemies of the British empire and of America. When the history of this world war comes to be written England will be acclaimed the most glorious country that civilization has ever known, and rightly so.

Please remember it was an American and not an Englishman who told the true story of Great Britain's timely [very much so] aid to the United States, and at the same time bear in mind that President Roosevelt is numbered by clear thinking people amongst the four outstanding men of all the ages.

JOINT TENANCY PROPERTY.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—[Legal Friend of the People].—My parents have property in joint tenancy all paid for and no mortgage or lien. My brother is single and supports my parents and lives with them. The parents tell me they gave by brother a quit claim deed to this property so in case of death of the parents the property would go to my brother. 1. Can the parents give my brother a quit claim deed while they are still living and have the property in joint tenancy? 2. In case the mother should die first is my father the survivor of this property with the quit claim deed in possession of my brother? 3. If the two parents die and leave no will and the quit claim deed in my brother's possession, can sisters and brothers file claim? 4. If this deed is recorded how could I find out for myself? 5. If the property is sold for $8,500 how much would the government tax the seller?

J. J.

1. Yes.
2. If the deed has been validly delivered, then the joint tenancy has no further effect.
3. Not unless they can prove undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity, to set aside the deed.
4. In the recorder's office.
5. If your brother sold it, he would be taxed on the difference between the selling price and the value at the time he received it.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ESTATE PROBATE.

Oak Park, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People].—1. Do Ohio laws require an heir living in Illinois to sign in any transaction of a will? My father died in 1936 and our home was sold, all heirs living in Ohio who signed so mother could sell the home, but I was not notified. Now my mother is dead and we cannot find the original will, only the duplicate and this is not signed by mother. My brother is administrator and wants the heirs to sign so he can file it in probate, but ignores me, saying my signature is not required because I live out of the state. 2. I am an heir, regardless of where I live, am I not?

F. A.

1. Correct, in the sense that the proceedings could be carried thru without his signature. Incorrect, in the sense that ordinarily the signature would be asked for. We assume that you mean the estate is being probated. 2. Yes. You have not given us the facts to which the answers are to be applied and hence we are not in a position to advise you to advantage.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DISTRIBUTION OF BEQUESTS.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—[Legal Friend of the People].—How soon after an uncontested will is filed for probate are the bequests distributed?

T. W.

Creditors are allowed nine months in which to file their claims. Ordinarily there is no distribution until the expiration of this period.

TOKIO EXPRESS STARTING HERE—AND YOU CAN AID

Largest Plant in World Needs 100 Inspectors.

More than 200,000 men and women in Chicago now are working day and night on plane production, but 25,000 more still are needed to hasten the time when Tokio and Berlin feel the full fury and weight of Uncle Sam's fighting, aerial arm.

The need was emphasized yesterday by Col. John G. Salsman, chief of production and procurement of the AAF material command for Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Minnesota.

Col. Salisman said 200,000 persons in the Chicago area are at work on 2½ billion dollars' worth of planes and equipment, and 940 plants are operating as prime contractors, while hundreds of smaller plants are running on vital subcontracts.

1,500 Inspectors Needed.

Workers, management, and plants are turning out everything needed in aerial warfare from nuts to bolts and wires to huge engines and wings. But still it's not enough, said Col. Salsman. He estimated there are openings for 1,500 inspectors now.

"American aircraft and engines are the finest in the world, and our inspectors help manufacturers to maintain this standard," he said. "Inspectors probably are our most critical need right now.

"We also must have some inexperienced persons we can train, men and women who can be taught the simpler tasks of supervisory inspection. Salaries run from about $1,750 to $3,150 a year, including overtime.

"One of the most important jobs we have now is at the Dodge Chicago plant division of the Chrysler corporation at 7401 South Cicero avenue. Out there they are building a powerful airplane engine for a huge bomber, scores of which must be in the air this summer to take their place in the front line of the Tokio Express."

Inspectors' Work Vital.

Lt. Col. Edgar L. Love, Col. Salsman's aid and material command representative at the Dodge plant, arranged a trip for a reporter thru the building, largest in the world, to show the need for 100 more inspectors there.

"The Dodge plant is accelerating its operations as rapidly as possible and already has made deliveries of engines to the army," he said.

"There must be thousands of engines made here, and they must be perfect. You can't get out and look under the hood of a bomber at 40,000 feet over Yokohama. A dozen lives and half a million dollars may depend on how well the threads are cut on a bolt or how accurately an inspector gauged a valve rod."

1,200,000 Gauges Used.

Thousands of lathes, drill presses, forges, grinders and other machine tools are in operation 16 hours a day, all under one roof, and other hundreds are being set up to speed production. The plant is not yet complete, but it is a going corncern already working on the Tokio Express.

Col. Salsman pointed out that the Dodge plant needs more inspectors than others because of its size and because supervision there covers all stages of manufacture.

"This is a production line job where tolerances in size of working parts are kept much closer than in a watch," he said. "There are 1,200,000 gauges in this plant, including master sets of test blocks accurate to two one-millionths of an inch, kept in rooms where temperature and humidity are controled more closely than anywhere else in the world."

How to Apply for Job.

Each completed engine is run for 10 hours in a test room to check every detail of its performance. Then it is completely disassembled and each part is inspected under a magnifying glass. If no wear is shown, the motor is rebuilt and given another trial run, also under load, and then cleaned, reoiled, reinspected, sealed in a pliofilm bag, and shipped by the army to a plane plant or a foreign air field to be used as a replacement.

Col. Salsman said applications for all AAF inspectors' jobs should be filed at the Chicago area office of the materiel command at 20 North Wacker dr., in charge of Lt. Col. Walter Godard. The latter explained that Lt. Norman Tharp, area personnel officer will expedite applications addressed direct to him.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

L. C. asks: "I am 36 years of age. Last fall I applied for a commission in the navy but was told that I could not qualify for general sea duty because the upper age limit for such officers was 34. Recently I have heard that the age limit for general sea duty has been raised. Is this correct, and if so, what is the upper age limit?"

ANSWER: As a rule the navy does not consider civilians who are over 34 years old for direct appointment as general sea duty officers; however, by recent changes in requirements, the navy will now consider men for this duty who are not over 37 years old. Such men must meet the educational requirements, must be fully qualified physically, and both the nature and quality of their experience must be of a high order, including sound experience in the direction and handling of men. Apply to Naval Officer Procurement, Board of Trade building, Chicago, and ask that your qualifications be reconsidered.

V. M. writes: "I was up for a discharge, a C. D. D.; section X, but later was turned down without being told why. I was supposed to get a discharge under M. R. 1-9, section IV, paragraph 16 [a]. Just what does that mean?"

ANSWER: You must be mistaken in your reference to M. R. 1-9 because the section you mention deals with vision requirements for general military service. If you were being considered under this section, it would have been under paragraph 18, ie., vision less than required for limited service.

C. A. G. writes: "When I reported to the reception center and was filling out my insurance papers, I wanted to name my sister beneficiary of my national service life insurance and they told me that because she lives in Germany, she can not be named. I have no one else to name within the permitted class."

ANSWER: Talk with the insurance officer because you have been misinformed. The insurance contract makes your sister an eligible beneficiary even tho she may be living within enemy territory. In the event something happens to you, the government may not attempt payment until the war is over but your sister will get it when it can be paid.

NOTE: Starting Wednesday we will publish a series of articles on occupational classifications. These articles will appear twice weekly.

WARN AGAINST MAIL THEFT OF GAS COUPONS

The postoffice department and the office of price administration yesterday issued a joint warning to B and C gasoline coupon applicants to protect their rations against mailbox thieves.

William Plath, postal inspector in charge of the Chicago area, asked persons who apply for their rations under the new central issuance system to have some one meet the mailman when their coupons, which will be of the new serially numbered theater ticket type, are due to be delivered. Mailbox thieves, he said, are particularly active at such times.

Paul A. H. Shults, area OPA director, asked applicants to send their forms to their local ration boards at least 10 days in advance of the expiration date of their current books. The boards will approve them and send them to the central office. Delivery will be made by mail.

"It should take just a few days for the applications to be processed and the tickets in the hands of motorists," he said. "In most cases rations will be issued immediately, so those expecting coupons will do well to start watching for the mailman two or three days after mailing their applications."

RATION BOARDS HONOR MULCAHY FOR HIS OPA JOB

A testimonial luncheon for Sheriff Mulcahy, who was Chicago area office of price administration director from December, 1941, to last Dec. 20, was given yesterday in the Morrison hotel by members of the area's 173 ration boards. Mulcahy, organizer of the rationing administration in this area, was presented with a sterling silver service by the boards.

Sheriff Mulcahy.

Guests included Paul A. H. Shults, acting area director, and James F. Riley, chief rationing officer. George C. Crawford, Waukegan publisher and ration board chairman, was toastmaster.

Shults told of Mulcahy's work in organizing the local boards, and Crawford lauded the sheriff for his administration, which included the appointment of 1,750 board members, nearly twice that number of staff workers, and scores of volunteers.

SOLDIER LADEN LIBERTY SHIP SPLITS IN PORT

10 Other Troop Carriers Tied Up by Army, Navy.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 19 (AP).—The Post-Intelligencer today said a troop laden Liberty ship recently split open while tied up to an Alaskan dock and that 10 of the ships which had been converted for troop carriers were held in the Seattle area because the army and navy refused to use them.

The 10 converted ships represent a value of 21 million dollars, the Post-Intelligencer said, and 100,000 tons of shipping.

The paper said Sen. Wallgren [D., Wash.], member of the Truman war investigating committee which recently held a hearing in Seattle on asserted failures of Liberty ships, described the situation as "a major scandal" in a long distance telephone interview from Washington.

[In Washington Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.], a member of the Truman group, said the committee is questioning all operators of Liberty ships concerning any structural defects discovered. From other sources it was learned the committee is investigating the possibility of reinforcing any Liberty ships used as troop carriers.]

Weathered Heavy Seas.

Of the ship which split, the Post-Intelligencer quoted Sen. Wallgren as saying:

"Altho this ship, the S. S. Christopher Greenup, had weathered heavy seas, its plates parted because of locked up stresses, in calm and not excessively cold waters."

[An engineer for a New York shipbuilding concern explained that "locked-up stresses" occur when plates are welded together improperly, as when they are overwelded. In Washington the maritime commission said the troop carrying vessel in question was built by the Oregon Shipbuilding company, Portland, Ore., a concern controled by Henry Kaiser, and was delivered March 15, 1943.]

Sees Hull Open.

The vessel was reported to have been standing in Cold Bay, Alaska, Jan. 24, the paper said. The hull actually opened before the eyes of Chief Engineer W. S. Randall of Seattle as he was reaching for a valve, preparatory to departure of the soldier filled vessel.

"Informed that his vessel was taking water, Capt. P. R. Selig notified Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckner, commanding general of the Alaskan department.

"While water continued to stream into the engine room, all military personnel hastily abandoned ship on orders of Gen. Buckner, who demanded further transportation for the troops in another type of ship.'"

40 DIE SINKERS STRIKE; CHARGE UNDUE HAZARD

Forty employes of the die room of the huge Dodge Chicago plant of Chrysler corporation remained away from the plant yesterday. A meeting of the Chicago Die Sinkers union, local 100, will be held at 1 p. m. today in a hall at 67th st. and Cicero av., to discuss the dispute, said Alfred Kipp, 6630 Lowe av., financial secretary of the union.

Company officials said workers gave no reason for quitting but the die workers said they had been required to climb between the jaws of steam hammers, which deliver up to 20,000 pound blows, held apart by props, in violation of a union rule. When one union man protested, he was fired, union officials said. Four more employes objected and they, too, were discharged, the union said.

The die men said they would not return to work until the five were reinstated and the company rule abrogated. The plant is engaged in production of war plane engines.

Quizzed in Killings

COUNTY'S PLAN TO BOOST TAXES FACES PROTEST

Two sets of complainants are expected to appear tomorrow at a public hearing on the proposed Cook county budget, which stands now at $24,406,000.

One group probably will argue firmly against the plan of the county board to impose a levy nearly 4 million dollars more than its estimated expenditures for 1944 and use the surplus to pay off the deficit incurred in 1943. Several civic, real estate, and property owning organizations have announced they will be at the meeting to protest.

Social welfare workers and some office holders and workers' representatives have indicated they want to demand even bigger appropriations; this in the face of the fact that the current spending plan involves $20,432,000 and is some $700,000 in excess of the original estimate of revenues under the 9½ million dollar pegged tax levy permitted by the legislature.

2 EX-CONVICTS QUIZZED ABOUT GALVIN MURDERS

Two ex-convicts, held with five juveniles and two women in a clean-up of 95 burglaries from Winnetka to Gary, were questioned yesterday about the slaying of Mrs. Lillian Galvin and her maid in their Evanston home Oct. 22, 1942.

The Galvin murder was recalled when Glenn Barnard, 29, and William Behrens, 39, both of 4550 Magnolia av. admitted the $5,000 burglary of a Winnetka home last Feb. 5.

Loot from the home of John C. Nevins, retired vice president of the Felt and Tarrant Manufacturing company, at 345 Elder lane, Winnetka, accounted for most of the $8,000 worth of articles recovered by police from a garage rented by the two ex-convicts at 5153 N. Clark st. and from their flat.

Implicated by Others.

The men were arrested last week after Gresham police captured three young men trying to break into a south side home. They implicated the others.

Five policemen were busy yesterday cataloging items recovered and tracing the series of burglaries which they said were distributed as follows: 25 in the Grand Crossing district, 40 in the Gresham district, 10 in the South Chicago district, 12 in the Burnside district, 6 in the Morgan Park district and others in Winnetka and Gary.

Included in the items recovered were 80 pieces of sterling silver tableware, a fur coat, two radios, a large quantity of clothing, two typewriters, a comptometer, seven guns, and golf clubs.

Arouses Judge's Ire.

The teen-age prisoners are Frank Watts, 16, of 6929 Yale av.; Robert Heilgeist, 16, of 36 W. 71st st.; Arthur Overhue, 16, of 145 W. 71st st.; Robert McGrath, 16, of 7237 Yale av., and James Finnegan, 18, of 5709 Wentworth av. The women held are Jean Hagerman of Detroit and Mrs. Helen Van Buskirk, 32, of 6619 Princeton av.

Juvenile authorities reported a sudden sharp increase in crimes involving juveniles. The case aroused the ire of Chief Justice Benjamin P. Epstein of Criminal court, who warned that in the cases of the "unwarranted and unreasonable increase" in young men brought into his court, gun wielders would receive no sympathy and that severe punishment was certain for those found guilty.

RELIEF IN ITALY A BIG JOB, SAYS A. E. STEVENSON

Italy presents a far greater burden on allied resources for relief and sustenance than had been expected, Adlai E. Stevenson, Chicago attorney who recently returned from heading a special economic mission to that country, last night told members of the Decalogue Society of Lawyers in the Palmer House.

"The Italian budget, already heavily supported by allied military currency, will be subjected to increased burdens and tax collection is wholly inadequate," Stevenson said.

"Currency circulation is further constantly increased by allied troop expenditures and expenditures for labor, services, and goods. And the currency is exposed to complete devaluation by the Germans if they choose to dump lira in the north as a weapon of economic warfare.

BEDAUX, FACING TRAITOR CHARGE, TAKES OWN LIFE

Dies After Overdose of Sleeping Powders.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Charles E. Bedaux, 56, former sandhog who became an international figure and an intimate of Edward Windsor, took his own life here while facing an accusation of treason, an official announcement said today.

Charles E. Bedaux.

Immigration Agent John E. Burling said the French born engineer and industrialist swallowed an overdose of hoarded sleeping tablets Monday night at a detention home where he had been held incommunicado since he was brought from North Africa to Miami, Dec. 23, 1943, aboard an army plane.

Bedaux was found in a coma by an attorney the next day and never regained consciousness. He died at 9:15 p. m. yesterday in a hospital. Burling would not disclose the text of a suicide note Bedaux left to his secretary.

Ruled U. S. Citizen.

Bedaux downed the tablets a few hours after he had been informed that a board of special inquiry of the immigration and naturalization service had ruled that he was a citizen of the United States and could be admitted to this country. He became a naturalized citizen at Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1917.

"Bedaux further was advised at the time, however," Burling reported, "that a grand jury would be convened to inquire into his relations with high officials of the German government and of the Vichy French government, and that the grand jury would consider whether he should be indicted for treason and for communicating with the enemy."

At Washington, Atty. Gen. Biddle disclosed that Bedaux fell into American hands after the invasion of North Africa, where he was preparing to construct a pipe line across the Sahara desert for the purpose of relieving the shortage of edible oils in Europe.

Admitted Nazi Relations.

Biddle said Bedaux admitted close friendships with high ranking Nazis, including Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, Otto Abetz, and Hjalmar Schacht.

After the fall of France, Bedaux was said to have traveled back and forth between occupied and unoccupied France, carrying on negotiations with the Germans and the Vichy French. In July, 1942, Vichy Premier Pierre Laval gave Bedaux a document ordering French leaders in North Africa to coöperate with him in the oil line project.

It was at the Bedaux chateau at Monts, France, on June 3, 1937, that Windsor married Wallis Warfield Simpson, for whom he had renounced the British throne.

Later in 1937, Bedaux arranged an American tour for the Windsors, but such a storm of protest arose from labor that the trip was canceled.

Started as Sandhog.

Bedaux came to this country from France about 40 years ago, and found work as a sandhog in New York's East river tunnel. He soon advanced to better jobs, and finally became wealthy with his labor management system.

The Bedaux system had to do with the assigning of work units to govern a laborer's output.

Bedaux's widow, Fern, is believed to be in France. An only son, Charles E. Jr., is on duty abroad with the United States army.

SKIDMORE BODY RETURNED HERE FOR LAST RITES

The body of William R. [Billy] Skidmore, 67, a colorful Chicago gambling and political figure for nearly 50 years, was returned to Chicago last night from Terre Haute, Ind. Skidmore died Friday afternoon in the federal penitentiary in Terre Haute, where he was nearing the end of a two and a half year term for evading income tax payments.

Arrangements for his funeral were made by friends on behalf of his widow, Ethel, who occupies the family apartment in the Drake hotel. The body, brought to Chicago on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois' Dixie Express, was removed to a chapel at 2701 N. Clark st.

Christian Science church services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel. Private burial services will be held in Graceland cemetery after cremation.

The government, which sent Skidmore to prison for failure to pay $353,194 in income taxes, evinced interest in his estate. Nigel Campbell, chief deputy collector of internal revenue in Chicago, said the government has recorded liens for that amount against Skidmore and eventually will attach Skidmore's assets to satisfy the claim.

Skidmore, who was born on Chicago's west side, was worth at least a million dollars, acquaintances estimated.

Two Hurt in Blast

Two men were injured yesterday in the explosion of a compressed air tank used for sand blasting in the Industrial Arts corporation, 660 W. Grand av., which endangered 10 other employes. The tank, about 6 feet high by 4 feet in diameter, was blown off its mounting and split in half by the detonation. Those hurt were Joseph Diclarfania, 23, of 3625 Shakespeare av., a foreman, who was removed to North Avenue hospital, and Archie Meyers, 17, Negro, 3252 Prairie av., who was taken to County hospital. Leonard Pierce, 16, 737 Noble st., standing six feet from the tank, was among those unhurt. Company officials began an investigation to determine the cause.

'3D TERM WOULD ANGER LINCOLN,' SAYS WOMAN, 97

Outlook Is Told by 1860 Campaigner.

Had any one suggested to Abraham Lincoln that he might seek a third term in the White House, he would have viewed the suggestion as a gross impropriety and a reflection on his personal honor, Mrs. Eleanor Gridley, 97, an authority on Lincoln, said last night.

"If Lincoln had lived thru his second term and had he been offered a third term, he would have felt insulted and hurt," Mrs. Gridley told an audience of friends and relatives in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Queen G. Thomas, 7156 Euclid av.

The informal gathering took the place of a lecture on the life of Lincoln which Mrs. Gridley has been giving each February. The change was necessitated because she recently recovered from an attack of influenza and pneumonia.

Witnessed Birth of G. O. P.

Mrs. Gridley, who is one of the few living persons who witnessed the birth of the Republican party under the oaks of Jackson, Mich., her former home, on July 6, 1854, is the author of a book, "The Story of Abraham Lincoln, Journey from the Log Cabin to the White House," which was published in 1900.

"If Roosevelt is elected for a fourth term," she went on, "it is the beginning of the divine right of kings and the right of succession."

It is up to the women of the nation, she said, to elect a Republican president.

"This world has become to me a vast slaughter pen," she added. "I sometimes wonder whether there ever was such a man as Abraham Lincoln."

Speaking clearly, never groping for words, she told of Lincoln walking the streets of Washington during the Civil war, exclaiming, "I shall not be happy again with so many boys under the sod."

Recalls His Gentleness.

She placed emphasis on Lincoln's gentleness and calmness, and expressed the view that had Lincoln lived today, much of the nation's trouble might have been avoided.

"But I wouldn't want to bring him back to the world as it is now," she said.

Mrs. Gridley campaigned for Lincoln in 1860 as a lieutenant in the Girls Wide Awake club. She is a descendant of William L. Brewster, one of the Mayflower pilgrims. Charles Vernon Gridley, to whom Adm. Dewey addressed the words "You may fire when ready, Gridley," was a member of one of the branches of the family.

VETERAN OF '64 HOPES HE'LL SEE G. O. P. IN POWER

Silas Nichols, Lake county's last Civil war veteran, will celebrate his 96th birthday Tuesday at his home at 506 Poplar st., Waukegan, and his chief wish is that he will live long enough to see a Republican President elected.

"And when I say Republican I don't mean that man Willkie," he said yesterday. "He should stay in the Democratic party where he belongs. He has a nerve posing as a Republican. For me, the outstanding men on the Republican side are Gov. Dewey and Sen. Vandenberg."

Nichols and his wife, Elizabeth, 88, will celebrate their 71st wedding anniversary March 2. They are the county's oldest married couple and have lived in their Poplar street home 41 years. They came to Lake county 55 years ago. Nichols no longer can read the papers and his hearing is impaired, but his wife keeps him abreast of the news. He has definite opinions about President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Need Lincoln, He Says.

"I don't know what will become of the rising generation with all this debt the New Deal—or misdeal—has brought about," he said. "This country surely could use a Lincoln or a Washington to run the country. I was against the third term and I'm against a fourth term. I hope Roosevelt is turned out."

Nichols, who enlisted at Sandusky, O., in 1864 when he was 16—he gave his age as 18—has been judge advocate of the Illinois department of the G. A. R. the last 8 years and commander of the Waukegan post for 20 years. He is proud that he was born on Washington's birthday and that he shook hands with Lincoln after the second battle of Bull Run.

Tuesday, when the members of the Waukegan Township High school history club call on him to present a patriotic program, he will tell the boys and girls of the time he first met the Civil war President at the White House. With two other soldiers he was visiting Washington.

Shakes Hands with Lincoln.

"We were in a room at the White House and the guard, naturally, wasn't very much impressed," Nichols recalls. "He told the President it was just 'some old soldiers' and Mr. Lincoln cautioned him never to call soldiers that. Then he came out and shook our hands."

Nichols retired 24 years ago from his job as a railroad detective. He and his wife think there are too many divorces and feel that couples don't make an effort to find real happiness.

"You achieve happiness in a home just as all good things are achieved, and that's thru hard work and sincere effort," he said. "There must be plenty of give and take but it seems too many these days just want to take."

MONTREAL CAR MEN SCORN PLEA TO HALT STRIKE

Reject Own Leaders' Bid for Truce.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 19 (AP).—Striking street car operators at a mass meeting today shouted down their leaders who urged them to resume work as Adelard Godbout, premier of the province of Quebec, telegraphed the Montreal Tramways company asking it to resume its trolley and bus service.

As the authorized strike involving 4,000 street car operators continued into its second day, not a bus or street car moved in the city. Fear was expressed that the strike might curtail production in some war plants, a few of which broadcast details last night of points at which company trucks would pick up employes.

Demand Signed Contract.

The mass meeting of the strikers was adjourned until later tonight after speakers found their recommendations greeted with shouts of "No, no, we want our contract signed before we go back." The strikers referred to a contract being negotiated by collective bargaining.

Altho the Canadian Congress of Labor, bargaining agent for the employes, disclaimed responsibility for the walkout, union officials said the responsibility lay with the company for failure to sign a closed shop agreement.

Stoppage Ruled Illegal.

Company officials charged that the walk-out resulted "strictly from an inter-union dispute" and said the situation "seemed to be one calling for definite and affirmative action by constituted authority." Two weeks ago the provincial government passed legislation making work stoppages in public service, including trolleys, illegal.

The walk-out was said to have started when members of a CCL affiliate refused yesterday to operate cars with members of an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

This was Montreal's second transportation strike within a year. The first one, last March, brought recognition of the Canadian Congress of Labor as bargaining agent for the employes.

FOUND DEAD IN ATTIC.

Joseph Smaha, 49, of 2533 S. Kedzie av., was found dead, hanging by a rope from a rafter in the attic of his home when police investigated yesterday after neighbors said they had not seen him for several days.

HENRY H. DOTY SEEKING OFFICE IN LAKE COUNTY

Henry H. Doty, 347 Central av., Highland Park, filed yesterday at Waukegan for the Democratic nomination for county auditor. Doty, a manufacturer, is a former alderman and former police commissioner of Highland Park.

J. E. Bairstow, Democratic county chairman of Lake county, said Doty is the first of a complete Democratic slate of candidates for county office that will be filed before the deadline falls tomorrow.

All Lake county offices are now filled by Republicans and all except the coroner are unopposed so far for renomination.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Boxing's biggest battle, the 17th annual Golden Gloves tournament, nears its decisive stage in the 1944 campaign this week, as the last five of the 29 cities coöperating with Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. prepare to conduct their final bouts. The winners of these will join the regiments advancing on the Chicago Stadium, where the Tournament of Champions will be held on Feb. 28 and 29, and March 1. Out of this three day bombardment of punches will emerge the survivors, who then proceed to the championship finals in the Stadium on March 10.

Tomorrow night, Sports Editor Fred Digby of the New Orleans Item, one of the newcomers to the tourney's nation-wide cast, will open his tournament, concluding on Tuesday. On the latter date, the Memphis Commercial Appeal will get under way a three night test of the eight boys it will send to the Tournament of Champions. On Wednesday and Thursday, the Streator Times-Press and the Omaha World Herald will determine their champions. The Fort Worth [Tex.] Star-Telegram also ends its tournament tomorrow evening.

3 to Crown Champions.

Last night saw title victors crowned in the three centers conducted by the Los Angeles Times, the Kansas City Star, and the Port Huron [Mich.] Times Herald.

Chicago wound up the selection of its eight candidates last Monday night in the Marigold Gardens. The local hosts had been preceded by such perennially formidable contenders as the boxers sent by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Milwaukee Journal, the Nashville Tennessean, the Minneapolis Star-Journal and Tribune, and the Fort Wayne [Ind.] Journal-Gazette. Last Thursday night, the Pensacola [Fla.] Journal, third of the newcomers' trio which includes New Orleans and Los Angeles, completed its schedule.

Teams Arrive Saturday.

The majority of the teams will begin to arrive for the big show next Saturday and the full company of contenders will be complete by Sunday. They will include not only a number of representatives from army and navy bases, but also an assortment of 17 year old youngsters who may prove as redoubtable as so many of their football brethren did last autumn.

Other coöperating agencies who will join the struggle for places in the March 10 finals include Columbus [O.] Dispatch, Evansville [Ind.] Courier, Gary [Ind.] Post-Tribune, Grand Rapids [Mich.] Press, Indianapolis [Ind.] Times, Kalamazoo [Mich.] Gazette, Muncie [Ind.] Star, Oklahoma City Oklahoman, Peoria [Ill.] Journal Transcript, Sioux City [Ia.] Journal, Springfield [Ill.] Citizens Tribune, and Terre Haute [Ind.] Tribune Star.

The Tournament of Champions will begin in two rings at the Stadium on the night of Feb. 28, with the four lighter weights striving to move along. The same procedure will be followed on the evening of Feb. 29, and on March 1, the survivors in all eight weight classes will gather for the final session of the Tournament of Champions. The 32 winners will then advance to the March 10 finale.

THEY'RE READY TO COMPETE AGAINST NATION'S BEST

It isn't anything new for the Crosley family of Fort Wayne to have a Golden Gloves champion but three brothers won titles this year and will compete in the Tournament of Champions Feb. 28, 29 and March 1 in the Chicago Stadium. The three, Lee, Max, and Bob (left to right) captured championships a week ago. Lee, a welterweight, won for the first time but it was the third title for Max, a middleweight, and the fifth for Bob, a featherweight.

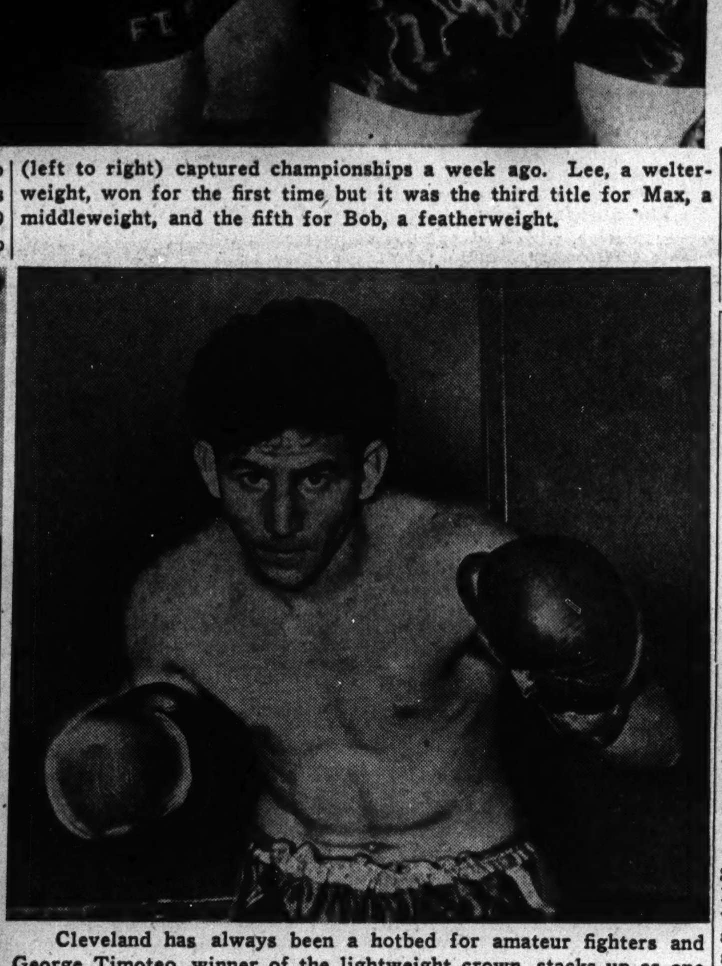
Sgt. Jim Donohoo, heavyweight from Truax field, who captured that title in the Milwaukee eliminations, also will carry the banner of the army air forces into the Chicago tests. He is a former St. Louis university boxer.

Sgt. Savior Canadeo, coach of the Truax field boxing team and former international Golden Gloves team captain, is grooming Pvt. Jackie Gibson, 118 pound Milwaukee champion, for his bouts in the Tournament of Champions in Chicago Stadium, Feb. 28, 29, and March 1. Gibson won the N. C. A. A. title in 1942 as a student at the University of Wisconsin. [Photo by A. A. F. Training Command.]



Cleveland has always been a hotbed for amateur fighters and George Timoteo, winner of the lightweight crown, stacks up as one of the best on the rugged Ohio team.

Hawks Bid for Victory Over Leafs Tonight; Cooper to Play

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Toronto Maple Leafs, who opened the Chicago hockey season on Oct. 31, tonight will say their season farewell to Chicago Stadium in a match with the Blackhawks. The Hawks, who must rise in the National Hockey league standings above their present fifth place, are basing hopes of victory tonight on the fact they have whipped the third placers in the last two meetings of the teams and are even with them in the season play, both here and in Toronto.

In four games here the Hawks have spanked the Leafs 5-3 and 3-2 and got spanked, 4-1 [in that season opener] and 5-2. In Toronto the Hawks have been victorious 4-1 and 4-3 and have been jolted, 8-4, 6-1. In taking the last two matches between the teams, the Hawks won here, 5-3 on Jan. 23 and in Toronto Jan. 29, 4-3.

Homecoming for Cooper.

The game tonight will be another of the series of Hawk homecomings which in recent weeks has seen the fans cheer the return of Goalie Mike Karakas and Defenseman Art Wiebe. Tonight Defenseman Joe Cooper, discharged from the Canadian army last Monday, will return to the Chicago lineup after a two year absence. He is reported in playing shape, having been a member of the Ottawa Commandos, champion army hockey outfit. Joe was a favorite of the fans as a player and has gained prestige even in absence as the discoverer of Bill Mosienko, the Hawks' forward flash.

Fido Purpur, right wing for the Hawks, who has been in Wesley Memorial hospital since Friday night for observation, is expected to be able to play tonight. Purpur was taken to the hospital following a reported kidney ailment.

The Hawks and the Leafs have been doing a bit of feuding in recent meetings. The last time the Leafs were here Fido Purpur and Don Webster got into a fist fight which drew major penalties for both and an added minor for Purpur. Previously the Hawks hadn't been penalized in 4½ games.

MICHIGAN BEATS NORTHWESTERN QUINTET, 50-45

Michigan wound up its Big Ten basketball campaign in Evanston Township High school's gymnasium last night in a highly satisfactory manner for the Wolverine cause, but the the 50 to 45 victory over Northwestern served to dash the Wildcats' hopes for undisputed possession of the Western conference championship.

As matters now stand, Northwestern, Purdue, Iowa, and Ohio State has each lost two games. Prior to lasst night's defeat, Northwestern had lost to Wisconssin in a double overtime game at Madison.

Score Tied in Half.

Playing without the help of Otto Graham, who departed last week for Colgate universsity to report for active duty with the navy V-5 unit, Northwestern was unable to attain the degrree of scoring in the first period that had carried the Wildcats thru its successful campaign. Michigan took a 13 to 6 lead early in the first period, but Northwestern rallied to earn a 25 to 25 tie at the end of the first half.

The Wildcats seemed to find the basket with a better degree of accuracy in the final period, keeping the score tied repeatedly until the waning minutes when Tommy King and Elroy Hirsch paced the Wolverines with a six point spurt which sent them out in front, 49 to 45. All Northwestern could do after that was a field goal by George Felt. Dick Schrider counted the final point for Michigan.

King Leads Wolverines.

King was high point man for the Wolverines with seven field goals. Felt led Northwestern with three field goals and four free throws.

Irish Defeat Sailors, 54-51; De Paul Wins

BY WILFRID SMITH.

(Picture on next page.)

The Notre Dame basketball team playing its last game for Coach Ed Krause, wiped out the stigma of an overwhelming defeat by Great Lakes a fortnight past by licking the Bluejackets last night in the Chicago Stadium, 54 to 51. The now unbelievable score of the first game was 84 to 48 in favor of the Bluejackets but last night, save for two brief second half rallies, Notre Dame had the drive to punch thru for victory.

It was Great Lakes' third defeat in 31 games and ended a winning streak of 21 straight. The attendance was 8,464.

De Paul whipped Western Kentucky State Teachers in the second game, 56 to 36, with nearly the entire squad taking part in the one sided contest. George Mikan, the Demons' 6 foot 9 inch center, retired after scoring 17 points when he suffered an injured ankle in a scramble under the backboard.

Perhaps, Notre Dame men remembered the football game last November when Great Lakes ruined a perfect season for the Irish. Maybe the drubbing in basketball was the incentive. It doesn't matter, but there have been few comebacks in sport to match last night's battle.

Klier, Rutledge Lead.

The service medals, however, must be awarded Leo Klier and Bernie Rutledge. Klier hit six times from the field and made six of his 10 tosses from the penalty line. Rutledge disorganized the Bluejackets' defenses with eight field goals, the majority from well out in the court.

Great Lakes apparently did not put on the pressure until the second half. The score of the first game may have been responsible for that, but in the closing minutes, after Great Lakes had achieved its second one point lead at 48 to 47, Notre Dame fought back furiously. Klier took the Irish back to the front on two penalty shots on Paul Armstrong's third personal foul.

Rutledge's eighth field goal made the gap five points. Then Armstrong got a penalty point but with a minute to go Don Smith, former Minnesota guard, committed his fourth foul and Kelly made good on two throws. Except for Bob Curtis' under the board goal, Notre Dame controled the ball in the last few seconds to win.

Irish Set First Half Pace.

Armstrong opened the scoring for Great Lakes with a field goal but this was the Bluejackets' only advantage of the half. Johnny Lujack tied the count almost immediately and the score then was deadlocked at 5 and 7 points with Great Lakes coming from behind in each case.

The Irish spurted with 10 consecutive points on five field goals. Klier led off on a follow up shot. Mark Todorovich came thru and John Kelly got a follow shot and repeated with a long goal. Klier ended the rally with another follow up goal. Don Smith's free throw on Todorovich's second personal made the score: Notre Dame, 17; Great Lakes, 8. The scoring now seesawed until Smith's set shot cut Notre Dame's lead to 20 to 13.

The Irish still led 29 to 20 with five minutes of the half remaining on Bernie Rutledge's shooting, but in the closing minutes Armstrong and Herman Schaefer found the range to cut Notre Dame's half time advantage to 31 to 28.

Smith was loose under the backboard for Great Lakes' goal opening the second half, but Rutledge scored twice in succession to make it 35 to 30. Great Lakes' rally finally pulled into a 38 to 38 tie. Armstrong sent the Bluejackets ahead for the first time since the start of the game and Kelly tied it at 40 to 40. For five tense minutes the teams raced up and down and Great Lakes smashed to the fore at 48 to 47. Then came Notre Dame's winning drive.

Easy Triumph for Demons.

Bob Gillespie and Jim Callis scored in the first minute to give Western Kentucky a 4 to 2 lead, but thereafter the game became a rout in the first half with De Paul finishing the period in front, 29 to 13.

Mikan counted two free throws to tie the score and after five minutes the Demons led, 8 to 6. Gene Stump and Jack Dean then hit twice each to widen the margin to 14 to 6. Jim Huter of Kentucky got three points but De Paul broke loose with 13 consecutive points to bring the count to 27 to 9.

The Kentuckians pulled up to trail 32 to 26 early in the second half, but thereafter were no match for the Demons who again spurted with 12 consecutive points. The victory was De Paul's 17th in 20 games.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 19 [Special].—Ohio State's basketball team defeated Illinois, 54 to 53, here tonight on two free throws by Dick McQuade with 20 seconds to play.

By closing with this victory, the Buckeyes earned at least a share of the Big Ten title with a final standing of 10 triumphs against two defeats and took over the conference lead as Northwestern lost to Michigan.

Ohio led virtually the entire game, but in the closing minutes Illinois shot in front, 51 to 46. Paul Houston, Don Grate, and Jack Dugger returned the Buckeyes to the front, 52 to 51. A basket by Stan Patrick with a minute left gave Illinois the edge, 53 to 52. Ohio tried four shots at the basket and missed, then McQuade sepped to the free throw line and delivered two points in the clutch.

PURDUE WINS OVERTIME

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19 [Special].—Wisconsin's hopes for a Big Ten championship were wiped out tonight when Purdue upset the Badgers in an overtime game, 52 to 50, after the regulation playing time had ended the count 45-all.

Coach Piggy Lambert's team was paced in the final 30 minutes of play by the sensational shooting of Paul Hoffman who rolled in nine baskets and nine straight free throws for a total of 27 points. The Badgers were kept in the ball game in the second half chiefly by the fine free throw work of Ray Patterson, who sank 10, and the rebound shooting of Don Dick, who garnered three in the final minutes.

The Boilermakers started their second team and played the Badgers even most of the first half which ended with Wisconsin on the long end of a 19 to 16 count. In the second half, Purdue lashed out with a fast break game and soon passed Wisconsin to take a 24 to 20 lead. The Badgers battled back gamely and fought in to a 26 all tie.

Badger Rally Fails.

Purdue again assumed a margin of three points but the Badgers put on a rush that sent them ahead, 35 to 32. The two teams battled even down the stretch and Wisconsin held a 45 to 43 margin with half a minute to play but Charlie Haag sank a one hander to tie the score.

In the overtime, Purdue quickly went ahead on Dennis Horn's flip shot from the free throw line and a free throw by Paul Hoffman. Ray Patterson made two baskets for Wisconsin before going out on personals but Horn garnered another free shot and Taylor a third to win the game. Score:

COLGATE WINS AS OTTO GRAHAM SCORES 19 POINTS

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 19 (AP).—Otto Graham, Northwestern's star athlete, made his naval basketball debut tonight, scoring 19 points to lead Colgate to a 53 to 49 victory over New York university—the Raiders' 10th triumph in 13 starts.

Graham, a V-5 trainee who was captain of Northwestern's five until he reported to Colgate Thursday, made nine baskets and one free throw and relayed four scoring passes.

The Home Front

BY MARK COX.

When the problem of man power in industry threatened to extend over into the organized basketball program this year three north side Y. M. C. A.s pooled their resources. The result was an 18 team league, the equal of which seldom existed in peace time, with the representatives battling for the supremacy of their respective North Avenue, Lincoln-Belmont, and Division Ys while still gunning for over-all honors.

Companies and their respective managers represented in the three-in-one circuit include: Division—Thordarson Electrics, Mitchell Stevens; Eicor Electrics, Dominic Ravanesi; Bendix Aviation, Fred Hubbard; Chicago Transformer, E. C. Woodside; Lincoln-Belmont—Scott Radios, Bob Clair; Victor Adding Machines, Herb Nannon; Quality Hardware, Bill Marshall; Bell & Howell, Al Hardt; Milwaukee R. R., Harry Wallace; North Avenue—Illinois Tool Works, Lyle Bennett; Chicago Latrobe, Sam Italia; Wilson's, Fred Rendazzo; P. & G., Mike Medley; Stewart-Warner, Bill Goldstein; Russell Electrics, Joe Capetty; Utah Radios, Ed Olson; Seeburgs, Vince Infante, and Standard Transformer, George Healy.

Award Individual Trophies to Top Two Teams from Each Y.

The league, which has surrendered only five players to the service since the season opened, includes individual awards for the top two teams from each Y, with the over-all trophys to go to the sponsors. A Big Six in scoring is recorded in the same fashion, and weekly compilations of the games, the schedule, and team and individual standings are issued.

One of the most novel and homey twists to the organization started recently in the form of homecoming games. Wilson's introduced the movement with 300 paying 25 cents to attend the program which included, in addition to two games, a splash party, dance, and refreshments. Chicago Transformer followed suit, as did Seeburgs and Eicor last week, and Thordarson's have their program planned for Tuesday night and Victor and Latrobe for Thursday.

Bruce Jagor, comptroler, and Fred Kosecki, credit manager of the progressive J. P. Seeburg concern, are Monday night regulars at the Marigold boxing shows. . . . Tom Sexton, one of the executives of the John Sexton wholesale grocers, is another industrial mogul who seldom misses a sporting event, while Henry Spanjer, the former boxer and wrestler who is president of Spanjer & Co., not only takes in all athletic events but still plays golf the year round despite his 60 years.

Illness Forces Mike Cavarretta to Abandon Basketball Work.

Mike Cavarretta, brother of the Cubs' Phil and the man who makes the Revere Copper & Brass recreation program operate, had to renege on most of an extensive basketball officiating schedule as the result of a wicked flu attack and a hip ailment that threw him for a 20 pound loss. Most optimistic industrial director in town would seem to be Fred Hubbard of Bendix, who already is worrying about competition for his baseball team.

From one front to another . . . Sgt. Benny Bruscato, the former manager of the Russakov Can company softball team, who answers to either Baldessaro or Mr. Five-by-Five, recently was enjoying to the utmost a furlough along New Orleans' Canal street when he made his way past Lt. Alex Waddell with no sign of recognition of his former Chicago acquaintance. . . . Further on down the street, Benny recovered in time to dash back after Lt. Waddell, shouting in his best Mardi Gras fashion. . . . When he finally caught up, he renewed his home town friendship with such gusto that Lt. Waddell's feminine elbow companion finally stalked off in disgust.

Bill Evans Stars with Aberdeen Basketball Team.

Bill Evans, the former 7-Up employe who played his basketball for the Kaye Sports, is with the 44th ordnance company at Aberdeen proving grounds, working in the identification office. . . . He's still playing the game with the top notch team on the post. . . . Chuck Minnice, formerly connected with the National Tea company traffic department and a handballer of better than average ability, has completed his boot training at Great Lakes. . . . Chuck was one of the first of dads with three youngsters to go while the draft boards "couldn't do that!"

The American Gear company team, Chicago's ranking industrial representative, with a 21 game winning streak, will meet the Illinois Tool works Tuesday night in the 8 o'clock game of Mount Carmel High school's basketball night. Top row, left to right, John Styler, Jim Zeravich, Joe Stampf, Vince McGowan; bottom row, Johnny Orr, Swede Roos, Shorty Heener, and Herb Ball.

Bert Metzger, the original watch charm guard in his days under Rockne at Notre Dame, is Evergreen plant manager for Bowman Dairy and still will dwell on any phase of football by the hour as long as his personal contributions are avoided. Bert, slightly more rotund than in his playing days, knows every man in the plant by his first name, and unanimously is greeted by them with, "Hi, Metz!"

STATE NORMAL WINS, 58 TO 47, OVER DE KALB

De Kalb, Ill., Feb. 19 (AP).—Frank Olivieri scored 21 points against his former teammates tonight to give State Normal a 58 to 47 victory over De Kalb Teachers.

Olivieri played with De Kalb last season and was transferred to Normal under the V-12 program.

De Kalb held a 27-26 advantage at half time and the score was close until the final four minutes.

SEE 21 CHICAGO NOMINEES IN '44 KENTUCKY DERBY

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

Chicago supporters of thorobred racing should have more than passing interest in the 70th running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs this year, for owners from the Chicago area will muster a probable representation of 21 nominees in the list of eligibles which will be announced within the next few days. This was indicated in a review of the candidates for the Arlington Classic and the American Derby.

In other words, 21 3 year olds which will campaign under the colors of residents of Chicago and its suburban area possess sufficient class, in the opinion of their handlers, to make them candidates for the $50,000 races which will be run during the coördinated meetings at Washington Park this summer. The presumption is, of course, that their owners also have made them eligible for the $75,000 fixture at Louisville on May 6.

Occupy Heads List.

Three of these Chicago horses distinguished themselves by winning stake races during the 1943 season. These are John Marsch's Occupy, leading money winning juvenile of the year, his stablemate, Jezrahel, and Warren Wright's Miss Keeneland.

Occupy won the Washington Park Futurity and the Belmont Futurity and ran second in four other stakes—the Primer, the Arlington Futurity, the Prairie State and the Breeders Futurity. Jezrahel scored in the Arlington Futurity at the expense of Occupy. Miss Keeneland won the Selima stakes at Pimlico and ran second to her stablemate, Twilight Tear, in the Arlington Lassie.

In addition to these, the list of Chicago nominees include four others which placed in stake events. Warren Wright's Pensive was third in the Champagne at Belmont; James Emery's High Harp was second in the Hyde Park at Arlington; Mrs. Al Sabath's Civil Liberty ran second in the Bashford Manor at Churchill Downs and was second in the Joliet stakes at Lincoln Fields, while R. W. McIlvain's The Man took place money in the Thomas K. Lynch Memorial at Pimlico.

Expect Other Nominees.

Other Chicago owned horses which are expected to appear on the list of Kentucky Derby nominees are Barrington stable's Gallant Bull, Brolite farm's Challenge Me, Warren Wright's Bull Weed and Easy Chance, James Emery's Sunnip, H. A. Herm's Hasty Message, Mrs. Edward McEvoy's Paragram, R. W. McIlvain's Old Kentuck and Native Fox, John Marsch's Wrightwood and Cloverland, Mrs. Al Sabath's American Flyer, and John Hughes' Free Transit and Overtime.

Experts agree that the best 2 year olds of 1943 were Pukka Gin, Platter, Occupy, and Lucky Draw, and that Durazna, Miss Keeneland, Boojiana and Twilight Tear were the tops in the filly ranks. And fillies, by the way, are going to be given more than ordinary consideration this year, particularly in the Kentucky Derby.

Dodds Easily Wins Baxter Mile in 4:08

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Gil Dodds, Bible quoting preacher from Boston, ran the Baxter mile in 4:08 tonight in the New York A. C. games in Madison Square Garden to approach the world indoor mark for the distance. The world mark and also the meet record for the event is 4:07.4 by a trio of runners.

Dodds had the race entirely to himself, building up a 10 yard advantage in the first quarter and finishing more than a half lap ahead of Rudy Simms of New York university. Jim Rafferty was third.

The winner traveled the first 440 yards in 58.6 seconds, reached the halfway post in 1:59.7 and the three-quarter mark in 3:03.3.

Much of the meet's pre-race interest centered on the Halpin half-mile in which Joe Nowicki of Rochester edged out John Fulton of San Francisco, but Dodds made the 13,000 spectators forget all about the absence of Bill Hulse, unable to compete because of a strep throat.

MARQUETTE WINS FROM DETROIT QUINTET, 45 TO 11

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19 [Special].—Marquette university's basketball team swamped the University of Detroit tonight, 45 to 11, as Howard Kallenberger led the Hilltoppers' attack with 14 points.

The Hilltoppers, who thus completed their season with a record of nine victories and six losses, took an early 11 to 0 lead and were in front at the intermission, 19 to 6. They increased that margin to 34 to 6 as the second half opened.

New Orleans $25,000 Race to Marriage

New Orleans, La., Feb. 19 (AP).—Coward and Dupuy's 8 year old gelding, Marriage, won the $25,000 added New Orleans handicap at the Fair Grounds today, beating out William Helis' Rounders by a nose.

The victory gave Marriage two triumphs in a row in the New Orleans' event, biggest stake of the winter meeting, and cost Jockey Jack Westrope a cool $2,500, the winning jockey's share of the proceeds. Westrope had originally signed to ride Marriage, but obtained his release to mount First Fiddle, which finished third, a half length back of Rounders.

Wins Race in Stretch.

Marriage swept around the course, gaining speed as he went.

At the half he moved up to second spot, then under a careful ride by Jess Higley made his bid in the stretch to overhaul Rounders which had been among the leaders from the start.

First Fiddle, the favorite, broke last in a field of 11 and, despite a powerful stretch kick, didn't have enough left to come thru for the bettors.

The winner paid $8 for $2, carrying top weight of 124 pounds over the mile and a sixteenth course. Rounders, flashy little Irish-bred refugee, paid $6 to place and First Fiddle returned $3.60 to show.

The winner's time for the distance was 1:45, more than a second slower than Marriage made it last year in tying Valdina Orphan's track record of 1:43 4-5.

Wagering Sets Record.

Today's betting on the handicap set a season record for wagering on an individual race, with the fans cramming more than $73,000 thru the mutuel windows on the feature and betting more than $360,000 on the eight race program.

Rounders was carrying 122 pounds, First Fiddle 120 and a sprinkling of the experts figured Marriage's load of 124 pounds would prove ruinous to the veteran campaigner.

Marriage's share of the purse was $18,775.

TODD FIVE WINS 4TH STRAIGHT LEAGUE TITLE

Capt. Ted McKee scored 11 points to lead the Todd school lightweights to a 28 to 25 victory over North Park yesterday in Woodstock for their fourth straight Private School league title. University High's 29 to 23 victory over Todd a week ago was the Woodstock five's only league loss in 10 starts and terminated a 44 game winning streak dating back three years.

Paul Jonz's basket gave the Todd heavyweights a 37 to 35 overtime margin to gain a tie for second place with University High, each with a seven and three standing.

In other league competition yesterday, North Shore won a double header from Wheaton academy, Dal Ward pacing the heavies to a 30 to 24 triumph after the lights had gained a 38 to 26 decision. Lineups:

MICHIGAN SWIM TEAM COLLECTS 72 POINTS, TITLE

Michigan won the Big Ten swimming championship in Northwestern's Patten pool last night by rolling up 72 points, the second largest point total in the 34 year old meet. It was the 14th time the Wolverines had won the title under the leadership of Coach Matt Mann, who was tossed into the pool by his elated charges at the conclusion of the meet.

Northwestern finished in second place with 42 points and Minnesota was third with 18. Other teams trailed in the following order: Purdue, 17; Ohio State, 15; Wisconsin, 3; Iowa, 3; and Illinois, 2. Indiana failed to place while Chicago was not entered.

Win 5 of 9 Events.

The Wolverines amassed their huge point total by winning five out of the nine events and placing in every event except the fancy diving. Capt. Charles Fries and Merton Church led the Wolverines in scoring with nine points each in addition to swimming on the winning 400 yard free style relay team.

The only double winner in the meet was little Keo Nakama, Ohio State's brilliant Hawaiian, who successfully defended his championship in both the 220 and 440 yard free style. Nakama didn't approach his record breaking performances of last year, but was not pushed in either event.

Michigan got off to a flying start by winning the 300 yard medley relay, the first event on the program, in a close finish from Northwestern. The Wolverines also scored heavily in both the 50 and 100 yard dashes. Church and Fries placed first and second in the 50 and reversed that order in the century, which Fries won in :52.2.

Trumble Wins Diving.

Michigan's other individual champion was Heinie Kessler, who nosed out John Walsh of Northwestern in the 200 yard breast stroke. Third place went to Edwin Robb of Minnesota. B. Walters of Iowa and Charlie Mack of Michigan finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Ronnie Trumble of Northwestern, who will be commissioned an ensign in the navy when he is graduated from the R. O. T. C. Tuesday, wound up his collegiate career by winning the fancy diving with a 358.4 point total.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

THE testimonial which Chicago's bowlers are planning for Vern Anderson, erstwhile Mystery Man, at the Eddie Costello's Pla-Mor Bowling Lanes, 1935 East 79th st., on the night of March 4, now is known to a few other citizens outside of Our Town. . . . One is Pvt. Earl Brosius, now stationed at Fort Custer, Mich. . . . Earl recently sent the following letter to Spotting The Pins: "I arrived here from Texas in time to read about the testimonial the bowlers of Chicago are going to hold for Vern Anderson. I've covered many miles in this country as a sports participant and since I entered the service, but as yet haven't found a city as capable as Chicago of giving the wholehearted support such a tribute deserves. It makes me very happy to know that such a true sportsman and great fellow is being honored.

"Last year I had the opportunity and pleasure of competing against Vern twice. It was then that I came to know what a fine sportsman he is. He defeated me in our first match, but in the second I was fortunate to be the first Chicagoan to hand him a setback. He was a real sport, in victory as well as in defeat, and I certainly hope he will be up and about before long, knocking pins all over the alleys."—The Anderson testimonial will include dozens of singles and doubles matches that the local tenpin clientele have hankered to see for years, with all of the stars donating their services. . . . Ticket reservations may be made by calling the Pla-Mor, Bayport 1080.

32 Teams to Bowl in Classic Sweeper at Cascade Tonight.

Phil Horton of Covington, Ky., rolled a 702 total off of games of 266, 222 and 214, on Feb. 25, 1943. . . . On Dec. 9, 1943, he came back with the same three games for another 702. . . . Just to make it interesting, he was forced to strike out for his 214. . . . Marie Lindell, with a series of 213 and Shirley Schoeneck, with high game of 214, were the Wednesday leaders in the Ladies' Major at Schalk's Evergreen Towers.

Thirty-two teams, highest in the history of the Classic league's Sunday sweepers, will gather tonight at the Cascade Center, 3825 W. Madison st. . . . The record is due largely to the new plan devised by Sweepstakes Manager Clarence Jackson, whereby individual as well as team prizes will be awarded. . . . Tonight there will be 16 team awards, ranging from first of $150 down to $30. . . . The individual prize list of seven runs from $96 down to $17.

The Meister Braus and Mineralites, running one-two in the Windy City league, do not anticipate too much difficulty in tomorrow night's schedule. . . . Their respective opponents are the Vogel Bros. and the Gep Rods. . . . Pvt. George Jensen of the army signal corps, former assistant manager of the Lake View alleys, paused here Friday evening en route from Camp Crowder, Mo., to San Francisco.

A "DUTCH" perfect game, in which the bowler collects a strike, followed by a spare, in every frame, giving him a total of 200, generally is regarded as rarer than a 300 performance. . . . Harold L. Wessel of the Lawrence Bowl, 1820 Lawrence av., reports that Joe Weisbaum of the Cummins Perforator league turned in a Dutch job last Tuesday on the No. 4 and 5 lanes at Lawrence bowl. . . . He proved his consistency by following the 200 with games of 202 and 204 for a 606 series.

One of the annual features of the Hall Printing company's league is a special match between two teams for the "Chump" title. . . . It regularly packs the 20th Century alleys with other plant employes, regardless of their own teams' place in the standings. . . . The battle this year, at 2 p. m. on March 11 at 20th Century, will bring together the Plate Repair crew and the 4 Color Line team. . . . Their respective captains are Muscles Maxwell and Slugger Whipple.

Bill Huston Hits High Scores in Hall Printing League.

Fishermen See No Chance for Big Smelt Run; Fish Killed Off

BY BOB BECKER.

There is little chance that fishermen around the Great Lakes will see a smelt run this year. The fish have been killed off in some mysterious manner so very few are left. The scientists and thousands of smelt fishermen who used to dip this once abundant food fish are stumped. No one seems to know what happened to the smelt and apparently the experts are no nearer a solution of the problem than they were a year ago.

We have seen countless thousands of smelt crowded into small streams near Escanaba, Mich., in the old days when the dip netters used to take tons of these little silvery fish in a night. In fact, we recall a visit one night around midnight to a river above Escanaba where trucks were lined up waiting to be loaded with fish. The dip netters in the streams near-by were making a real haul and also being well rewarded financially for their night's work because in those days smelt were being shipped all over the country. Even owners of fox farms were on the scene buying tons of smelt for fox food.

Adult Stock Wiped Out.

Seeing the size of the runs and knowing how prolific the Great Lakes smelt are, it was inconceivable that some disease would just about wipe out the adult stock. Yet that is what has happened.

Fred Westerman, chief of the Michigan conservation department's fish division, believes that if the juvenile fish were not affected by the plague which caused the death of adult smelt and prevented the run last year for the first time in 10 years, it's possible for the species to again be plentiful by the spring of 1945. If the young fish have been killed it will be a long time before we have another smelt run around here.

According to the latest report we have on smelt in the upper part of Lake Michigan, fishermen around Escanaba are catching just one or two pounds a week which is a ridiculously small quantity compared to the tremendous hauls of smelt that used to be made in former years. Commercial fishermen formerly fished thru the ice and made good money at this season of the year.

Needed for Food.

The unfortunate thing about the disappearance of the smelt at this time is that the country needs these fish for food. In fact, there never was a time when millions of pounds of edible smelt were ever needed more urgently in our food economy.

Smelt were first introduced in Michigan when 16,400,000 eggs were planted in Crystal lake in 1912, but the first fish were not observed until 1918 and the first time the species was caught was in 1923. It is believed that the Crystal lake population may have been the source of the smelt population in the Great Lakes and may help to propagate it again.

First Run at Beulah.

The first smelt run was at Cold creek, Beulah, and since then the species had increased in quantity and extended its range until last year's sudden disappearance. For several years the smelt ranked second in yield to herring production in the state.

The peak of all the runs was reached in 1942 when thousands of tons were caught, smelt carnivals were held in northern towns and everybody thought that there would be smelt galore every spring.

SPORTING GOODS BUSINESS FOR SALE
This will appeal to a sportsman who wants to combine business and pleasure, and also to the man who has a son now in the service for whom he wishes to guarantee a pleasant, profitable post-war existence.
We must sell complete assets, including own building, stock, fixtures, good will, of a solid, substantial, sporting goods business which has been established 20 years and has earned a comfortable income for three partners thruout the depression.
One of us is being drafted, advanced age is creeping up on another, and the third partner already has other interests. This will require an investment of approximately $50,000.

BARUCH PLANS HELD SOUND IN MAJOR ASPECTS

Industry Chiefs Call It Heartening.

Major recommendations contained in the "blueprint for post-war conversion," prepared by Bernard M. Baruch, chief of the war and post-war adjustment unit of the office of war mobilization, evoked favorable comment in business circles yesterday.

Paul G. Hoffman.

Its suggestions for encouragement of private, competitive enterprise were strongly indorsed by Paul G. Hoffman, South Bend, Ind., president of the Studebaker corporation and chairman of the Committee for Economic Development, which is primarily concerned with post-war problems.

"I feel very much encouraged by what has been accomplished by Mr. Baruch, Mr. Hancock [John M. Hancock, who collaborated with Baruch in the drafting of the recommendations], and their staff," said Hoffman. "I have not seen the full report, but on the basis of what has been published in the newspapers we have at least the outline of a program, altho it will need filling in and amplification.

Good, "as Far as It Goes."

"As far as it goes, it constitutes one of the most hopeful developments that we have had since the war started. It is a clear statement of principles and a definite indication that we propose to retain the system of private, competitive enterprise. While I cannot speak for the CED, as far as the committee's study of the transition period had proceeded, I find nothing in the Baruch recommendations but what gives us great encouragement."

Edward E. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, agreed at least in part with the conclusion that the lifetime of emergency government controls should be extended to cover such period as they are likely to be found necessary. Some control after the war and some government assistance in reconversion appear desirable, he said, adding that too rapid relaxation of control would involve great danger to the nation's economy.

"To illustrate, we might well remember that a physician in treating a morphine addict tapers off the use of the drug gradually," he said.

Terms Program Encouraging.

Russell G. Creviston, chairman of the post-war planning committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' association and director of trade relations for the Crane company, commended the program.

"Altho some features of the Baruch report are not fully in line with the views of the association's post-war committee, and tho there are certain important omissions, nevertheless, many of the principal recommendations are encouraging to industry," Creviston asserted. "Among the recommendations which will be heartening to Illinois industry generally are:

"1. Equitable treatment of war veterans and released war workers.

"2. Enactment now of a post-war tax law to encourage initiative and private investment in industry.

"3. Prompt adjustment of canceled war contracts.

"4. Adequate encouragement to small business.

"5. Emphasis on the vital importance of preserving free enterprise and keeping the government out of competition with private industry.

Emery Praises Tax Proposal.

"If our government officials promptly and conscientiously conform to these major recommendations, industry will not only be greatly encouraged in making commitments and plans for the post-war period but the prospects of unemployment and dislocation in the reconversion period will be greatly reduced."

De Witt Emery, president of the National Small Business Men's association, said he was especially pleased by the recommendation for a post-war tax law now.

"The tax law I'd recommend would be written for a minimum five year period," said Emery, "so that business men could plan on that basis instead of a new tax bill each year and in the latter part of the year, at that. Moreover, it would place a limit both on total corporation and individual tax burdens.

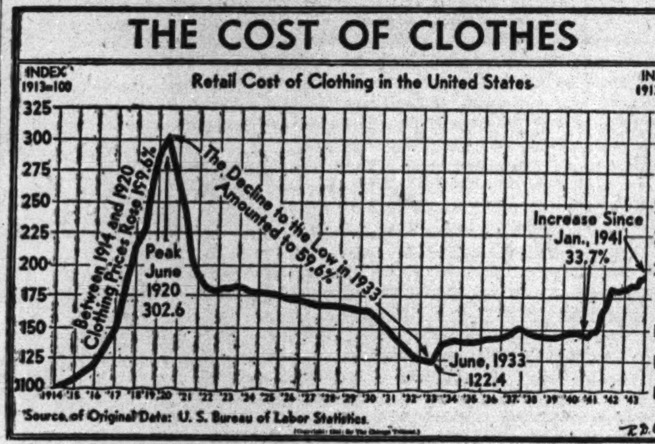
THE COST OF CLOTHES



Stocks Mixed by Additional Profit Selling

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—The stock market was irregular today after a week devoted to substantial buying of rails and scattered specialties. Few traders appeared today, but those who did pick up selected industrials and cashed further profits in the transportation group.

Indefinite war news and the Washington battle over taxes and subsidies again tended to chill purchasing sentiment. The Baruch reconversion program was liked, but it failed to touch off bullish enthusiasm.

Prices were ragged from the start and at the close the Associated Press 60 stock average was unchanged at 50.9. On the week it showed a net advance of 0.4. The rail composite, tho off 0.1 for the short session, held a gain of 0.9 for the six day stretch and closed at the highest mark since last July.

BOND MARKET SLUGGISH.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Except for a few rails and industrials that held firm, the bond market had a tendency to drop today on sluggish sales.

Hudson Coal 5s, turned in a net advance of 4¼ to a new high of 66¼ on total sales of $132,000. Peoria and Eastern Income 4s gained 3½ to 35 on fair turnover. Hudson and Manhattan income 5s and refunding 5s advanced to 30⅜ and 60, respectively, each gaining approximately a point in brisk trading. Rio Grande Western collateral 4s improved a point at 56⅜.

CHICAGO LIST DIPS AGAIN.

Prices continued to decline yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Transactions totaled 9,000 shares. Most active issues advanced fractionally, including General Finance, Standard Dredging, and La Salle Extension university, all up ⅛. New York Central lost ⅜. Three issues closed at 1943-'44 peaks. They were Consumers A which closed at 10, up 1; North West Utilities prior lien, 108, up 1; La Salle Extension university, 2½, up ⅛.

BELLANCA SALES NEARLY DOUBLE, PROFITS SLUMP

Sales of Bellanca Aircraft corporation during the year ended Dec. 31 increased to $6,222,492 from $3,855,072 in 1942, the company reported yesterday. Net income, however, declined to $242,598, equal to $1.05 a common share, from $690,835, or $3.01 a share. Provision for federal income taxes in 1943 amounted to $730,000, compared with $275,000.

Westinghouse Air Brake company reported a consolidated profit of $4,514,794, equal to $1.42 a share, in the year ended Dec. 31, compared with $4,232,910, or $1.33 a share, in 1942. Unfilled orders on hand at the close of 1943 amounted to $54,716,550, compared with $46,895,125 a year before.

BOND PREMIUMS.

Bond buyers are considered a more conservative and financially sophisticated group than investors generally, yet among bond buyers, including banks, there is a widespread aversion to paying a premium, reports a brokerage firm numbering many banks among its customers.

Because of this prejudice, the brokerage firm declares, high coupon bonds usually afford a higher yield than bonds carrying a lower coupon rate. This means, of course, that bond buyers, already forced to accept record low returns, may be overlooking opportunities to obtain somewhat better yields by reconsidering the real meaning of the word "premium."

The broker has defined it succinctly, as follows:

"The term premium as applied to bond prices merely indicates that portion of the price in excess of par. It has no more significance than any other part of the price paid. Discount bonds may be overpriced, while high premium bonds may be underpriced. The price of a bond, regardless of whether it is selling at 90, 100, 110 or any other figure, is only one of several factors that must be considered in determining whether it is desirable from the standpoint of comparable values.

"Bank bond buyers realize that there are comparatively few bonds that sell at par even at the time of the original offering, and that a high percentage of bond issues sell at premiums or discounts of varying size. When interest rates are low and bond prices are high, bonds previously issued with high coupons will sell at high premiums. This discussion of premiums is, of course, confined to government, state, municipal, and other noncallable high quality bonds where credit risks are not involved, or at least not to any appreciable degree. . . .

"It is evident if an investor wishes to purchase a 10 year bond and has a choice of several issues of the same quality and maturity but of different coupon rates, several different premiums or discounts must be considered. The buyer is then forced to a study of the yield afforded by each issue."

In ordinary commercial parlance a premium is an amount over and above the regular or established price. This connotation should not be carried over to the field of investments.

Reports on Employment Differ

Immaterial.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—War contract cancellations have released relatively few of the nation's 20 million munitions employes, the office of war information said today. And most of those released were quickly shifted to other jobs, OWI asserted.

"Rumors about impending contract changes have proved, in most cases, more confusing and disruptive than have the actual changes," the report said.

Even in areas where a labor surplus already existed, the OWI was told by the United States employment service, there have been more requests for the workers displaced by cutbacks than there are displaced workers available. However, most of the cancellations, said OWI, have been in areas where there was a critical demand for labor.

The report said the reluctance of displaced workers to leave a community often has hindered efforts to transfer them to jobs where they were needed.

Significant.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—The number of workers in manufacturing declined significantly in December for the first time during the war, Secretary of Labor Perkins reported today. She gave the increase in the form of average rate of hirings compared with average rate of separations.

The hiring rate, continuing to decline, was 5.10 per 100 employes, the lowest rate in 1942 or 1943. By contrast, the rate of separation—including layoffs, quits, and selective service withdrawals—was 6.39 per 100. In November the hiring rate was 6.51 and the separation rate was 6.29.

Layoffs grew in importance in December, the rate increasing from 0.70 per 100 employes to 0.94. Reflecting cancellation of contracts, the layoff rate for the small arms ammunition industry was 13.65.

Probe Living Costs Index, F. D. R. Asked

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—Labor members of the President's cost-of-living committee appealed to him today to investigate the bureau of labor statistics' publication of "an index which distorts the basic facts of our war time living costs."

Acting as a minority in the committee, George Meany of the AFL and R. J. Thomas of the CIO forwarded to Roosevelt the report they made public on Jan. 25 which contends living costs have risen at least 43.5 per cent since January, 1941, compared with about 24 per cent as shown by the bureau index.

They said they were acting because it appeared nothing could be expected from the full committee "for some months to come."

"Surprising," Says Chairman.

When he learned of the labor members' action, Chairman William H. Davis called it "surprising procedure." He added in a statement that the committee's investigative approach has been that suggested by the labor members.

As for the labor members' estimate of the rise in living costs, Davis said it "would be of no possible use until it is subjected to critical examination, since it is clearly a partisan report."

"Our report reveals," Meany and Thomas told the President, "that the bureau of labor statistics, with full understanding, has permitted its index to be used as a basis for measuring the rise in the cost of living. The bureau of labor statistics is aware of the fact that such use of its index reflects the gravest type of injustice that could possibly be perpetrated by it upon the American people.

Actual Rise Not Reflected.

"The very failure of the bureau of labor statistics to make clear that its index does not adequately reflect the realistic and actual rise in the cost of living subjects the bureau to very serious charges. For instance, the index of the bureau does not purport to reflect cost of living rises from increases in the price of foods not used by the bureau, elimination of low priced goods, upgrading, deterioration of quality standards, or the rising cost of restaurant meals.

"In all fairness to the American people we urgently request that there be an intensive investigation of the part that has been played by the bureau of labor statistics in the publication of an index which distorts the basic facts of our war time living costs."

65 CHICAGO AREA PLANTS GIVEN 82 WAR CONTRACTS

Sixty-five Chicago area companies last week were awarded 82 new war contracts, Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said yesterday. Five of the recipients appeared on the prime contract list for the first time.

Since war production began 14,503 publicized contracts have been assigned to 2,232 Chicago companies. These requisitions, Lyon said, have been more than balanced in number and value by subcontracts placed and contracts not disclosed for military reasons.

CROP PLANNERS MISFIRE, SHEEP PRICES CLIMB

Supply for Market Below Needs.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

The counting of sheep is interfering with the sleep of office of price administration price planners who are trying hard to devise a control which will prevent further advances in sheep prices. Price planners are disturbed because there are not as many sheep to count as they had hoped.

Sheep and lamb prices have been gaining for several months, and further advances are expected before spring, despite the fact that lamb, mutton, and wool already are held under price ceilings in wholesale and retail channels. Control of meat and wool prices depressed farm income from sheep to such a low level last summer and fall that feeding of stock for market was cut far below requirements of the industry. The result was the sharp upswing of prices in recent weeks, trade leaders explained.

Stumble on Own Problem.

The new problem in the lamb market is the creation of abnormally low prices brought on by crop planners themselves, members of the trade said yesterday. Price cutting was forced last year at a time when production costs on farms were rising and labor was hard to get, wiping out almost all price incentive to feed lambs, they explained.

The trade speculated yesterday on the method of price control the OPA has in mind for live lambs, which are not yet under direct control except thru meat and wool ceilings. A ceiling of $14.75 was clamped on live hogs last October over which no hogs can sell in Chicago. An elastic ceiling of $16 was placed later on cattle, based on monthly averages and not on top sales.

Big Rise in Three Months.

In three months the average price of lambs in the Chicago stockyards increased from $12.70 to $16.35, representing the sharpest three months' rise since 1929 and one of the biggest advances on record. Prices advanced last week for the eighth consecutive week and reached the highest levels in 15 years. The $16.95 top stood third highest for February since 1920 and $3.70 above the low point three months ago.

Production of lamb and mutton this month is 20 per cent under January and 53 per cent lower than in December, a survey of butchering at leading packing centers disclosed. Last week's receipts of sheep and lambs in the Chicago yards were at the lowest volume in eight months.

OUTPUT OF PULPWOOD GAINS, BUT SUPPLIES REMAIN BELOW NEEDS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—Output of pulpwood in the United States and Canada has exceeded estimates of last October by 18 per cent, but pulpwood supplies remain almost 3 million cords short of minimum war needs, WPB's combined pulp and paper committee reported today.

Basic 1944 pulpwood requirements were put at 23,597,000 cords, with available supplies for the year estimated at 20,956,000 cords. The overall deficit of 11 per cent in wood supplies represented an improvement over the estimated 27 per cent deficit last fall.

The report said the continuing deficiency in pulpwood supplies is still due to insufficient labor. The situation continues critical as withdrawals from inventories on the same scale as in 1943 are no longer possible, the committee said.

Repairs and Sideline Sales Keep Radio Shops Operating

Servicing of ailing radios and the addition of numerous sidelines have enabled retail radio dealers to keep in business despite lack of new equipment to sell, leading dealers said yesterday.

The position of radio dealers was said to be similar to that of auto dealers who have been able to survive thru operation of service departments and by other ingenious stopgaps.

Dealers handling products of better known companies have had a much higher survival record than those selling lesser known radios, it was said.

Most Dealers Still in Business.

One of the best known companies estimated approximately 80 per cent of its dealers remain in business. A spokesman for the Zenith Radio corporation said that of 625 dealers in the Chicago region in business before the war approximately 610 are operating.

On the west coast a survey showed approximately 23 per cent of radio dealers have been forced to close, it was reported.

One of the greatest difficulties with which radio service men have had to contend has been the shortage of tubes and parts. Such large quantities of these supplies have been taken for war that little has been available for civilian use. The government recently announced the release of 4½ million tubes for civilian use, but this number was said to represent only a small number of those actually needed to put faulty receivers into good condition again.

As in the case of auto service departments radio service men have had to use the utmost in ingenuity to repair sets. To get parts dealers have been buying every old set available.

New sets have practically disappeared from the market, but some dealers have been able to do fair business selling used radios. In addition dealers are selling phonograph records, small household furnishings, paints, linoleum and other sidelines.

Radio Retailing, monthly radio trade journal, reported a reversal of the trend which has seen many dealers close in the last two years. A survey which the magazine made disclosed an upturn in many areas. Its findings were:

Number of Shops Gains.

"Gains in number of radio businesses are seen in New York City; Birmingham, Ala.; Dover, Del.; sections of Maryland and Norfolk, Va. San Francisco, where radio shop mortality was heavy early in the war, is experiencing new life and many new shops are opening.

"The dealers and services now in business are, for the most part, staying put. Business is very good and it is safe to say that few, if any, radio men are closing for financial reasons."

New Synthetic May Result in Improved Tire

Akron, O., Feb. 19 (AP).—A new synthetic rubber, said to have some properties lacking in the GR-S type now making up the bulk of synthetic produced in the United States, has been developed in the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company's Akron research laboratory.

Announcement of the new rubber will be made next week along with the disclosure of improved methods of milling and processing GR-S rubber and the discovery of two new accelerators which speed up the rate of vulcanization of GR-S.

More Resistance to Cuts.

The new synthetic, according to Dr. L. B. Sebrell, director of the laboratory, may result in better automobile tires than can be made from GR-S rubber, because of greater energy resilience and higher resistance to cut and tear tendencies. In that respect, Dr. Sebrell said, the new synthetic is superior to GR-S.

He cautioned, however, that it has not yet been developed to a point where it will show high tensile strength at high temperatures and that one of its ingredients is expensive to make.

Test Tires Being Made.

Test tires now are in process of manufacture and will be given road tests as quickly as possible, Dr. Sebrell said.

He added that another type of synthetic had been developed that could replace natural rubber in applications other than tires for which GR-S rubber cannot be used successfully, such as in the manufacture of paints, lacquers, bonding compounds, and adhesives.

GRAIN FUTURE PRICES ARE LIFTED RAPIDLY WHEN SHORTS COVER

Heavy short covering developed in wheat and rye futures on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday following reports distillers had started to use moderate amounts of rye. Estimates were that 10 to 12 million bushels may be required by distillers in the next six months. Commission house liquidation ended and prices advanced rapidly.

Closing trades were near the top. Wheat gained ⅞ to 1¼ cents a bushel. Rye was ⅝ to 1½ cents higher. Oats finished unchanged to ⅝ cent higher. Barley was dull, but closed ⅞ to 1⅛ cents higher.

Trade in wheat and rye futures was active for a week-end with many of the professional operators who sold Friday evening up their market position.

WAY IS CLEARED FOR SUBSIDIES PLAN APPROVAL

Predict Extension of CCC's Life.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19 (AP).—A simple resolution extending the life of the Commodity Credit corporation another year seemed all that was needed today to clear the way for the administration's food subsidy program, which, under present plans, would cost approximately 1 billion 400 million dollars this year.

Despite refusal of congress to grant the CCC 500 million in additional funds requested by War Food Administrator Marvin Jones, the agency has sufficient money, officials said, to finance all subsidies now contemplated.

The administration's proposed 1944 food subsidy program would cost the CCC 750 million to 900 million, the final amount depending on the volume of food production, and the Reconstruction Finance corporation approximately 500 million for price "roll back" subsidies on meat, butter, and flour.

CCC's Extension Foreseen.

Congress is expected to pass legislation, possibly next week, extending the CCC until June 30, 1945, and leaving it unrestricted as to subsidies. Such action would follow failure of anti-subsidy bloc to make a ban against such payments stick. A prohibition against subsidies was attached to another measure extending the CCC, but that measure was vetoed yesterday by President Roosevelt and the veto was sustained by the house.

Inasmuch as both the administration and the subsidy opponents favor the farm price support operations of the CCC, both are expected to support a new resolution extending the agency, minus the subsidy ban.

However, the anti-subsidy forces apparently have not given up the battle. Their leaders say they hope to attach a similar bar against subsidies to legislation extending the office of price administration beyond June 30. Such legislation is expected to come up for consideration within a few weeks.

1 Billion Not Earmarked.

Meanwhile, CCC officials made a quick check of their agency's financial position and reported that more than 1 billion of its 3 billion checking account is not earmarked and hence is available for farm price support and subsidy operations.

CCC subsidy programs cost approximately 400 million last year. Under present plans they would be increased by possibly 500 million this year, largely thru the addition of a new milk subsidy program and increased subsidy rates on a number of commodities.

The 500 million in additional funds requested by Jones would have been held principally for an emergency reserve to support farm prices should the war end suddenly and commodity prices tend to break.

216 MORE HOMES BEING BUILT IN JEFFERY MANOR

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Work has been started on 216 more duplex war home units in the Jeffery Manor development in South Chicago, Carroll F. Sweet, new president of the Jeffery Manor Building corporation, announced yesterday. With 112 other duplex units nearing completion, and 444 units previously completed and all rented, Jeffery Manor will have 772 homes and an estimated population of 3,628 persons by next fall.

Carroll F. Sweet. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Construction in Jeffery Manor, which covers much of the area bounded on the north by 75th st., on the west by Van Vlissingen rd., on the south by 102d st., and on the east by Hoxie av., began early in 1942. The newest section [site of the 216 duplex units] is bounded on the north by an alley just south of 75th st., on the west by Yates av., on the south by 99th st., and on the east by Hoxie av.

Both for Rent and Sale.

The war homes to be erected in this area all will be of brick construction, five rooms each, designed by Architect Carl J. Kastrup. They will be both for rent and for sale. Rents will be from $50 to $56 monthly, depending on whether the builders can get kitchen stoves and refrigerators. The selling price will be $6,000 for each unit. When amortized under the federal housing agency plan the monthly payments will be $40 for 25 years. This includes principal, interest, taxes, and insurance. All are being financed thru Dovenmuehle, Inc.

According to Nathan Manilow, president of Harris Homes, Inc., the builder of Jeffery Manor, and vice president of Jeffery Manor Building corporation, priorities have been granted for construction of the proposed shopping center at 95th st. and Jeffery av. The first unit of the store group will be built on the east side of Jeffery, between 75th and 76th sts., as soon as weather permits.

Public School to Be Built.

A public school is to be built on the block bounded by 99th and 100th sts., and Crandon and Luella avs., with competion scheduled for the opening of classes next September, Manilow said.

The entire Jeffery Manor development will be a self-contained community within the Chicago limits. It was designed by the Chicago plan commission in collaboration with FHA. Winding streets will take the place of the old fashioned checkerboard layout; park areas are provided, and individual landscaping for each duplex home is planned.

The project is within walking distance of some of the big war plants of the South Chicago area.

Duplex War Homes

A typical duplex building, containing two war home units, erected by Harris Homes, Inc., at the northwest corner of Merrill and 96th st., in Jeffery Manor. Designed by Carl J. Kastrup, it is being used as a model house and is open to the public.

'Prefab' Home Cost Too High, Says Student

Carl Boester, housing research executive of the Purdue Research Foundation, which has been studying ready built homes for years, told Chicago architects that "pre-fabrication is in the diaper stage." He spoke on "What's Ahead for Prefabrication" at a meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, at the Tavern club.

It wont grow up until a reduction in amount of materials and parts and cost is effected, he said. At present the pre-fabricated house costs about the same as the orthodox residence. The thousands of government biult pre-fabricated units are costing 20 per cent more than ordinary construction, he said.

"My guess is that pre-fabrication is going to have an orderly growth rather than a revolutionary development," Boester said. "Huge financial interests already are flirting with the industry.

"The largest order so far given in the pre-fabrication field — for 3,000 for one type — is not enough to make any contribution toward cost reduction by mass buying. There will have to be orders for 300,000 to bypass the problem of distribution."

TALKS ON ZONING SCHEDULED FOR LOOP MEETINGS

Suburban zoning and planning will be dsicussed at two loop meetings this week. Robert Kingery, general manager of the Chicago Regional Planning association, will discuss county zoning at a luncheon in the Union League club at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday. The meeting is sponsored by a club committee headed by P. L. Crawford of Glen Ellyn.

Robert Kingery.

Kingery also will speak at the 20th annual meeting and election of the regional association in the Palmer house Thursday. His subject will be "Nineteen Years of Regional Planning Progress." Alexander Marshall, Glencoe, village attorney, will speak on "Fundamental Objectives of Zoning." Both will speak at the first afternoon session. Municipal zoning problems will be discussed at a round table session to follow. Problems of unincorporated areas will be considered at a morning session.

DRAW PLANS FOR 40 HOMES NEAR SCHILLER PARK

Road making and landscaping are under way on 25 acres of the 100 acre Indian Park estates, just west of Schiller Park, George Manus, president of the Lake Shore Realty company, said yesterday. Plans and specifications are being drawn by the architect, H. Clyde Miller, for 40 homes to be built, as soon as priorities can be obtained, in the area which will be known as the Douglas Gardens addition. All but the corner homes will be one story, five rooms, and full basement units. The others will be two stories. All will be rented to war workers.

North-Pulaski Corner Is Sold for $200,000

The two story business block at the southwest corner of North av. and Pulaski rd., bought by Dorothy Dunn, trustee, from the Marshall Field estate, last August for $170,000, has been sold by her to the Pioneer Trust and Savings bank, trustee, for $200,000. Oliver S. Turner, vice president of Baird & Warner, represented the seller, and Robert E. Nicholas, the buyer.

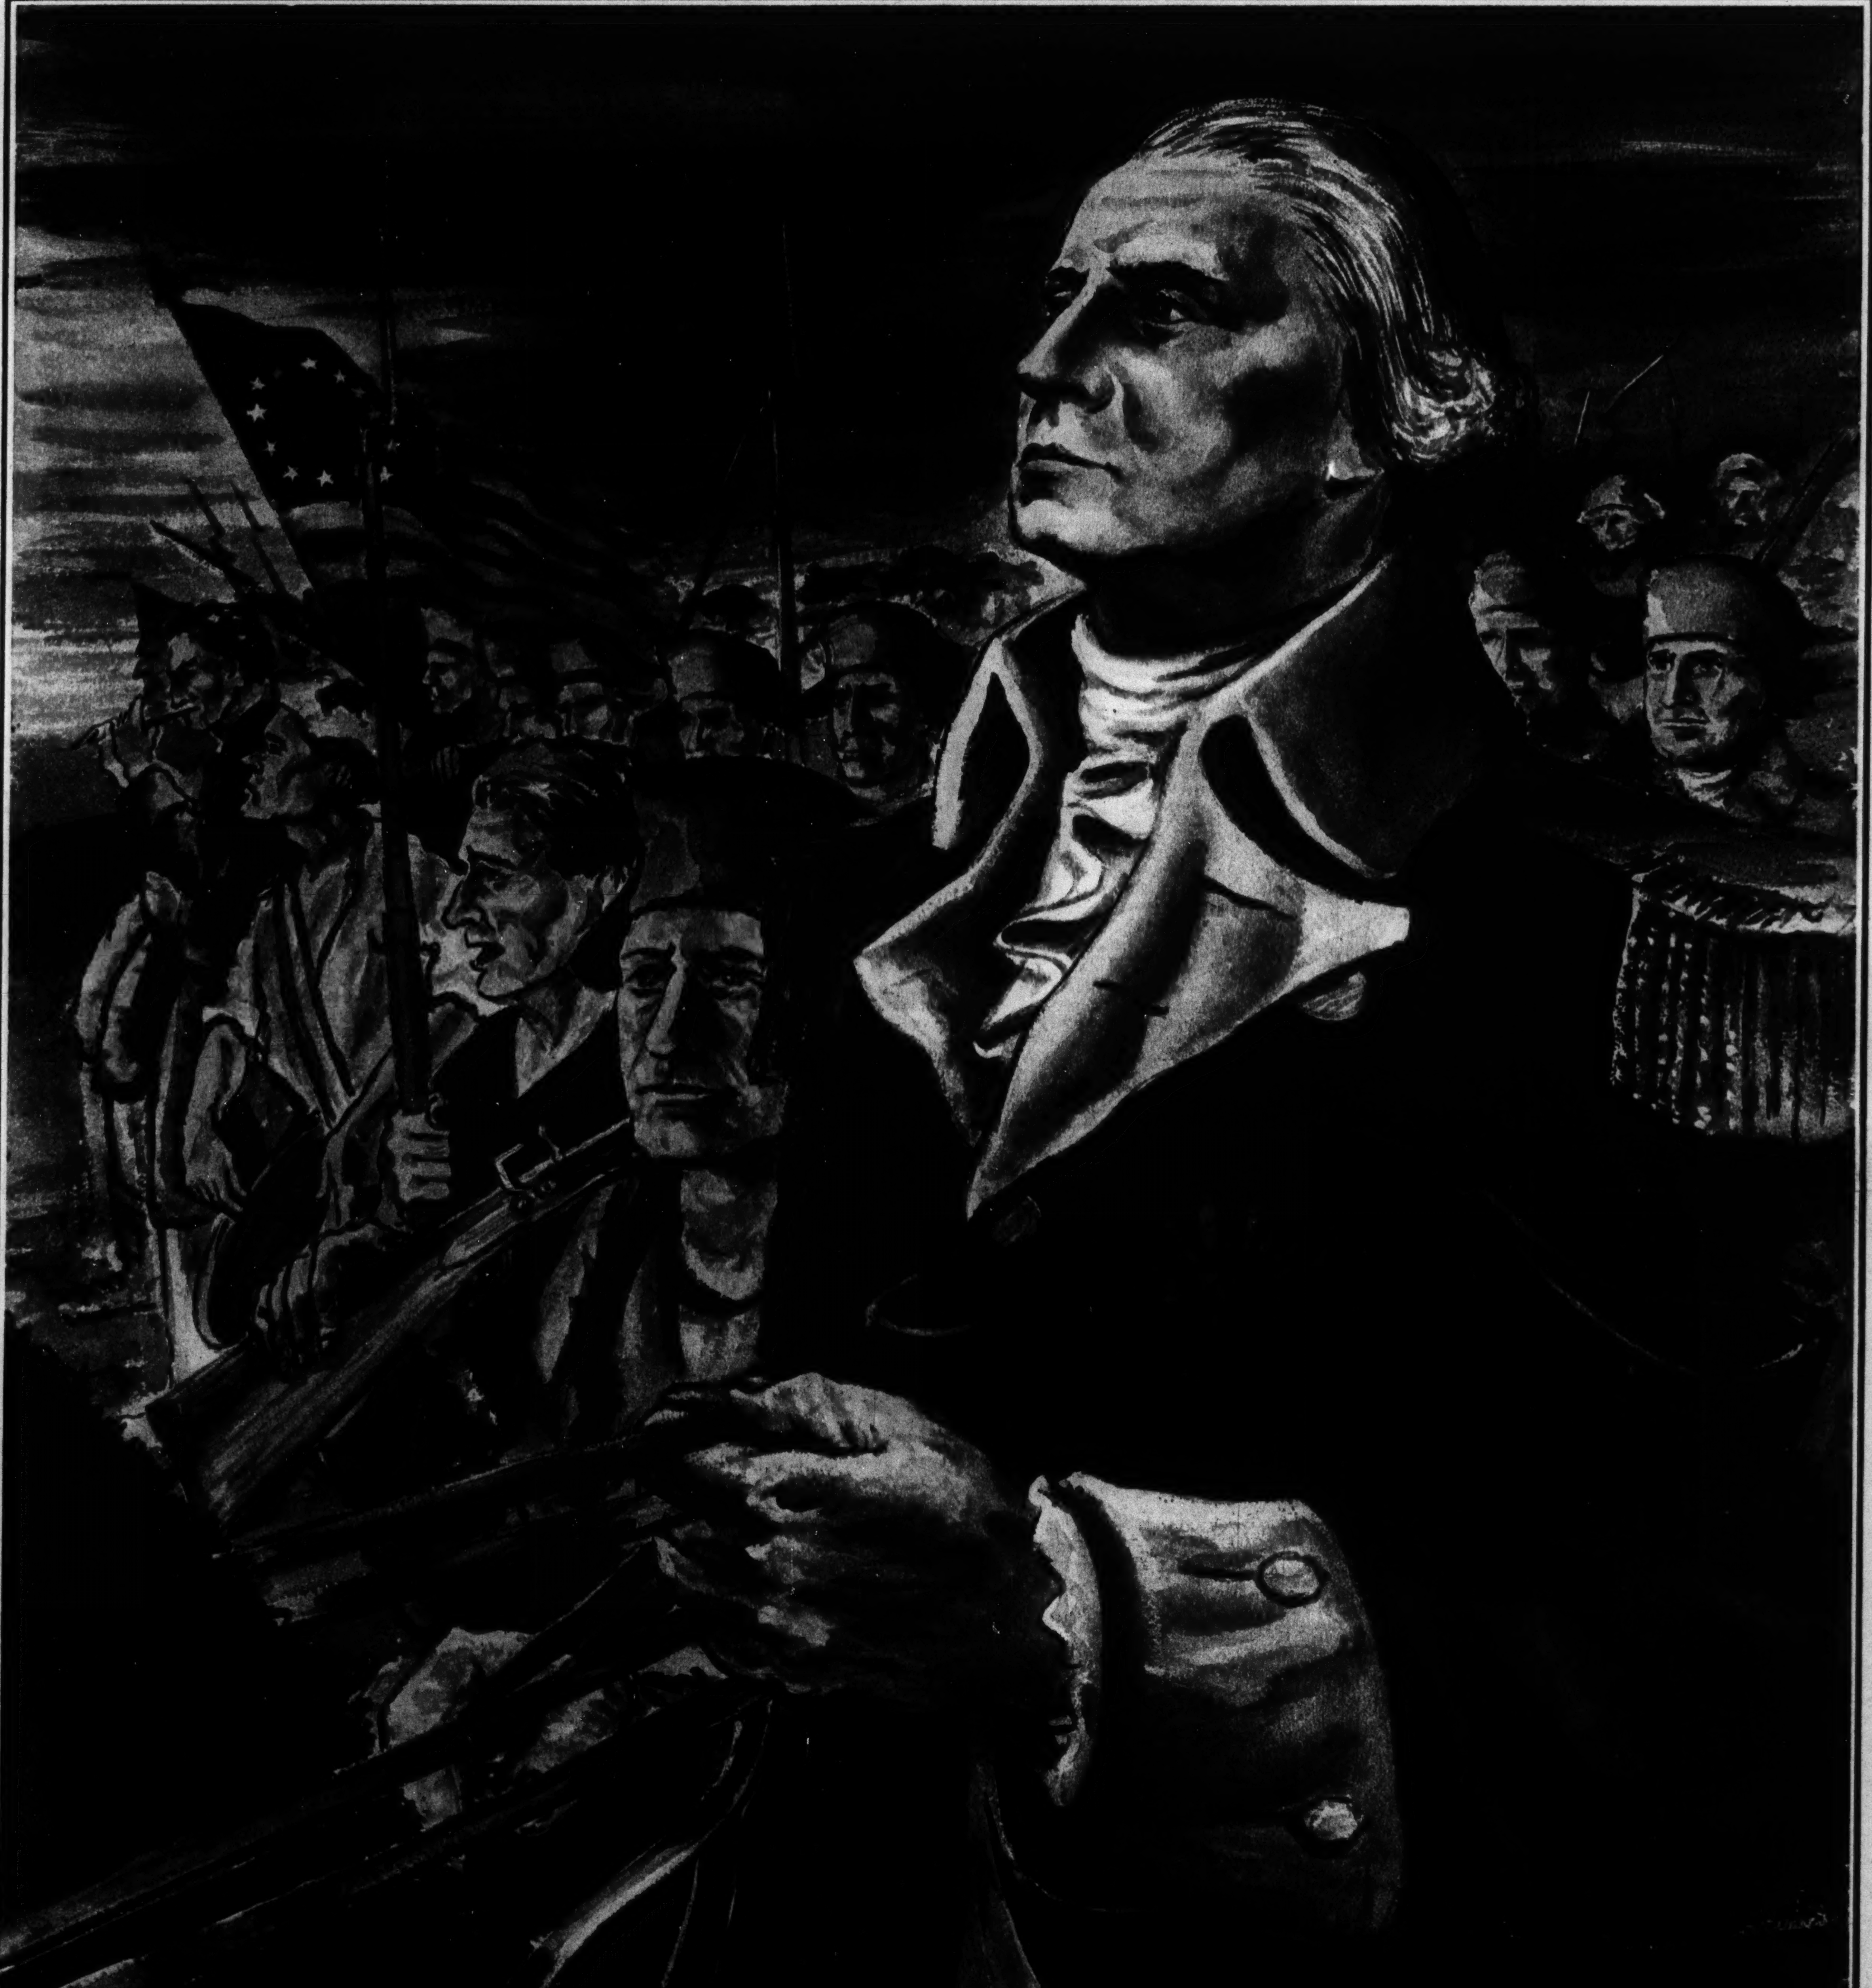
GEORGE WASHINGTON

GRAPHIC SECTION
Feb. 20, 1944



This illustration by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, another in the series of ROMANTIC FIGURES OF AMERICAN HISTORY, was based, after extensive research, on the famous statue of Washington by Houdon.

An Appraisal of Washington—By Thomas Jefferson

I THINK I KNEW General Washington intimately and thoroly; and were I called on to delineate his character it should be in terms like these:

His mind was great and powerful, without being of the very first order; his penetration strong, tho not so acute as that of a Newton, Bacon, or Locke; and as far as he saw, no judgment was ever sounder. It was slow in operation, being little aided by invention or imagination, but sure in conclusion. Hence the common remark of his officers of the advantage he derived from councils of war, where, hearing all suggestions, he selected whatever was best; and certainly no general ever planned his battles more judiciously. But if deranged during the course of the action, if any member of his plan was dislocated by sudden circumstances, he was slow in readjustment. The consequence was that he often failed in the field, and rarely against an enemy in station, as at Boston and York. He was incapable of fear, meeting personal dangers with the calmest unconcern.

Perhaps the strongest feature in his character was prudence, never acting until every circumstance, every consideration, was maturely weighed; refraining if he saw a doubt, but, when once decided, going thru with his purpose, whatever obstacles opposed. His integrity was most pure, his justice the most inflexible I have ever known, no motives of interest or consanguinity, of friendship or hatred, being able to bias his decision. He was in every sense of the words a wise, a good, and a great man. His temper was naturally high-toned; but reflection and resolution had obtained a firm and habitual ascendency over it. If ever, however, it broke its bonds, he was most tremendous in his wrath.

In his expenses he was honorable but exact; liberal in contributions to whatever promised utility, but frowning and unyielding on all visionary projects (Continued on page three.)

Bert Leston Taylor

This is the last of a series of three reminiscent articles about Bert Leston Taylor, the man who more than four decades ago founded The Tribune's column called "A Line o' Type or Two."

By DELOS AVERY

INVOCATION

O Comic Spirit, hovering overhead,
With sage's brows and finely tempered smile,
From whose bowed lips a silvery laugh is sped
At pedantry, stupidity, and guile,—
So visioned by that sage on whom you bent
Always a look of perfect sympathy,
Whose laugh, like ours, was never idly spent,—
Look, Spirit, sometimes fellowly on me!
Instruct and guide me in the gentle art
Of thoughtful laughter—once satyric noise;
Vouchsafe to me, I humbly ask, some part,
However little, of your perfect poise.
Keep me from bitterness, contempt, and scorn,
From anger, pride, impatience, and disdain.
When I am self-deceived your smile shall warn,
Your volleyed laughter set me right again.
Am I inspired to mirth or mockery,
Grant, Spirit, that it be not overdrawn;
And am I moved to malice, let it be
Only "the sunny malice of a faun."

AT THE beginning of this series we said that B. L. T.'s column was dedicated to "the gentle art of thoughtful laughter," and that the quoted words were from his own "Invocation." In reproducing now the whole of that poem the purpose is to let the reader judge how nearly the life and written words of the poet were its answer.

B. L. T. died of pneumonia on March 19, 1921, and his last two columns were written on his deathbed. If his thoughts were then of death there was nothing in his paragraphs to show it. On the contrary, the tone was one of impatience to be well again. His choice of subjects bespoke a robust interest in life and the future.

One paragraph, printed eight days before he died, began: "Having scraped together enough money to pay the first quarter of our income tax . . ."

Another dealt with world affairs:

"The allies have sought to convey the idea that the Germans were the vanquished, but the idea penetrates slowly."

He thought of the changing Chicago scene, the new Michigan avenue bridge replacing the one that used to swing on a central pivot at Rush street, so that a lazy stroller could step aboard at either end when the swing began and get a free ride around to the opposite shore. He wrote:

"If we had as large an estate as many of our friends have, we'd buy the dear old Rush street bridge and use it to span a duck pond."

• • •

The column that day, the penultimate column, did mention the writer's illness—but lightly, as a man speaks of momentary annoyance. It began this way:

"A piano house advertises: 'In order to comply with our contract of eight inches per week we are compelled to pay for this space whether we wish to use it or not.' That, while zero in advertising, gives us an idea; and an idea, when one is wrestling with bronchitis, is worth its weight in platinum. To wit: In order to comply with our contract of a column a day with this great family newspaper, we are compelled to fill this space whether we feel like it or not."

And here is the last of all the famous B. L. T. last lines, printed on March 13, and printed again at the bottom of an otherwise unoccupied memorial column to the right of the editorials on the day his death was announced. It was a gallant last Last:

"You know the infallible sign of spring: father on the back porch, cleaning last fall's mud from his golf shoes.—B. L. T."

Thus he made his column tingle with life to the end, tho it was more than his physicians could do for him.

But if it was characteristic of Taylor to direct his thoughts resolutely lifeward when he was dying, it had also been his characteristic to think seriously and beautifully about death when it seemed remote. Remember his exquisite "East Window" essays? They were published posthumously in book form by Knopf in 1924, but faithful readers of the Line knew many of them, and treasured them in scrapbooks, while their author lived.

It was at his "East Window" that B. L. T. freed his fancy for those long flights that went among the stars. From that window he could see "constellations cross the watery horizon line and swing across the sky. Star-rise and Star-down! There are times, one being in the mood, when these things seem as important as the daily doings on our planet's crust."

One of these essays began:

"As there is nothing between our East Window and the rim of the world, it is a target for the sun's first arrows, and on winter mornings it is a cheerful window to sit by. Street noises are few. By night even these are gone; and there are long stretches of stillness — not the less still for the grave ticktock of the tall clock . . ."

• • •

In another he wrote enviously of "a Chicago gentleman standing on the beach at Colon in the hour before the dawn," and how, "thinking only of the train for Panama, raised his eyes suddenly and for the first time saw the Southern Cross."

At the East Window smoothed away whatever harshness might creep into his thinking. It was there he wrote:

"I am glad to meet a man who differs with me in almost everything, from macaroons to immortality. He may for the moment riddle my philosophy of life, unsettle long settled beliefs, uproot the flowers of faith; but one is the better for such convulsions. . . . It is wise now and again to question old faiths, old opinions, old prejudices. One need not fear the inventory. What is good will assuredly be retained; what is rejected will make room for something worthier."

He liked to let his memory bring old poems to him at the East Window — other poets' poems, lines from Yeats —

The silver apples of the moon,
The golden apples of the sun.

"What does it mean?" he said. "What does the Brahms Intermezzo, opus 116, No. 4, mean? . . . Both are music. . . . If you can read the one and hear the other without instant appreciation of exquisite beauty, then this music is not meant for you. . . ."

He reconciled the contrasts of life at the East Window.

"A man lives two existences," he said, "the one emotional, imaginative, the other matter of fact. They are best kept separate, if one values peace of mind."

Cloudless nights, opening the whole sky to his vision, and inviting his mind to travel even farther, pleased him best, and he loved to see "the Pleiad sisters quiver palely forth, leading the most brilliant of the constellations."

A curious comfort reached him at the East Window, where the vastness of the visible universe gave a new and meaningful perspective to his reflections on the life of an individual man. It was there he transcribed for the Line a passage from Barbellion's "A Last Diary":

"Christmas Day, 1918

I am happy to think that, like a pilot hard aport, Death is ready at a signal to conduct me over this moaning bar to still deeper waters. After four years of war, life has grown cheap and ugly, and Death—how desirable and sweet! Youth now is in love with Death. . . . How terrible if life had no end."

"The oddest letter in a mail that brings many odd letters came to hand a few days ago. It was written in pencil, on the stationery of a Kansas hotel, and the name signed was unfamiliar; but the writer mentioned that he had sent me many squibs under different aliases. 'But no more,' he added. 'The Doctor says I shan't live till morning.'

"Along with this communication was another from the nurse, relating that the young man had died that evening from injuries received in a wreck. His request had been that the pencilled note be forwarded. 'For he said,' wrote the nurse, 'that you would surely have a tear for one who had contributed so many things to your column.' To withhold that passing tribute one must be unemotional indeed. Would that a farewell might have accompanied it!

"A strange letter, but a note of depression was not in it; instead, a fine tone of resignation. The writer had 'lived by the way,' and had known the lights and shadows, and had found it a good way. There was no resentment, no complaint, beyond the line, 'It is hard to go at thirty.' And it is hard to go at thirty. It is not so hard at forty, and it becomes less hard as the seasons pass in their cycles, and dissolution loses, for most of us, its early terrors. He who has ordered his life well may repeat, and believe while repeating, those fine lines of Henley's:

A summer night descending cool and green
And dark on daytime's dust and stress and heat;
The ways of Death are soothing and serene,
And all the words of Death are grave and sweet.

B. L. T. had thought much, and thought at leisure, about the voyage into death before the time came for his own embarkation. He had even built a hope concerning himself and death.

"When I am bidden to the journey thru the Narrow Vale," he wrote, "I hope the message will come, not in the summer, but in the spring."

And it was so.

For one day after his death his column in The Tribune was a black-bordered white space, save for the top caption, with its "Hew to the line; let the quips fall where they may"; and the repeated "last last line" at the base.

• • •

On the following day the space was filled with selected poems which had appeared before. And for several days after that it was occupied with memorial tributes from gifted men and women who for years had been more eager to "make the Line" than to sell their writing in markets offering cash but less "glory."

Even when it was decided that, like "the show," the Line must go on, it went on at first with no other signature than "Anon."

A week after the funeral there was a great memorial meeting at the Blackstone theater under the auspices of the Cliff Dwellers club and The Tribune, with Karleton Hackett presiding. The Flonzaley quartet, favorite musical group of the columnist, who called it "blessed," played Brahms' music. Charles Collins, present conductor of the Line, was on the committee, with other old friends of B. L. T., including Ashton Stevens, Henry Kitchell Webster, Tiffany Blake, Clifford S. Raymond, Guy Hardy, Arthur Bissell, Payson S. Wild, and Karl Edwin Harriman. Joseph Medill Patterson of The Tribune made a speech in which he expressed the belief that B. L. T. at the time of his death was "the greatest newspaper man in America."

The words were spoken at a moment when grief was new and acute, but they still seem true to one who has recently spent many hours sitting in the file room high in the Tribune Tower, looking down on B. L. T.'s loved city, turning the yellowed pages B. L. T. adorned.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By Andrew B. Hecht, Ph. D.

SHOW the men and women in the army or navy that you haven't forgotten. Send them snapshots from home.

A picture of a favorite relative, friend, dog, or cat, or even of a room, means so much to one who is stationed far away, perhaps overseas. It brings a breath of home to the man or woman who receives the picture and is more valuable than a gift of money.

Don't let the fact that you are not an expert stop you from taking a picture for your service man or woman. Expensive and elaborate equipment is entirely unnecessary for snapshot photography. You don't have to take a professional studio picture. In fact, the more informal the shot is the better it will be liked.

An old box camera that works and a roll of film will do the trick. You can even use ordinary room lighting if you like. Naturally in this case you will need to take a time exposure. Get the fastest panchromatic film you can buy to cut down exposure time. You will have to use a tripod on which to keep your camera stationary for the required seconds of exposure. If you don't own a tripod or can't borrow one, prop your camera on a box or several books or brace it against the back of a chair so that it is steady while the picture is being taken.

A candid shot of the young son or brother is an excellent morale builder for that service men of yours.

Your subject should be well lighted. If you are taking a portrait make certain that you light both sides of the face to eliminate unattractive shadows. Table lamps held close to the subject will provide sufficient light. If you want more, a sheet or towel held out of the camera range by some one will reflect sufficient light to fill in dark areas.

• • •

You'll have to experiment a little with exposure. With a box camera the lens opening should be the largest possible. If you get the fastest available roll film you can take time exposures in 10 to 15 seconds when you are within 10 feet of your subjects. Make your exposure longer for films with slower speeds.

If you happen to have flood lamps available you can take pictures with a box camera and the fastest film without a time exposure. A No. 1 or No. 2 bulb placed 3¼ feet from your subject will light up the scene so that the picture can be taken with a snap of the shutter. If you use two No. 2 lamps place them about 5 feet from the subject.

Those who have flash equipment can take pictures without any difficulty. Flash bulbs, along with flood lamps, can be purchased without priority ratings. Therefore it is possible to use both open and synchronized flash for taking pictures for soldier boys and girls.

The open flash technique is simple. The flash bulb is inserted in the flash gun, the camera is set at bulb opening, the shutter is opened, flash bulb discharged, and the shutter closed. Synchronized flash technique requires a special tripper which trips the shutter at the time the bulb is fired. But the principle is the same.

For flash shots the lens should be closed down to the smallest possible opening, around f:22 at 1/100 sec. with the very fast film.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have admired and enjoyed your column a lot, but I never did have enough courage to write in. I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me Pierre Aumont's address and print his picture. Thanks a lot. Yours truly,

KATHARINE WALKER.

Pierre Aumont

Dear Katharine: You spell your name the way Katharine Hepburn does, don't you? Address Pierre Aumont in care of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Cal., and here's his picture for you. Monsieur Aumont is at present with the Free French army.

Dear Miss Tinée: I always read your column, and enjoy reading other people's views on movies. The letter from William M. Langford really burned me up. My husband has only one day a week to see a movie, and he loves them. It is disgusting to have to spend our time and money to see such a dull, uninteresting, and silly picture as "Best Foot Forward." We also got stuck with "Dancing Masters" on the same bill. The dark-haired comedienne was the only thing that kept us from walking out. I would like to know her name. If she ever appears in a good picture I don't want to miss her. Sincerely,

MRS. J. ARELLANO.

Dear Mrs. Arellano: Well—I guess it's just everybody to his or her own taste. And who's to say who's right or wrong? The "dark comedienne" you refer to is Nancy Walker. I'm glad you wrote. Do come again.

DISNEY SHOWS THE WAY

Looking at Hollywood with HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1944: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

WALT DISNEY is a visionary when it comes to putting fantasy on the screen, but a pretty hard-bitten realist about practical things.

Disney has been too close to the war to harbor any hallucinations that the allies are about to enter Berlin or that Tokio will shortly be bombed off the map.

He knows the enemy strongholds will be running with the blood of thousands of our youth before that happens.

But Walt is thinking ahead of the days when the Nazi and Jap flags will be hauled down—and the 173 boys and girls who have left his gang for the army and navy will be coming home to resume their careers.

So far four Disneyites will never return. They are the gold stars on the studio service flag.

Post-war planning is uppermost with Disney these days, as it is with all American business.

Last year 94 per cent of all product turned out was for government agencies, virtually all done on a nonprofit basis. These training and educational pictures have been definite cogs in the war machine. They helped cut down the training period in some cases 50 per cent. They have carried sanitation messages to areas where our boys are stationed the world over. They have taught how to avoid malaria. Without a cent profit the studio has furnished more than 1,000 insignia to allied armed units quartered in every nook of the globe.

• • •

In doing this job with a staff depleted by a 27⅛ per cent loss of highly trained technicians Disney's own product was sacrificed, and at a time when box office returns were higher than at any time in screen history. He turned out less than half the usual number of entertainment pictures his releasing contracts call for. That was his only way of meeting war commitments; it was a job that could not have been done without sacrifices on the part of personnel as well.

With the realism that made Disney produce "Victory Through Air Power" because he believed in its message and expected a financial loss, he's making practical plans for post-war days.

The slack that will follow the drop-off in war pictures must be absorbed to insure jobs for his large personnel, which reached a peak of 850 at the end of last year, and to meet the return of those Disneyites wearing uniforms today.

Walt outlined to me four steps he's working on to take care of this situation.

First, he'll increase the production of shorts; he'll turn out 20 of those little gems instead of the nine he made in 1943.

Second, he is reëxamining his story properties with the idea of outlining a solid feature production plan. Some of these he's already developing.

Third, he'll go more into the educational field, which has been so successful for governmental agencies.

Fourth, there is the field of training pictures as applied to big industrial institutions, which presently are vitally interested because of their war time man power problems. Industrial giants, taking their cue from the armed services, are finding motion pictures a valuable arm in their training of employes, explaining new technique, and several such pictures vital to the war effort are in production at the studio now.

This is all pretty comprehensive, but so much progress has been made in the field of animation and its combination with live action that Walt feels these aims will be entirely attainable when the war's ended.

At present Walt is finishing shorts started before Pearl Harbor which were sidetracked to make way for badly needed training and health pictures. His market will absorb 20 shorts annually.

He owns such ageless favorites as "Peter Pan," "Alice in Wonderland," Sinclair Lewis' "Bongo," and many others.

Recently he brought Milt Gross, the noted humorist, to the studio. Other well known writers will follow.

The English fantasy "Wind in the Willows" is undergoing story treatment. Also another feature length story, "Sooner or Later." Mickey Mouse has been kept under wraps for this opus, which will blend music with humor and heart.

Little is known publicly about the new process Disney has up his sleeve combining cartoon and live action on the same screen. He took me behind the scenes long enough to show me "The Three Caballeros," the lively South American musical the studio has in production, in which three of his robust characters will go on a love spree with three Latin senoritas, which means that Donald Duck, Jose Carioca, and his new Mexican bit of T.N.T., Pancho the Charro Rooster, work right on the same screen with Dora Luz, Carmen Molina, and Aurora Miranda.

Don't expect me to tell you how it's done—Walt fooled me—but it's revolutionary.

Disney hasn't a gray hair on his head, but how he keeps from being white-headed is a mystery, he fights so many problems at once. He's wrapped up in education, working on a project aimed at teaching people how to read, and thru these teachings to help them attain a higher standard of living. But, like so many others, details of this project are strictly confidential.

• • •

I saw enough of it, however, to realize Walt needn't worry about keeping his boys and girls busy for years to come.

Professors are convinced that education can be made easier, more palatable, and of deeper penetration thru motion pictures, and are giving their support instead of jeers to their production.

Then, too, maybe you'll want to get into some new fields of industry, such as the intricacies of radar or spark plugs, and Walt will show you how.

The war's end may be a long way off, but it's good to see that leaders are looking ahead and will be ready for the return of our boys who sacrificed their all to establish the rights of free men to live and raise families with the security we here in America have always known.

Walt Disney, who built a mouse into a household pet, is showing us the way.

An Appreciation of Washington

and all unworthy calls on his charity. His heart was not warm in its affections; but he exactly calculated every man's value and gave him a solid esteem proportioned to it. His person, you know, was fine, his stature exactly what one would wish, his deportment easy, erect, and noble; the best horseman of his age and the most graceful that could be seen on horseback.

Altho in the circle of his friends, where he might be unreserved with safety, he took a free share in the conversation, his colloquial talents were not above mediocrity, possessing neither copiousness of ideas nor fluency of words. In public, when called on for a sudden opinion, he was unready, short, and embarrassed. Yet he wrote readily, rather diffusely, in an easy and correct style. This he had acquired by conversation with the world, for his education was merely reading, writing, and common arithmetic, to which he added surveying at a later day. His time was employed in action chiefly, reading little, and that only in agriculture and English history. His correspondence became necessarily extensive, and, with journalizing his agricultural proceedings, occupied most of his leisure hours within doors.

On the whole his character was in its mass perfect, in nothing bad, in few points indifferent; and it may truly be said that never did nature and fortune combine more perfectly to make a man great and to place him in the same constellation with whatever worthies have merited from man an everlasting remembrance. For his was the singular destiny and merit of leading the armies of his country successfully thru an arduous war for the establishment of its independence, of conducting its councils thru the birth of a government new in its forms and principles, until it had settled down into a quiet and orderly train; and of scrupulously obeying the laws thru the whole of his career, civil and military, of which the history of the world furnishes no other example. . . .

The "swing shift" exercise, helpful in creating the habit of proper stance. All exercises illustrated here are explained in the accompanying story.

VITALITY FOR VITAL INDUSTRY

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

WHEN factory officials found that the women who were feeling and looking tops were doing a better job on the assembly line they looked for an answer and found it. The girls who lagged a bit, thru no intent of their own, needed something to build and sustain them for their vital industrial role. So, wisely, the corporation called in a consultant to conduct a clinic and show the women tricks of relaxation, how to avoid undue strain. Short cuts to a trim appearance were included in the training.

To help you develop the right working stance the expert tells you: First, reach for the sky. Stretch up and up with that right arm just as high as you possibly can. Drop it to shoulder level and stretch with the left. Repeat in rhythm. This should "put you straight" without that "iron rod for a backbone" look. The stomach is back in there where it belongs, and the chin in.

Then comes the "swing shift." Fling the arms up and out until they actually tug at your chest. Hold for just a minute, then swing them 'round and 'round in just as big a circle as you can. The shoulders will loosen up and should now fall right into place, back and down. And there's your proper stance, hard to remember at first, but wonderful once it's a habit.

• • •

Then there are quick exercises for relaxation. Try the "toe touch." Stand with feet apart, arms extended at shoulder level, and swing down and across so that first the right arm tries to reach the left toe, then the left arm reaches for the right toe. This will relax muscles of the arms and waist.

"The jackknife" is designed to discipline that protruding rear. Lie flat on your back and straighten out your backbone until the small of your back touches the floor. Raise legs and grasp both ankles. Now, keeping the back absolutely flat on the floor, slowly lower the legs. Now, when you're on your feet, try to keep this stance.

"The walkaway": Place two chairs, with backs facing, about 18 inches apart. Holding the backs for support, swing the leg forward, then back and out, pointing the toe like a ballet dancer. Repeat 10 times with each leg. This loosens leg movement from the hip down.

YOUTH on the CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

JAMES MILLIKIN UNIVERSITY in Decatur, Ill., was founded by the man whose name it bears to bring young men and women of that typical midwest area the kind of education, on college level, that would equip them to make a living. It was a condition of his gift, made at the beginning of the 20th century, that in addition to the customary college courses in the literary and classical fields there should be coördinated courses in the practical vocational fields. Millikin therefore combines today, as it has for 40 years, liberal arts with specific training in such vocational subjects as music, business administration, pre-engineering, industry, education, and home economics.

• • •

Millikin's plant in Decatur is just what, under the circumstances, it would be expected to be—simple and utilitarian. Having been built from scratch and according to a figurative and literal plan, it has the artistic advantage of uniformity in architecture, with all of its sturdy red brick buildings in the Elizabethan style. Its main or liberal arts building is flanked on one side by home economics, on the other by business and engineering, and all three are connected by basement thorofares. One of the interior beauty spots of the school is the small, perfect Elizabethan lounge, a study or browsing room in Main hall.

When he founded the school, and decreed that it should be nonsectarian and somewhat unique in its educational plan in that it combined liberal arts with vocational training, James Millikin apparently had special insight concerning the educational needs of his community. When Millikin opened in 1903 its enrollment was 500, then as now composed for the most part of boys and girls of the immediate vicinity. In the intervening years the total has reached 700, a figure Millikin has every right to expect again when the young men of the state and the country can lay aside their arms and return to their books.

• • •

This is not in some respects a normal year at Millikin. Its civilian enrollment is about halved, and of those remaining the vast majority are girls, of course. There are no intercollegiate sports, a matter of particular sorrow to its football followers, since its team, which had a brilliant record in the last few years, has been dissolved by the drain of man power. And the quiet of its campus is interrupted this year by the now familiar thud of marching feet. A quite large detachment of cadets of the army air forces is "in residence" at all times, using the school's facilities for the college training phase of their preparation to take to the skies.

When They Thought Rickenbacker Was a Spy

RETURNING from a tour of inspection of the American army air force in England, Scotland, and northern Ireland for Secretary of War Stimson, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker was summoned to London to pay an official call on his friend Winston Churchill at 10 Downing street, official residence of the British prime minister.

He had completed his visit with Mr. Churchill and was taking his leave when a tall, gray-haired gentleman in a frock coat saluted him stiffly and then broke into a smile.

"I see you do not remember me, sir," he said.

Rick, who knows personally perhaps more of the world's famous figures than any other living man, and who never forgets a face, stared for a moment before recognition dawned.

"Sure," he cried. "You're Cecil Reed. We worked together at the Sunbeam plant down in Wolverhampton in 1916 during the last war."

"Right you are. I have a secret to confess—not a military one, but having to do with our being together at the Sunbeam works. There's something I can tell you now. I am a Scotland Yard man."

• • •

Here is the story that Sergeant Reed related. Rick recalled it in the course of a talk with Winfield R. Sheehan, who is producing the motion picture "Rickenbacker: Story of an American" at Twentieth Century-Fox studio.

Rick had his best year as a race driver in 1916, when his purses exceeded $40,000. In October, at the end of the racing season, he decided to cross over to England and acquire a motor at the Sunbeam plant, having heard that the engine being turned out there for airplanes was perhaps the world's finest.

Arriving at Liverpool, he proceeded to the Sunbeam plant at Wolverhampton, where for several months he toiled, learning all there was to know about the Sunbeam motor. It was there that he struck up a friendship with Cecil Reed, a mechanic who worked at a lathe near him. Reed was a bachelor, and Rick gladly accepted his suggestion that they take rooms together.

Reed did the cooking, while Rick took on the housekeeping chores. The arrangement was mutually satisfactory and the two became the best of pals.

Came the spring of 1917. The United States broke off relations with the central powers, and Rick had to get back to America fast. He took leave of Cecil Reed and did not set eyes on him again until they met at 10 Downing street.

"You never suspected it at the time," said Reed, "but all the while you were at the Sunbeam plant you were under surveillance. Yes, my friend, your mail was opened, your conversations were reported, your every move was scrutinized." Reed chuckled at the memory.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker

"When I think of that in the light of what I know about you now—a famous American who is received with honor by Mr. Churchill—it all seems quite odd. But at the time——"

"What was it all about?" Rick demanded.

"Well," said Sergeant Reed, "it seems a newspaper cutting fell into the hands of the Yard. A cutting from a newspaper published out there in the States called the Los Angeles Times. This cutting related that one Baron Edward von Rickenbacker, a daredevil motor car racer and the disinherited son of a Prussian general, was about to compete in some contest or other.

"Naturally, when the Yard was informed that a man named Rickenbacker had obtained passports to visit England the circumstances immediately aroused suspicion. Especially when we learned that you were coming to the Sunbeam plant, which was then engaged in turning out airplane motors for the R. A. F. I was assigned to keep an eye on you."

"Well, I must say you did a bangup job of it," said Rick. "Yes, I was the fellow you were looking for. And I'll tell you how that title of Baron von Rickenbacker happened to be pinned on me."

It seems that the press agent for the Vanderbilt cup races held near Los Angeles in 1914 was one Al G. Waddell, Rick informed Reed. This same Waddell subsequently had a distinguished career as a journalist and columnist. At the outbreak of the present war he obtained an army commission and rose to the rank of colonel, being now stationed in the war department executive office in San Francisco.

It was Waddell who saw an opportunity to glamorize the then obscure Rickenbacker and at the same time lend a touch of mystery and romance to the race by inventing a title and a family tree for him that stretched far back into the annals of the Prussian nobility.

• • •

The climax came when he urged Rick to pose for photographs wearing a tail coat, top hat, and monocle in the best Prussian military tradition. Rick balked and blew up in a tornado of righteous wrath.

"I'm no baron," he stormed, 'and no German. I'm an American citizen, born in Columbus, O., and I'm going to stay that way."

"And now," Rick told Cecil Reed, "I'll show you how it all dovetails together.

"I was in France in the late spring of 1918, just starting to learn something about the business of being a combat flyer. I had just shot down my third German plane. That night an officer of the British intelligence came to my headquarters.

"'Rickenbacker,' he said, 'I've been instructed to inform you that the British intelligence now believes you are a bit of all right. A flyer who has shot down three enemy planes isn't play-acting.'

"I asked him what he was talking about, and he told me about the newspaper clipping. You see, I was still under surveillance even after I had joined the American air force."

Sergeant Reed's eyes lighted up in fond recollection.

"You were a grand housekeeper, Rick," he reminisced. "No one has ever made my bed in the satisfactory way you did."

"And you were a noble cook, Cecil," Rick rejoined. "Your crumpets were wonderful, your scrambled eggs and bacon used to melt in my mouth. But you'll have to admit I taught you how to make good coffee."

"That you did, Rick. But, generally speaking, I wasn't bad as a cook for a Scotland Yard man!"

ONE STRIKE.. ..YOU'RE OUT!

AND HERE'S the case of Miss S.—the gal who forgot to think twice at a vital time. No one has to worry too much about what other Joes and Jills think of their dating life as long as they know they are on the right side of the fence; but when a girl does something that seems off the ball to herself and to those on the outside looking in, then is the time to start thinking double. Here's a letter from a gal, an honest bit of date bait, who has gotten herself into a spot she would like to get out of, but quickly!

Her joy boy's father has the idea that she is not the choice bit of sweetness and light he'd like his son to be holding hands with, and the honey chile is worried. Her story goes this way:

"For some reason my boy friend's parents won't let him date me. Since I've always been polite and not the loud type, and dress in good taste, they can't be ashamed of me. I can only think of two reasons, from what I've seen of his parents.

"His family has a lovely home, a big car, and in general plenty of money. My family circumstances are comfortable, but we haven't a car and my parents don't belong to the same social set. However, since I'm an only child, my parents have concentrated everything on me. I have nice clothes, take music lessons, and am as well read as the average girl of 16. My lead man's family may want him to date in a wealthier family—but I hardly think that, for they are kind, intelligent people.

"I'm afraid the real reason is this: His father may think I am one of those fast vamps after his son, and parents will do anything to protect their sons. The boy is an only son, tho not an only child. His father may think of me in that light because of something that occurred last fall. The son took me to a dance which lasted until 11:30. As I live far out, it took us about a half hour to get there. Anyway, my friend came in and stayed till 2 o'clock, when his father called and told him to come home.

"I know now that I should have asked him to leave, but I didn't know what to say. We weren't doing any necking, since we are both rather shy—I think he would be embarrassed if it were even suggested to him. I might add the important fact that my mother and dad were out of town at the time. If my mother had been home he would have left much sooner, for she is strict about boys staying late. She was angry when I told her how late he did stay and wondered what his father thought of me. Of course the boy should have known when to leave, but he didn't, and I didn't know just how to send him home.

"Isn't there some way I can let his parents know I'm a nice girl and not out to vamp their son? He is shy, as I said, and we don't talk his parents over, but I know it's his parents. He asked me to a formal dance, and then they wouldn't let him go. Other incidents, too, have made me know it wasn't that he didn't like me. He never dances with other girls and sits with me at all games. I really like him a lot, and vice versa.

"It makes me mad that parents can be so suspicious, even tho I know I wasn't very smart in this instance. Just because some kids don't behave when they stay out late, we have to suffer the consequences. Both of us are juniors in high school, and tho I've been in a lot of queer situations, this one beats all. Isn't there any way I can get into his parents' good graces? Almost as much as renewing my friendship with the boy I would like to have my own name cleared."

Better try to win them back thru the boy himself.

That's a sad story, but as long as the Jane in question has a free and easy conscience about why she kept her date out until the whee hours of the morning, there should be some solution to winning his parents back. Under no circumstances should the gal contact them directly to try to clear up the mistake. Not only does she not know them well enough, but any kind of explanation or apology is unnecessary when nothing really happened. Undoubtedly Joe Blow has already explained to his mother and dad that it was his idea to stay out so late, and if the girl comes forward, too, to plead the case it would only make bad look like worse.

• • •

Better try to win them back thru the boy himself. Wait till the first huffiness blows over. If the boy is the ever-lovin' kind he will ask for dates again as soon as he gets the parental O.K. And on the next date with the boy be sure he gets home early. Then on the next date make sure he gets home even earlier than that! Little by little his parents will begin to realize what a fine, thoughful girl Junior has picked out for his date bait. It may take a long time, but once peaceful relations have again been established on the home front, the girl may have an opportunity to visit the chap's home as before. And this time, by her charm and well bred behavior, his parents are convinced that he has hit the jackpot. This time the girl emerges as Miss Blueblood, the queen of the May, right in there solid—and every one lives happily ever after.

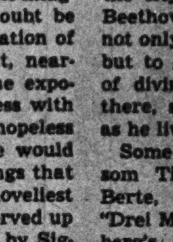
And, being a smart little cookie, the gal no longer worries about the late-date incident—but makes sure it doesn't happen again!

"Blossom Time"

"Blossom Time" will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday, Feb. 26, on W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. (C.W.T.), starring Marion Claire, Igor Gorin, and Attilio Baggiore.

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

FRANZ SCHUBERT'S life was one of humbleness, misery, and disappointment. He wrote music because he could not help himself. It poured from him in an inexhaustible flood. Not until he was 19 could he write in his diary, "On this day I composed for the first time for money," and the times thereafter during the 12 years that remained of his life when he could have made a similar entry were pitifully few. Altho he wrote eight symphonies (perhaps more; that is all that survive), more than 600 songs, a vast amount of piano, chamber, and choral works, and several operas, his total earnings from his compositions did not exceed a few hundred dollars. He was forced to teach school to eke out his musical earnings, but that did not always suffice to supply the bare necessities and comforts of life. Even during his last year, when his fame, in Vienna at least, had assumed respectable proportions, he often had to dine on "coffee and," lacking the price of a full meal.



Franz Schubert

That all this should appear as something very romantic and endearing to the 20th century was quite probably utterly beyond even poor Schubert's fertile imagination. He would no doubt be as amazed at the glorification of his humble self—a squat, near-sighted little man—at the exposure of his painful shyness with women and the secret, hopeless loves he cherished as he would be at the astonishing things that happened to some of his loveliest musical inspirations as served up for popular consumption by Sigmund Romberg in "Blossom Time."

Critics will no doubt always cavil at such an enterprise as "Blossom Time"—and the public will no doubt always love it. Schubert's life is romanticized with careless respect for historical fact, his music is sometimes frankly garbled, but popular affection for "Blossom Time" has become one of the enduring facts in a fickle world.

It all began with a musical piece called "Drei Mädelhaus" which had enjoyed a European success prior to the first World war. In 1918 it was given a shabby, almost surreptitious production in New York's Irving Place theater by a nondescript German stock company. Nobody much but the Messrs. Shubert noticed it, and those astute gentlemen of the theater at once detected in it the germ of a popular success. Sigmund Romberg, with many Broadway successes already to his credit, was engaged to write the score and Dorothy Donelly was assigned the task of making over the German operetta for American taste. "Blossom Time" was settled upon as a suitably romantic title—tho there were few but musical blossoms in Schubert's life—and the piece came to production at the Ambassador theater, New York, Oct. 3, 1921.

Ludwig Lewisohn, at that time drama critic of the Nation, wrote of the opening performance: "A stout gentleman, whose diamond stickpin was as noisy as his voice, asked in the vestibule of the Ambassador theater: 'Music by Schubert, eh? Which is it, Jake or Lee? Never knew them fellows went in for composing.' Then one went in, and the curtain rose, and there—despite a hundred things to rasp the fastidious and those who wisely or unwisely hold themselves aloof from the arts that please the people—there was old Vienna, the city of Glück, of Mozart, of Beethoven, a city that seemed not only to lend a home to genius but to give that genius a touch of divine felicity and serenity; there, somewhat in his manner as he lived, was Franz Schubert."

Some of the melodies of "Blossom Time" are by Heinrich Berte, who wrote the original "Drei Mädelhaus," some are Romberg's own, but the most are fundamentally Schubert's, unfamiliar as he might find them after they had been "popularized" by Romberg. The theme melody is from the "Unfinished" symphony, where it expresses delicate melancholy some leagues removed from the waltzing sentimentality of "This is my song of love." Elsewhere one hears, more or less recognizably, the "Ave Maria," the "Moment Musical" in F minor, the "Serenade," the "Marche Militaire," and a welcome admixture of the "Soirees de Vienne," sparkling little Viennese waltzes which Schubert tossed off in great number for the delectation of his friends.

2 "If it's 'Glisten' You're Missin', see what Kolynos can do for your smile. It's double-dandy! Not one but two foaming agents help clean inside, outside, even in between your teeth! Not one but two polishing agents help sparkle up your smile!"

3 "It was Love at First Taste! Everybody falls for Kolynos Tooth Powder. It's got all the polish of powder yet it's smooth and tasty as a paste! Yes, I've found my one and only—I'll be happy with Kolynos powder for life!"

THE GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER PRESENTS "THE SULLIVANS"

1 The five Sullivan boys get an early start on their nautical careers in a homemade boat on the stream back of their house.

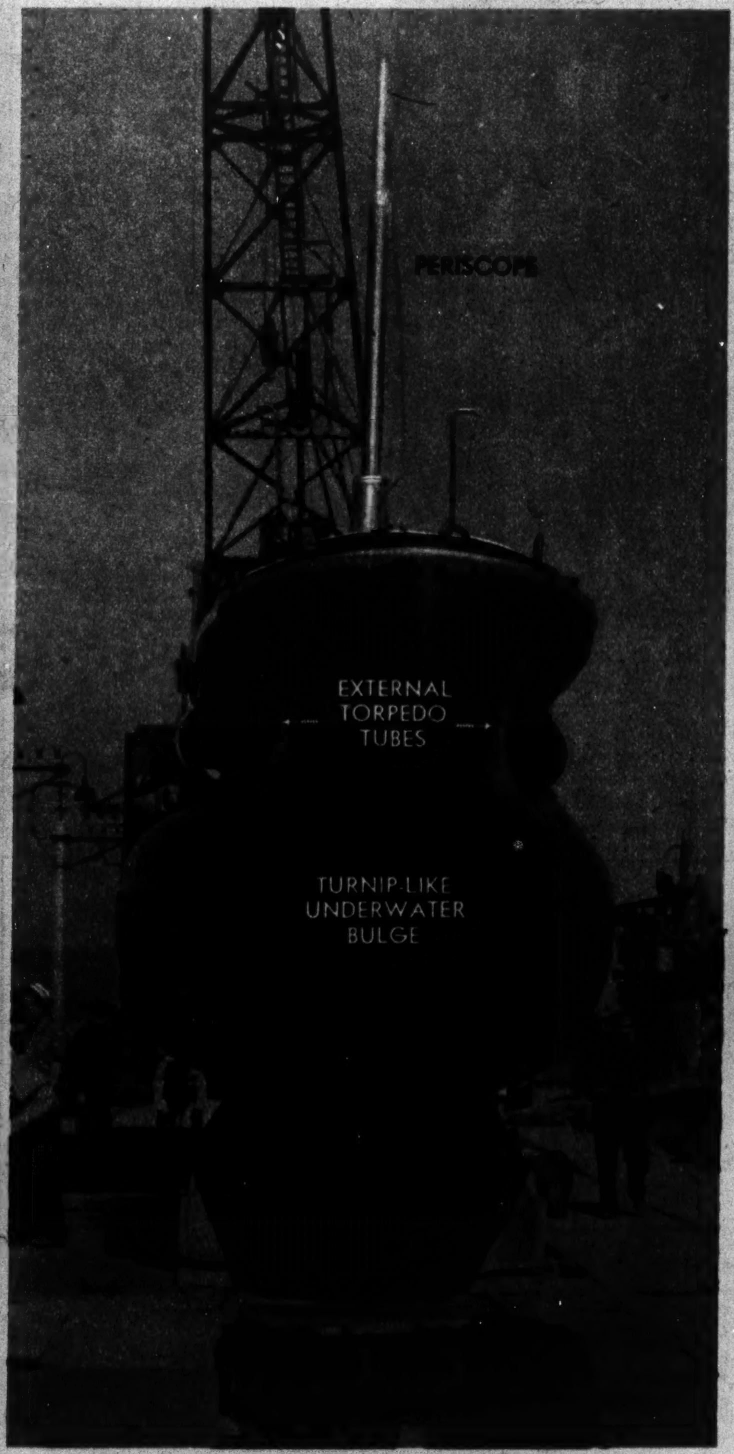
3 On the day that the United States declares war on Japan the Sullivan boys enlist en masse. Lieutenant Commander Robinson (Ward Bond) helps them get government permission to serve together, despite navy rules.

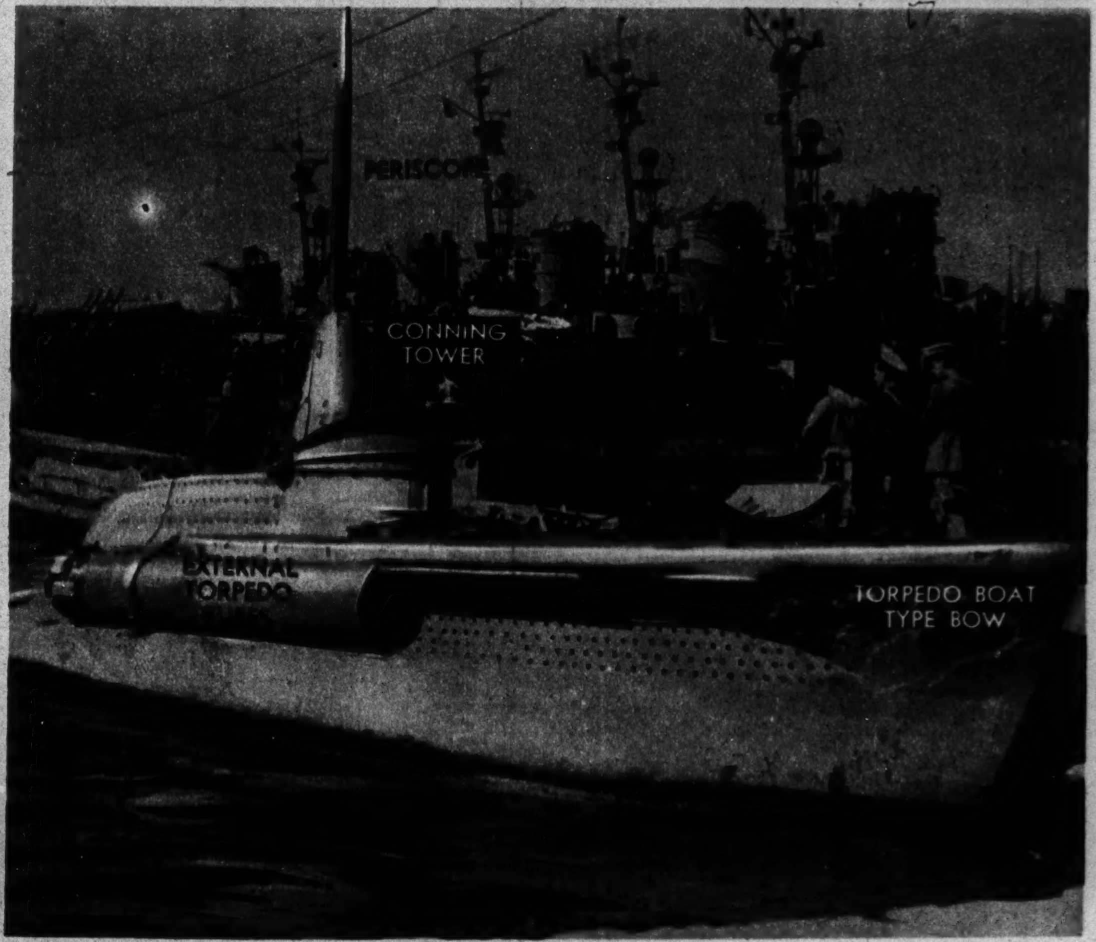
4 Aboard the U. S. S. Juneau the five brothers are soon in the thick of action against the Japs. George is wounded. His four brothers attempt to carry him to safety when the command "abandon ship" is given.

5 But there isn't a chance. To Lieutenant Commander Robinson falls the task of telling the Sullivans that all five boys are dead, heroes in action.

6 Genevieve has joined the WAVES. And to Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan is given the honor of christening a new destroyer, a fighting memorial to their boys. "U. S. S. the Sullivans." (THE END)

Italian Midget Subs





Recent news dispatches have referred to midget Italian submarines turned over to the allies by the Badoglio government, but which had been based at Algeciras, Spain, a few miles from Gibraltar. These subs were described as not much more than "glorified torpedoes." At left is a front view of Italian midget sub captured at Taranto.

Above is a side view of same sub in water. Its general lines are similar to those of PT boats except for conning tower and periscope. It is believed to be of more advanced type than the ones surrendered at Gibraltar. Those were said to have a range of only 10 miles and were manned by two men in diving suits, who straddled the hull, with hands on external controls, and slid off when craft was headed toward target.

This Lamb Is in a Stew

At left: Drop tomato dumpling batter into meat and vegetable stew for last 12 minutes of cooking.

At right: Serve stewed meat, vegetables, and dumplings in separate groups on a hot platter, with gravy.

By MARY MEADE

STEWS are inexpensive in money and points, easy to prepare, nutritious, and filling. A hearty lamb stew with tomato dumplings is an entire meal in itself. Serve it with milk to drink and a simple fruit dessert.

A pound and a half of lamb shoulder meat will serve six hungry persons when stewed with vegetables. Cut the meat into 2 inch pieces. Dredge half the pieces with flour. Sprinkle all of the meat with 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Brown slowly in 3 tablespoons fat. When the meat is as brown as you like it, add 3 cups of water and cover the pan closely. A heavy utensil is needed for stew. Figure on allowing at least 2 hours for the stew to cook. Add the vegetables 45 minutes before serving time, and leave them whole. Onions usually go into a stew, but onions are scarce right now, so perhaps we'd better use small whole turnips instead.

Allow a turnip, a carrot, and a potato for each serving—six of each vegetable for this stew. Scrub carrots and turnips and pare potatoes.

After the vegetables have gone into the stewpot with the meat and are simmering gently on the surface of the range, prepare a dumpling batter. The dumplings go into the stew for the last 12 minutes of cooking.

TOMATO DUMPLINGS
(Six large)

1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 egg
1 tablespoon lard or drippings
½ cup tomato juice

Sift flour, measure, and sift again with salt and baking powder. Beat egg, add melted lard or drippings and tomato juice. Combine liquid with flour, stirring only until flour disappears.

When meat and vegetables are tender, taste gravy and add more salt and pepper if necessary. Drop dumpling batter by the spoonful into the stew, making certain that it rests on meat or vegetables. Cover tightly and steam for 12 minutes without removing cover.

Remove stew to a hot platter, arranging vegetables and dumplings in separate groups around it. Sprinkle potatoes with 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and sprinkle dumplings with paprika. Thicken gravy left in pan with flour and water paste, cook until smooth and thickened, and serve separately.

SONG FOR THIS MARRIAGE—

"O Promise me lots of those lunch box Cup cakes!

WELL, they didn't exactly sing at this marriage, because it was made in a flour mill. In fact, the "marriage" we mean is the happy union of flour, baking powder and salt in Presto Cake Flour.

And here's how it happened. Soft winter-wheat cake flour was carefully measured out. Then the right amount of the right kind of baking powder and salt. Then came the mixing—the "marrying"—so thoroughly done that hours spent at your own sifter wouldn't equal this scientific blending.

All this work we do means less work for you to do. But more than that, it makes it amazingly easy to get wonderful results. It makes you want to try more of the new nourishing, point-saving recipes so popular in our wartime kitchens now.

Coffee cake, gingerbread, waffles—better than ever!

Pancakes, shortcakes, cookies and upside-down cakes—they're all quicker and easier to make with Presto Cake Flour. Whether it's your grandmother's recipe or a new wartime "point-saver"—Presto will help you top any baking record you ever set. And don't forget the consumer-tested recipes on the big blue Presto package. They're bound to be hits.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

When an English sheep dog is in good coat and properly groomed it gives the impression of large size. Note the heavy coat on this specimen, named Santa, which is posing with Gloria Jean, young Hollywood actress.

UNCLE SAM seems to be very much pleased with the part that dogs are playing in the war. Not only have many thousands of trained dogs been put to work in battle zones all over the world, but the camps where the animals are trained are busy turning out more. The various branches of the service also are asking American dog owners to volunteer an increased number of dogs. The United States marine corps says it needs more Dobermans. Good-sized breeds can be used by the army, and the army also wants female springers and cockers.

Uncle Sam has shown much interest in this big, strong breed, known as the Rottweiler, for training as a guard and sentry dog.

If there has been any doubt in the minds of dog fanciers about the latent ability, intelligence, and courage of dogs, the recent commendation by Marine Commandant Gen. Thomas Holcomb of six dogs which helped invade Bougainville Island in November will end those doubts. Six dogs (four of which were Dobermans) cited by the commandant were credited with "saving the lives of many marines." Several of the dogs were wounded by gunfire but kept on with their assignments. All exhibited great bravery under fire. One messenger dog, altho wounded, made nine trips thru the lines when telephone wires were cut. This particular war dog, a German shepherd named Caesar, finally was taken from the battlefield on a stretcher.

The army's most urgent need is for cocker spaniels, springer spaniels, beagles, and basset hounds. If owners of these breeds wish to donate them to the army they may do so thru Dogs for Defense, the only organization which the army recognizes as a canine recruiting agency. There are offices of Dogs for Defense all over the country.

The larger breeds (German shepherds, collies, farm shepherds, Labradors, and others), which now are being widely used as guards and for messenger work, also are wanted by the army. Complete details regarding the list of breeds acceptable may be obtained from any Dogs for Defense office. (In Chicago the Dogs for Defense office is at 228 North La Salle street. In Ohio the main office is 170 East 131st street, Cleveland; Michigan, 1100 Penobscot building, Detroit; Indiana, 4450 Marcy lane, Indianapolis.)

The United States marine corps is very much sold on Dobermans, and after what happened on Bougainville Island this is not surprising. The corps is expanding its training and asking Doberman owners to volunteer their dogs for service. Whereas Dogs for Defense obtains dogs for the army, procurement of Dobermans for the marine corps is under the direction of the Doberman Pinscher Club of America.

Procurement of Dobermans in the Chicago area is being directed by Melvin Bailey, regional director, 8108 South Avalon avenue, Chicago, telephone Saginaw 5025.

Dogs accepted thru Mr. Bailey will be shipped to New River, N. C., for training at the marine devil dog school at Camp Lejeune. More than 50 Doberman pinschers have already been enlisted from the Chicago area. Some of these are now on combat and sentry duty with the marines.

ALL-WING SEAPLANE

Graphic Laboratory of Popular Science

TWO Chicagoans have collaborated in the design of a seaplane of unconventional type as the answer to the problem of delivering passengers close to the business centers of large cities.

A considerable number of cities are situated, as is Chicago, near water, which gives virtually unlimited distance for landing and take-off runs. The seaplane, the designers believe, will not only eliminate the knotty difficulty of expanding land airports if big aircraft of the future require them but will save the millions required for purchasing land and building runways, and obviate the ever-pressing dilemma: how to get air passengers quickly from airport to town. They also believe the seaplane to be superior to the land plane for trans-ocean flying, altho practically all such flights are now being made in land planes for the army and navy, as multiengined aircraft are rarely faced with forced landings resulting from power failure.

Two models of their seaplane design have been constructed by Johannes H. Wendt and Mart E. Lee. The models have been tested at the University of Michigan and Massachusetts Institute of Technology in wind tunnels. Such tests, when accurately conducted and interpreted, give results indicating speed, lift, and other performance characteristics within 2 to 7 per cent of what may be expected from a full size plane. (A table showing the projected weights and loadings of both seaplanes accompanies this article.)

The designers describe their invention as an all-wing plane, and it differs in appearance from Martin, Boeing, and Consolidated flying boats that are now the largest in service. The Lee-Wendt design has no fuselage or hull in the conventional sense. Its designers say the load carrying part of the aircraft for passengers or freight is an expanded section of the wing, capable of furnishing lift and at the same time providing the surface on which the aircraft floats.

Two booms extend to the rear of the wing, carrying the horizontal and vertical control surfaces, a point that would cause some aeronautical engineers to disagree with the designers' description of the plane as "all wing."

"Engines," says their description, "are located entirely within the wing proper, near the center section. The propeller shafts are located in small nacelles above the wing and connected by a narrow wing section. Hydraulic drives deliver the power of the engines to the propellers. As an optional arrangement, the engines may be mounted in the special section, with direct connection to the propellers.

"Crew, passengers, and cargo space are in the center section of the wing. There is a very low center of gravity and the plane can be constructed to virtually any size without altering its characteristics."

The design does away with the wing tip floats typical of flying boats. Mr. Wendt credits the wing design with preventing the plane from tipping far to one side or the other when on the water. The wing outer sections have sufficient dihedral to remain clear of the water in tipping. That portion of the wing near the center section would touch first, serving as a float.

• • •

Mr. Wendt claims his plane will carry a greater useful load than the current flying boat types, principally because of unique methods of construction, which eliminate much weight, found in the bulkheads and stress-bearing trusses of conventional designs. Absence of these members gives more space for utilization by passengers and for cargo packing.

3 tbsps. Crisco

Fry pork lightly in 1 tbsp. hot Crisco. Stir cornmeal into boiling water in saucepan. Add pork, salt and seasonings to cornmeal. Cook until very thick, stirring constantly. Transfer to loaf pan (3" x 7"). Chill several hours or overnight. Cut into thin slices. Dip in flour (or beaten egg and crumbs) and fry in 2 tbsps. of hot Crisco. Serve on platter with omelet and apple rings sauteed in a little Crisco. Crisco is ideal for all your frying. Foods fried in Crisco are crisp and light—digestible even for youngsters. This robust dinner dish is a meal in itself!

1 lb. kidney (beef, pork, lamb or veal)
¾ lb. beef, cut in cubes (chuck or shoulder)
3 tbsps. Crisco
3 cups boiling water
Salt and pepper
1 cup diced potatoes

Split kidneys; remove membranes. Cut in pieces. Flour kidneys and beef. Brown in hot digestible Crisco in large skillet. Add water and seasonings; cover and simmer 30 min. Add potatoes; cook 30 min. longer. Transfer meat to baking dish. Thicken gravy with 2 tbsps. flour, and pour over meat. Cover with criss-crossed strips of biscuit dough. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) about 20 min.

Biscuit Dough: Sift together 1½ cups flour, 3 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt. Cut in 4 tbsps. Crisco. (Crisco makes biscuits flaky and light—really digestible!) Stir in ⅔ cup milk. Roll dough ¼" thick and cut in strips. All Measurements Level.

Split layer and put chocolate filling between. Dust top with confectioners sugar. No need to use expensive shortening. Crisco gives you lighter cakes than any other shortening.

CHOCOLATE FILLING: Blend 2 tbsps. cornstarch, ½ cup sugar and ⅛ tsp. salt. Stir in 1 cup milk and 1 square baking chocolate (shaved). Cook until thick. Add 1 beaten egg and cook 2 min. Stir in ¼ tsp. vanilla when slightly cool. All Measurements Level.

"You ought to see the way he carries on over a little tummy-ache! I have to dish out the bicarb and sympathy—in big doses!

"But he's a kid, too, in ways that I'm crazy about! F'rinstance—he's 'holding hands' with me at the movies again!

"Not long ago, though, he was pretty mean about my rough, red hands! Said they looked awful!

"They did, too! Because I was crazy enough to think that I had to use strong washday soap to hurry my dishes!

"Then I got hep! Found out that gentle Ivory suds are speedy as the strongest soap. Imagine—the soap doctors advise for baby's tender skin!

"And hooray—my hands got smoother, whiter, softer...in just 12 days from the day I switched to Ivory Soap for all my dishwashing!

"It doesn't cost me a pretty penny to have pretty hands, either...because I can do all my dishes with pure, mild Ivory for only about a penny a day!

"See for yourself what a big difference Ivory can make when you switch to it—and really stick to it! Yes, your hands, too, can get that lovely 'Ivory look'...in just 12 days!"

GET AFTER YOUR COLD

—not only with temporary relief measures but by taking 5 BASIC STEPS charted below. These are the ones most physicians agree can help your system throw off the infection. Lemons help with all 5.

5 BASIC STEPS advised by physicians	LEMONS HELP WITH ALL 5
1. Get plenty of rest; overcome fatigue; build resistance.	Fresh lemon juice is one of the richest known sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue. It is also a primary anti-infection vitamin.
2. Keep elimination regular.	Lemon and soda (lemon juice with water and baking soda) is mildly laxative for most people. Gives gentle, natural aid.
3. Alkalinize your system.	Lemon and soda forms sodium citrate, excellent to offset acid condition which often accompanies a cold.
4. Eat lightly. Take plenty of liquids, especially citrus juices.	Lemon drinks are favorites.
5. Keep warm; avoid further chill.	Hot lemonade is almost universally prescribed.

If cold does not respond, see your doctor.

HOW TO USE LEMON AND SODA IN FIGHTING COLDS

To make lemon & soda pour juice of 1 lemon in a half glass of water. Add—slowly—half teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate). Drink as foaming quiets.

First day, drink a glass of lemon and soda every 2 to 3 hours at home or at nearest fountain. (And to induce perspiration, take a hot lemonade when you go to bed.)

Then,—continue with lemon and soda 3 to 4 times a day while cold lasts.

Lemon and soda forms natural sodium citrate. Gives vitamins and all benefits of fresh lemon juice plus increased alkalinizing and laxative effects. Consumed at once, soda does not appreciably reduce vitamin content.

To avoid colds build your resistance! Join the millions who now drink lemon and water daily. Juice of 1 lemon, in glass of plain water, first thing on arising.

HOLLYWOOD STARS CHANGE WITH THE YEARS . . . XI: GREER GARSON

When Greer Garson arrived in Hollywood from the English stage under contract in 1938, her producer didn't know what to do with her, because hers was not a stock beauty. It was not until the following year that she made her film debut, a resounding triumph, in "Good-by, Mr. Chips."

Greer departed from austere roles for this personable appearance in "Random Harvest" in 1942, the year which brought her an Academy award for her performance in "Mrs. Miniver." Only a year earlier her studio had discovered how to dress her hair and clothe her effectively.

Today's Greer Garson owes her distinction to an uncommon combination of gifts and attainments. Depth of intellect; perfected technique of acting; and development of her individual charm.

Armed Forces on Attu Discover Importance of Lip Care

Find quick way to combat cracked, bleeding, chapped lips as result of this frightful exposure!

MILLIONS AT HOME NOW ENJOY SAME LIP PROTECTION!

On bleak, icy Attu where the climate is rightfully called the worst in the world, Fleet's Chap Stick had its "baptism under fire"—and won. For this special preparation worked wonders in helping to prevent the pain of dried, cracked, bleeding lips among our Armed Forces undergoing this frightful exposure.

The good news quickly reached home. Millions of people who suffered lip soreness and discomfort made the same wonderful discovery as our Armed Forces on Attu: that Chap Stick effectively guards against lip roughness, scaliness, and weather-soreness. This is why:

Chap Stick is made especially for the protection and care of the lips. Contains a combination of medical ingredients which act 3 ways at the same time to quickly—1. Smooth roughness. 2. Soothe feverish soreness. 3. Promote healing. That is why lips feel and look better so fast this way.

Why lips need protection! Lips are vulnerable to weather. Have no means of self-protection as cross section diagram clearly shows. (1) Inner mouth membrane extends outward as a mobile fold to form (2) the free margin of the lip. Delicate outer skin (3) lacks sebaceous glands to lubricate and protect lips. Glands start here (4) below lip membrane.

Don't suffer even minor lip discomforts unnecessarily. Use Chap Stick before exposure to sun, wind, weather. It's invisible. Has so successfully given prompt relief for over 50 years that it's now the largest-selling lip protective. Get Fleet's Chap Stick today. Only 25¢ at drug counters. Look for the name Fleet's. If it isn't Fleet's—it isn't genuine Chap Stick. Chap Stick Co., Lynchburg, Va.

THE CLEAN-UP.

NEW TRIUMPHS OF MODERN MEDICINE

Sulfa...

happy homecomings for thousands of boys!

This is the tale of a nose gunner...a brave young airman on his eleventh bombing mission over Germany... who is home today, a living hero, thanks to SULFA.

"Like a lot of kids, I guess I did my share of griping when we had to attend lectures on self-medication with SULFA. But one day 30,000 feet over Germany, I found that the medicos' hard work and their little white SULFA pills paid me an unforgettable dividend—my life. This is what happened."

"We're leaving Emden behind and flying through moderate flak when a flight of three ME-109's lashes up at us from low three o'clock. My fire cut down the leader. Then, number two smacks into one of his own flak bursts and I'm so happy I let the third buzzard get close enough to slam a shell splinter into my thigh. Popping SULFA into my mouth is the last I remember until—"

"It is hard to believe that only three hours ago I was five miles high over Germany, for here I am in splints and a doctor's looking down at me saying, 'In the last war, this kid would probably have lost his life—or at least a leg'. Then because of those little SULFA pills and the speed and skill of our Medical Corps, I knew I would get home to see Mom, whole and on my own two feet. And I sure enough did, as you can see."

What Is SULFA?

SULFA, in the form of powder, resembles ordinary baking soda. But its harmless appearance should fool no one, for it is a giant in action. Taken orally, it streaks through the blood stream unerringly for infected wound areas and promptly and surely puts a halt to the spread of the infection.

You can understand how important this action is when you realize that in World War I about 85% of all wound deaths were caused by infection or common blood poisoning. Once this infection started, the chances of living were slim. Frequently, the amputation of a limb was the only way to avoid death and even that drastic measure often failed.

Today, SULFA is saving our boys' lives and limbs by thwarting wound infection before it can kill or cripple. Because of their strict training in self-treatment of SULFA, wounded men who once would have reached a hospital in a hopeless condition now are brought in, even 48 hours after being hit, capable of complete and quick recovery. In the horror of war, there are some bright things. SULFA for one, certainly.

A SALUTE FROM BAYER ASPIRIN TO THE HEROIC PERSONNEL OF THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES

BAYER

Another Great Medical Triumph

Just as SULFA has been triumphant over death, so has Aspirin won a great victory over pain. Whenever men of medicine fight pain, Bayer Aspirin is known and trusted for its swift, dependable results.

Through doctors' advice and through the privilege of choosing the product they prefer by brand name freely and with an open mind, the American people have used more Bayer Aspirin in their homes for the quick, gentle relief of pain than any other analgesic. So for relief that's trustworthy and quick, ask for BAYER—the famous name in Aspirin.

My sons and I learned a lot in 40 years of fine Candy making

1904

● When my sons and I opened a little candy store forty years ago, we hoped folks would like our candy.

But we never dreamed they'd like Brach candies so well we'd outgrow our little "Palace of Sweets" in just a few brief years. We didn't dream that soon the Brach candy-kitchens would be among the finest in the world.

However, over the years we've stuck to this aim—to make the best in candy and sell it at reasonable prices. And we're proud that every year more people are asking for Brach candies.

Studebaker craftsmen build engines for this latest model Flying Fortress

HERE'S the mightiest Boeing Flying Fortress of them all —the brand-new B-17G.

At first glance, it doesn't look much different from previous Fortress models—until you notice that new turret under the bombardier's platform with its two devastating 50-caliber machine guns.

Studebaker builds Wright Cyclone engines for this invincible Boeing bomber. And the assignment is a logical recognition of a great engine-building reputation, brilliantly exemplified for many years in the fine power plants of the famous Studebaker Champion, Commander and President cars.

Studebaker engineers, production experts and craftsmen fully recognize the urgent needs of our armed forces for more and more equipment.

That's why they're sparing no effort on the Wright Cyclone engines for the Flying Fortress, the big multiple-drive military trucks and the other vital matériel they've been delegated to produce.

Awarded to Aviation Division (E) of The Studebaker Corporation

Studebaker builds tens of thousands of big, multiple-drive military trucks—They've been in the thick of the fighting on the Russian front. They're serving the United Nations from Alaska to the Middle East and from the British Isles to India. Studebaker is now one of the world's largest manufacturers of big military trucks.

GASOLINE ALLEY APPEARS DAILY IN THE TRIBUNE

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Copyright, 1944, by The Chicago Tribune.

SHE'S ENGAGED! She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

MARY JANE IS DEMURE AND SPRING-BLOSSOMY. Her smooth, silky hair has a baby-fine quality. Her exquisite complexion is so clear and so soft. "I just take care of my face with Pond's Cold Cream," she says. "The more I use it, the more I love it."

MARY JANE MAXSON, of West Orange, N. J., engaged to William B. Eppler, an army officer now overseas. She is a graduate of Mary Lyon Junior College, he attended Princeton University.

"SHE'S SO PRETTY!" people exclaim after they meet Mary Jane Maxson. Her face has a sweet elfin charm—quiet stillness one minute, mischievous laughter the next.

Mary Jane herself has definite and practical ideas about how to keep her lovely face looking its prettiest.

"You've just got to have sparkling clean skin," she says. "It has to look and feel soft, too. That's why I'm so keen about a Pond's cold-creaming for my face every night and every morning. Pond's is such heavenly soft-smooth cream. It feels grand to use and makes your skin look so nice!"

First—She smooths Pond's snowy, fragrant Cold Cream all over her face and throat and pats with quick, gentle finger tips to help soften and release dirt and make-up. Tissues off well.

Next—She "rinses" with more fluffy dabs of Pond's, working her white-tipped fingers all over her face in little spiral whirls. "This twice-over creaming with Pond's makes my skin feel extra clean, extra soft," she says.

Beauty-clean your face with Pond's every night and every morning. Use it for daytime clean-ups, too. You'll see why it's no accident engaged girls like Mary Jane, noted society beauties like Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, III and Britain's Viscountess Milton love this soft-smooth cream. Ask for a luxurious big jar of Pond's Cold Cream today.

ANOTHER POND'S BRIDE-TO-BE

—her engagement ring is an exquisite diamond with three tiny diamonds set either side in a simple platinum band.

VICTORY FARM HAND—Mary Jane's war work on the family's victory farm is no glamour job! She's working where she's needed! All kinds of jobs need women workers—farms, stores, transportation. Check Help Wanted ads—consult local U.S. Employment Service.

Today many more women use Pond's than any other face cream at any price

ASK FOR A BIG JAR! Large sizes save glass and manpower! And it's so much quicker to dip finger tips of both hands in the lovely wide Pond's jar!

THAT GINKY AGAIN

GINKY the mouse had been living in the Teenie Weenie jail for some time. He had not been arrested by the Teenie Weenies. He had merely asked the little people to put him in jail because he said he was afraid that if he wasn't in jail he might commit a crime. The Teenie Weenies allowed the mouse to live in the pint glass fruit jar which served the little people for a jail, but, as he was not a prisoner of the Teenie Weenies, they did not supply him with his meals.

"If you had committed some crime," the General told the mouse, "and we had put you in jail, then we would have to furnish your meals."

Ginky complained so much that the Lady of Fashion felt sorry for him and she often carried him scraps from the Teenie Weenie dinner table. The General discovered her carrying a cherry seed full of mashed bean to Ginky one evening and he ordered that no one was to feed the mouse.

Ginky took to eating out of the old thimble which served the Teenie Weenie Cook for a garbage can. He did that at night when the little people were asleep, and he usually mussed up the back porch, which did not please the Cook.

The General called a meeting in the town hall, which had been made out of a man's old felt hat. While several of the Teenie Weenies were holding the meeting and pondering over what should be done about Ginky, there was a crash of glass. A stone came thru one of the tiny windows and the little men ran outside to find Ginky standing in front of the hall.

"Arrest me!" screamed the mouse. "I busted the window. Put me in jail!"

It was plain to the Teenie Weenies that Ginky had broken the window so he would be arrested, locked up in the jail, and have his meals supplied without any effort on the mouse's part, but the General saw thru his scheme and he said to the Policeman in words loud enough for the mouse to hear, "We'll ask Tompkins the cat over to help us in this matter. He knows a great deal about lazy mice and his advice will be valuable."

"Yes," answered the Policeman in a loud voice. "Tompkins, I understand, is especially fond of mice, too."

It's FUN to be a wallflower!

Wallflowers, the kind that bloom on barrack walls . . . the pin-up girls from back home . . . are mighty popular. To be his favorite wallflower—write often, and make your letters good! Send snapshots of yourself . . . places and things you both enjoy. And in every snapshot, look natural—not "posey"—bright and cheerful. Of course, Pepsodent Powder will help keep your smile bright. He already knows that, because Pepsodent is Number One with men in the Service.

You CAN have a new smile!

A smile that's marred by chipped or broken teeth need not be a permanent handicap. Today, modern dentistry can do much to make that smile attractive. For, like the movie stars, you can have chipped or broken teeth recapped. Even crooked, misplaced teeth can be straightened by a series of corrective treatments. Your dentist will tell you what needs to be done and how quickly you can expect results. Yes, it's the truth—your dentist can help you have sound, good-looking teeth, but it's up to you to keep them clean and bright!

You CAN change your voice!

Want to trade a flat, nasal voice for a round, mellow one? First, listen to yourself speak. Hold a newspaper in front of your face as a sounding board. If tones are flat and thin, try lying on your back and breathing from the lower stomach. For colorless, nasal voices, recite the alphabet aloud in front of a mirror, allowing mouth and lips to make tones round and full. And while you're watching your mouth, you'll see why it's so important to use Pepsodent Powder for bright and sparkling teeth.

You CAN have brighter teeth!

Impartial laboratories made hundreds of tests. Scientists checked their findings with photoelectric measuring devices and authorize this statement: Pepsodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands . . . brighter than any of them—bar none! These results have been double-checked by identical twins who made practical in-the-home tests . . . by technicians in dental clinics . . . by dentists in their own offices. The result is always the same: Pepsodent Powder makes teeth far brighter. Get Pepsodent Powder to make your teeth brighter . . . today!

PEPSODENT MAKES TEETH FAR BRIGHTER

For the safety of your smile—use Pepsodent twice a day . . . see your dentist twice a year.

PLAN SOLEMN RITES TO OPEN LENT

RATION BOARD MEMBERS NEED ASPIRIN SUPPLY

Nice Work? Not in Deerfield.

BY EILEEN BURKE.

Running a ration board requires common sense, fair play, an active conscience and a good supply of aspirin. The job's only returns, of course, are the smiles of appreciation, the grunts of satisfaction, or the whines of fancied maltreatment which come to all ration boards.

That is why, in the opinion of the Deerfield ration board, any American who thinks the handling of a community's rationing problems is "nice work if you can get it" should sit on his local board for a few sessions. He would discover, they believe, that "trying to please everybody is impossible" and that "treating every one alike" is a hard job.

As the populace of Deerfield will testify, their rationing board has a reputation for its policy of fair treatment. The community has discovered that using the old approach of "I'm a good friend of so and so's" on any member of the Deerfield ration board is a strike against the petitioner.

What Good's a Friend?

"If a particular friend of mine comes in, I see that another board member handles his case," said S. L. Bartlett, veteran board member. "And that's the way we all work."

A heating engineer, Mr. Bartlett can and does give residents of Deerfield plenty of his personal attension in solving their fuel oil rationing problems. He spends many hours a week visiting homes of persons who ask his advice, showing them how a change here or there in their heating systems will make fuel allotments adequate. Mrs. Bartlett, price panel assistant for the board, gives as many hours a week as her husband toward helping answer Deerfield's rationing questions.

Five Specialists on Board.

Fortunately, Deerfield possesses five specialists on its ration board. In addition to Mr. Bartlett, they are Lt. Comdr. Anthony Nosek, a construction engineer; K. F. Towler, vice president of a coal company and a certified public accountant; Forrest D. Page, who is in the printing business, and Peter J. Juhrend, a garage owner, who handles the board's tire and tube rationing. Comdr. Nosek, who served overseas in World War I., is stationed in Chicago.

Juhrend, only member of the board who has his daily business in Deerfield, has the evident sympathy of all the other members. "Poor Juhrend," one member said, sadly. "We all feel sorry for him—he's always available by telephone, so he has rationing for breakfast, dinner, and supper."

Not So Bad Now.

"It's not as bad as it used to be," objected Juhrend good naturedly. "We've finally got this rationing business down to a system where we can carry on a large part of it by mail."

The Deerfield board, which has received special recognition for its efficient operation from OPA directors, apparently has the right system down pat. Since the board's existence only three appeal cases have been taken "over its head" to the Chicago OPA board. In each instance the higher board sustained the local board.

Consider Each on Merits.

This record, board members believe, is a result of the careful consideration given each case. If there is any doubt whatsoever on a decision, all the members pass on it. Each applicant is "viewed on the face of his own merits" with the thick book of rationing rules as the board's well memorized "Bible."

"And there is nobody on the board who isn't able to say 'no,'" added Comdr. Nosek, "which is a pretty hard job sometimes when perhaps your heart says 'yes' but the rule book doesn't." The helper who can put her finger immediately upon almost any information a board member requires is Mrs. William A. Tennermann, chief clerk of the board.

File System Efficient.

Mrs. Tennermann's filing system, which keeps a complete "case history" of every person served by the ration board, has been pronounced so efficient by the Chicago OPA that she has been sent around to instruct other ration board clerks.

She tells of one Deerfield matron who stopped in at the board for advice on how to get into a Red Cross unit in Lake Forest. "Well, I don't know much about the Lake Forest unit," Mrs. Tennermann advised her, "but we have a Red Cross unit right here in Deerfield which needs many more workers."

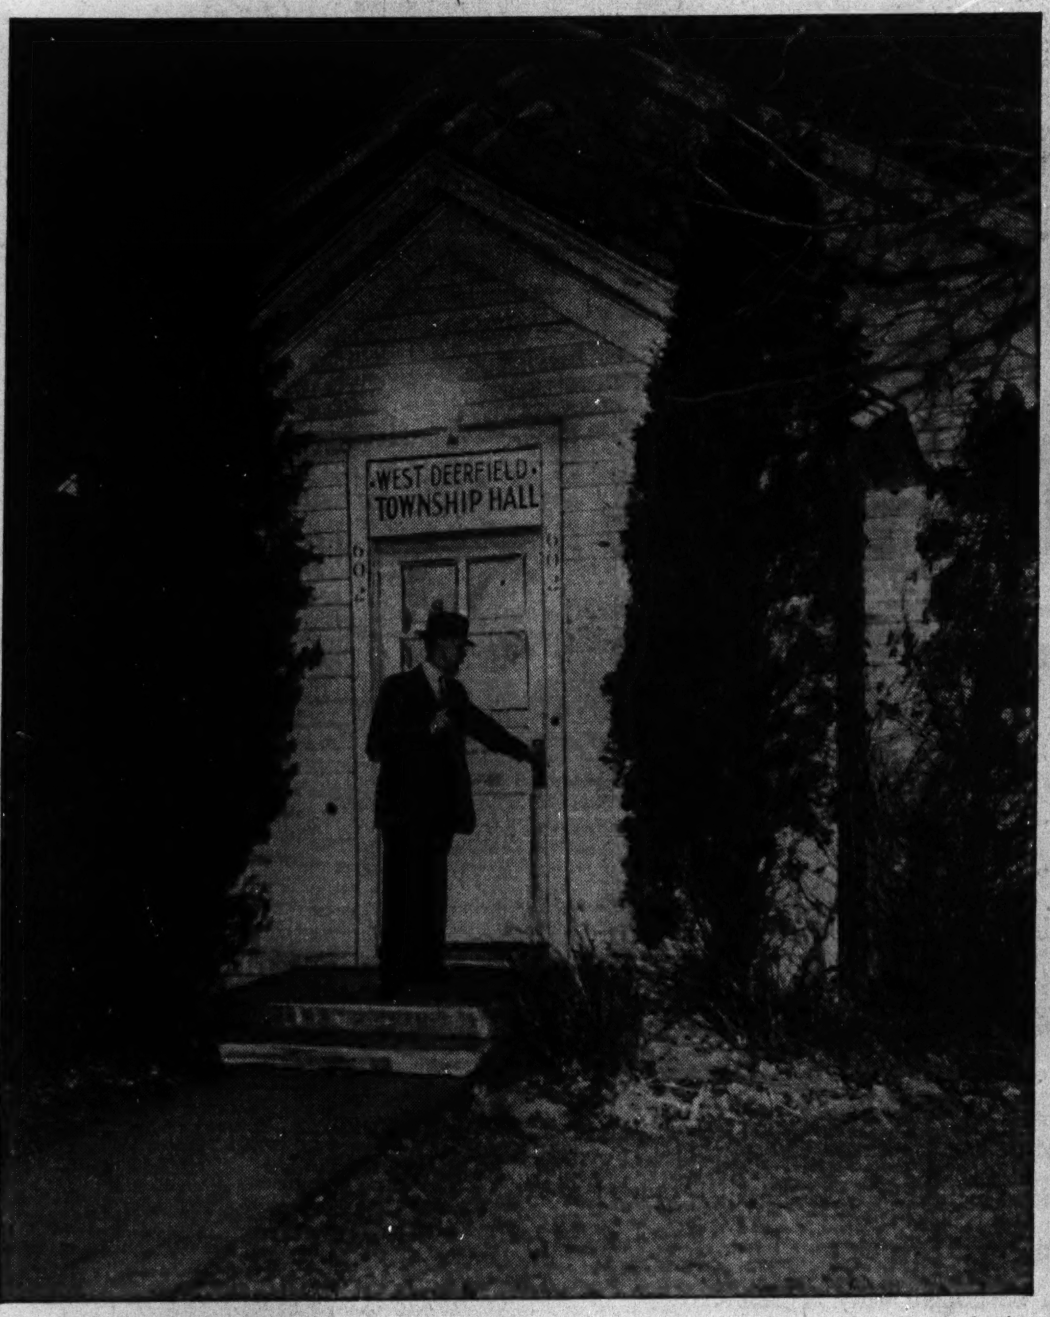
She Wouldn't Think of It!

"O, dear, no," sighed the lady. "All my friends live in Lake Forest and I wouldn't know a soul in the Deerfield unit. I wouldn't like that at all."

Mrs. Tennermann's pet story is about a little old woman who is known to amuse herself attending to other people's business. She came to the ration board with a sharp accusation which went:

"Just look at so-and-so loafing around town. Why don't you get him a job on this ration board so he can make enough money to support himself."

Deerfield Ration Board Office Provides Glimpse of Home Front Activity



Behind this door is perhaps the best known office in Deerfield. It is the one room township hall where the local ration board meets every Tuesday night for a session of hard work and consultation on the community's rationing problems.

Busy at her typewriter is Mrs. S. L. Bartlett, price panel assistant for the ration board. Mrs. Bartlett spends many hours each week checking price ceilings among local retail merchants and helping them solve their rationing problems.

Conferring with Mrs. William A. Tennermann (right), ration board clerk are Mr. and Mrs. Philip E. McFarland. McFarland, a war worker, is renewing his application for gas coupons.

He saw action in the South Pacific as a ground crew mechanic in a marine fighter squadron and received the silver star for outstanding duty under fire. His citation read in part:

Helped Save Comrades.

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action against the enemy. Late at night on Oct. 13, 1942, Japanese surface craft, among which was at least one battleship, joined with Japanese aircraft to subject Henderson field, Guadalcanal Island, and British Solomon Islands to a terrific bombardment. By early morning of Oct. 14, 1942, one of the enemy's heavy shells hit near a bomb shelter and buried five men of a marine fighting squadron under a great amount of earth and debris. Hearing the cries for aid of one of these men, Pvt. Edward F. Long, first class, and 12 other marines voluntarily exposed themselves to the enemy's intensive shell fire and bombing attack and succeeded in rescuing two of their imprisoned comrades and recovering the bodies of the remaining 3."

CONSIDER PINKY—BARKEEP WHO DOUBLES IN LACE

He Doesn't Think It's Strange at All.

BY PHYLLIS FORD.

"Cold water, hot water," said Pinky the bartender, tossing the bobbins around for his lace making. "In among the glasses all the time, the fingers, they get stiff."

Vincent Pink.

Swiftly, like a gamester manipulating nut shells on a table, Pinky passed the 14 bobbins back and forth, up and over, twisted the threads, fixed them on the pattern with a pin, began again.

"Just like playing piano," he said, going faster. "Your hands get used to working."

Starts When 7 Years Old.

"Since I was seven," said Pinky, going even faster, "I make lace."

"Pinky! Come and fill it up!" Two sailors, leaning on the bar, were the only customers in the middle of the afternoon. Pinky ran, his long white apron flapping against his legs.

Then he was back, bringing some of his patterns. "This is beautiful collar," he said, holding the paper on one shoulder, over the turtleneck sweater. "This is from Europe, this pattern."

"Won't you tell me when," murmured the juke box, "we will meet again?"

"You Never Forget."

"Now I don't have time to work much at the lace," Pinky said, putting on his glasses, sitting down before the pillow that held the pattern, picking up the bobbins again. "But this is something you know you never forget."

The sailors were watching him now, leaning back from the bar, laughing.

"It isn't something to laugh at," said Pinky. "You make money. In Jugo-Slavia a boy and girl get married, get a couple of pillows, work, and make a living. It is easier than being in the fields. They get a crowd in, they all make lace, and everybody sings."

Sailors Can't Take It.

For awhile longer the sailors watched his hands, shuttling the bobbins. Then they shrugged and turned away.

"I come here when I am 17," Pinky said. "I work as a coal miner in Pennsylvania. Then I am a bartender. Finally I open up this place." Pinky is Vincent Pink of 1118 Sheridan road, North Chicago.

"I would like to go back to Jugo-Slavia sometime," he said. "In the spring. The cuckoo birds sing, the cherry trees there, it smells for miles, just like perfume."

WOMAN STUDIES PALMS—BUT NOT AS SOOTHSAYER

Mrs. A. H. Meredith Finds Hands Tell Story.

Mrs. Alice Hughes Meredith, an exuberant woman who is devoted to the subject of hands, has surrounded herself in her Kenilworth home with a collection of articles designed in the shape of hands. From this base, equipped with suitcases holding part of the collection, she departs frequently to lecture on such subjects as "Happiness Lies in Your Hands."

"You'll see hands," said Mrs. Meredith, "all around you right away." Her vases, ashtrays, cigaret boxes, and table ornaments looked like hands or had hands moulded on them. She was wearing three small pins of hands in various positions, her initials in the deaf and dumb alphabet.

Dates to College Days.

Mrs. Meredith began studying hands for character analysis thru what she regards as an "immediate circumstance of necessity." While she was in college her sorority appointed her fortune teller for a party. "But I said, 'Of course you can't just read hands right away!'" She dug into the matter then, and is still exploring its possibilities.

She uses palmistry as a parlor trick, sometimes with results that surprise her. Once she told an insurance man that he had a good writing line in his palm. He brooded over this for awhile, and then began getting up in the middle of the night to write articles which an insurance magazine accepted. "His family wouldn't believe it at first," said Mrs. Meredith.

Entertains Service Men.

Since the war she has been using her talents for the entertainment of service men at USOs. "It seems to help them," she said, "from the uplift angle."

Mrs. Meredith has about 400 hands in her collection. There are cane handles, a ship's prow, a top, jewelry, toothpicks, snuff boxes, napkin ring puzzles, back scratchers, opium pipes, and wedding cake ornaments. Describing the articles, Mrs. Meredith is apt to say "An old shawl pin, very muchly bent, but a very interesting piece. Don't you think it's intriguing?"

The hands fill her book shelves, tables, window sills and what nots, with the overflow going into the suitcases. "As you can see," said Mrs. Meredith, "they begin to take you over."

Mrs. Harry White to Head Vernon Chapter of D. B. E.

Dorothy Vernon chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire recently elected five new officers at a meeting in the home of Mrs. Harry White, 1518 Jonquil terr. Those elected were Mrs. Joseph Walter, president; Mrs. Harold Bean, first vice president; Mrs. Joseph Flower, second vice president; Mrs. White, recording secretary; Mrs. Hal Culver, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Rolland Rippberger, treasurer.

WAUKEGAN CLUB WILL MARK 50TH YEAR AS GROUP

Will Celebrate Founders' Day Tomorrow.

In February, 1894, when Grover Cleveland was serving his second term as president, when C. A. Partridge was mayor of Waukegan, and when politics was a field generally barred to women, a group of alert, civic minded women of Waukegan gathered at the home of Mrs. Ida Price Fischer and organized a reading and study club which they named the Sesame club. Mrs. Fischer was elected president.

With a membership of 12, this club was the beginning of what is now the Waukegan Woman's club which will celebrate its 150th anniversary tomorrow. A Founders' day program, with Mrs. A. D. Kaufman in charge of arrangements, will be held at 1:30 p. m. in the American Legion home, Waukegan. Guest speaker will be Cary Clive Burford, writer and historian, in a talk on the "Golden Anniversary of the World's Columbian Exposition."

Has About 400 Members.

Now grown to a membership of almost 400, the Waukegan Woman's club was federated with the state in 1896, and was admitted to the general federation of woman's clubs in 1912. In 1913, the name was changed from the Sesame club to its present one. Organized primarily as a literary study club, a glimpse thru old year books shows that its members went energetically at a long list of projects.

In those early days, as at present, book reviewing held a prominent place on the club program. Altho they were living in the days before women suffrage, members of the Sesame club also worked toward paving the way for women in politics by promoting civic improvements of various kinds. A small library, located over a store on Genesee st., was purchased, managed, and developed by the club until the institution grew to such proportions that the city took over its operation. The club's long time dream was realized in 1903 when the corner stone of a new public library building was laid.

Active During War.

The club was made departmental in 1909. Its literary studies continued, along with the study of music. An early club project was the high school lunch committee which served warm lunches to students. This department later established a school cafeteria.

Crowded with activity for club members was the period from 1914 to 1925, the war and post-war years. Because of the increase in membership, larger meetings were transferred to the parish house of the Episcopal church.

They also equipped playgrounds and installed scales in schools to check weight of undernourished children. They established kindergartens in north and south schools. The club's entertainment committee helped to provide funds for the various projects, and in 1919, gave the Cotton ball which became an annual benefit party. During the depression the club maintained a relief station in a vacant store on Genesee street where food and clothing were provided for the city's needy.

Won Music Crown.

With music as one of its constant activities, the club chorus entered the Chicago Music Festival in 1937 and won first place.

But just as they did in World War I., club members are shouldering their part of the work to be done. Booths for the sale of stamps and bonds are operated by the club. Two hundred members make surgical dressings; 150 have been blood donors; more than 100 have studied first aid, home nursing, and nutrition; many are serving as USO hostesses, and 350 participated in the scrap drive.

Past presidents will be honored at the Founders' day program. Tea will be served by the social committee. Mrs. W. J. Bargen will meet with the board at 1 p. m. for a short business session before the program.

W. C. Fields Sharpens Up His Saw for 'Little Chum'

Armed with a sharpened saw, W. C. Fields will be ready to slash Charlie McCarthy at 7 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC. Fields will be a guest of Edgar Bergen's little pine chum. Bill Goodwin and Ray Noble's orchestra also will provide entertainment during the program.

SO YOU WANT TO GET INTO RADIO! O. K., HERE'S HOW

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"How can I get into radio?" That's the question most often asked of this desk. Mothers with youngsters who have too much talent to become Quiz Kids ask it. Small town and big city girls, too, write and say they're at least as good as Barbara Luddy; so why can't they get at a mike? A lot of bathroom tenors used to write in comparing themselves favorably to Jimmy Melton. [The army and navy probably have them now.] We suspect there actually is a lot of unrecognized and latent talent at large.

But how to get these talented folks on the air? Broadly speaking, you need some breaks—altho many a topnotch entertainer has made his own breaks.

One way to get in is to be there when the doors open. Among those knocking when radio started off were Eddie and Fanny Cavanaugh, Frank Munn, Wendell Hall, Vincent Lopez, Harvey Hays, Grace Wilson.

Lucky, you say. Yes, but you've got to hand it to them for sticking to it for 20-odd years.

Fibber Makes Own Break.

Jim Jordan [Fibber McGee] made his own break. He was a chautauqua singer back in the '20s, heard a singer on WIBO, Chicago, he didn't like, called the station and said he could do better. So they gave him a chance. He brought Marian, now his "Molly," along. And soon they were on their way.

Jack Benny, once a vaudeville entertainer, made his first mike appearance as a guest of Ed Sullivan. "This is Jack Benny," Jack began. "Now there'll be a slight pause while you say 'Who cares?'" People have been laughing at him ever since.

Edgar Bergen had been laughed out of radio studios at the suggestion of putting a ventriloquist's act on the air. One night Rudy Vallee saw Bergen and Charlie at the Chez Paree in Chicago. That was enough. Rudy introduced a lot of other entertainers to radio: Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Burns and Allen, and Frank Fay among them.

The Whiteman Springboard.

Paul Whiteman has been a springboard for many radio folk, among them Bing Crosby, Morton Downey, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Helen Jepson, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Matty Malneck, and Johnny Mercer. Eddie Cantor helped Deanna Durbin and Dinah Shore on their way.

The late Hal Kemp was responsible for getting Kay Kyser started. And Kay in turn spotted Ginny Simms singing with Tom Gerun's orchestra at the Chicago World's fair in 1934, and talked her into joining his band.

Bill Thompson [Wallace Wimple] was discovered in an amateur contest at the Chicago exposition. Frank Sinatra determined to become a singer one night while listening to Crosby. He got his first break via Major Bowes, sang on New York local stations, and later joined Tommy Dorsey before starting out alone.

Lucky Ones the Exception.

Lucky people are the exception. Behind almost every star is a story of sweat and tears. And determination. Faint heart never won a fat soap opera sponsor. A good bet, if you live in the city, is to badger the network [or station] script and program departments. Also the radio departments of advertising agencies.

Oddly enough, many of the people successful in radio say they are going to get out of it. Yes, as soon as they make one more thousand they are going to buy that farm or a spot on a Wisconsin lake and fish. The rigors of radio—irregular hours, night work, snacks between rehearsals, the nervous tension involved—all contribute to what is known as a "radio stomach." Any one in the business will tell you there are more ulcers per torso in radio than anywhere outside the Mayo clinic. So before you lay your plan of attack consider the possible consequences.

'BLOSSOM TIME' IS NEXT OPERETTA FOR W-G-N AIR THEATER

The romantic story of the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, as told in Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night before an audience of more than 4,000 spectators at Medinah temple. The performance will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire, prima donna of the series, will sing the role of Mitzi, and Igor Gorin, popular baritone, will be heard as Schubert. The part of Baron Schober will be sung by Attilio Baggiore.

Music for the performance will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the series, will produce the show.

JAN TOMASOW SOLOS ON W-G-N SYMPHONY HOUR

Jan Tomasow, South American violinist, will be the soloist on The Chicago Theater of the Air Symphony hour over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 11 p. m. tomorrow.

Tomasow will play the allegro, andante Cantabile, and rondo from Mozart's Concerto No. 4 in D major.

The orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, W-G-N's director of music, will open the program with the performance of the four movements of Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, including the allegro con brio, larghetto, gavotte, and finale. "Les Prelude," by Liszt also will be played by the orchestra.

Dramatize Day in Army on W-G-N Show Today

Experiences of 19 war workers, who went thru the regular routine of a day in the army at Camp Atterbury, Ind., will be dramatized on the Victory Is Our Business program at 12:30 p. m. today over W-G-N.

CHICAGOANS AID YANK CONQUEST OF KWAJALEIN

List Men Who Helped to Take Jap Stronghold.

America's fighters from Chicago and the metropolitan area were well represented in the recent speedy conquest of the key positions of the Kwajalein atoll, the easternmost bastion of the Japanese empire in the Marshall Islands.

Correspondents on the scene have told how battleship and aircraft deeffectively softened Japanese defenses that the 4th marine division kept its losses down as it stormed ashore behind a rolling barrage. More than 8,000 Japanese were killed while the American dead totaled 286 in the lightning capture of the atoll.

Naval support is said to have been the most magnificent that ever accompanied an amphibious assault. The beach soon was filled with marines. The Kwajalein invasion took its place as "one of the world's historic artillery bombardments" and the war's end was brought closer.

North siders who took part in the battle included Pvt. Clarence J. Gilbert, 2622 Greenview av.; Pvt. Leonard J. Ash, 4647 N. Wolcott av.; Pvt. Vincent A. Creighton, 853 Lill st.; Frank X. Barr, pharmacist's mate 3d class, 2131 Sunnyside av.; Pvt. Joseph S. Musick, Waukegan, and Pvt. Philip J. Zoul, Highwood.

LAWSON Y. M. C. A. SEEKS HELP TO RUN NEW CENTER

In his plea for volunteers to operate the center, A. H. Eichholz, Lawson boys' work secretary, said men are particularly needed to teach singing and to organize hobby classes such as stamp collecting, model aircraft, and clay modeling. There also is a need for volunteers to take boys on sightseeing trips thruout the city. These men are wanted evenings, especially Fridays, or from 1:30 to 5 Saturday afternoons.

Mr. Eichholz said there are 74 participants in the program at present, 24 of whom are paid up members. Men who would like to volunteer are asked to talk to the secretary or with A. H. Bonhivert of the Lawson Y. M. C. A. program department.

PRIZES IN CASH AWAIT SCHOOLS IN PAPER DRIVE

Catholic Pupils Compete for $500 Total.

Instead of flags, six cash prizes totaling $500 will be distributed to the parochial schools which lead in collecting waste paper during the campaign from Feb. 14 to March 18.

This amount is the parochial school's share of the $1,000 prize money donated to Chicago schools for the drive by the Chicago Newspaper Publishers association.

In deciding on this plan, Msgr. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools, said that almost every parochial school now has a fine stand of national colors, but needs cash to carry on many of its activities.

First Prize $200.

"We believe the cash prizes will greatly stimulate interest and rivalry between the various schools, and thus increase the collection of America's number one critical war material," he said.

First prize for the largest paper collection during the campaign will be $200. The second prize will be $100, third, $75; four and fifth, $50 each, and sixth, $25.

A different system of prize awards will be used by the public schools. To the leading schools in the nine districts flags will be given. Every two weeks the boy and girl with the largest paper collection record in each of more than 300 schools will receive a ribbon of merit.

Sisters to Keep Records.

Msgr. Cunningham and Joseph H. Marcus, representing the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, have worked out a record keeping system for each of the parochial schools. The sister superiors in charge of the schools will each week send a post card to Msgr. Cunningham's office detailing the amount of scrap paper collected and sold during the week.

Twenty schools have their waste paper collected by the Catholic Salvage bureau. Proceeds from the sale of this paper will go to charities named by church authorities. Those schools not on the list serviced by the Catholic Salvage bureau will have their paper collected by trucks assigned to the work by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee.

Assert Hoarding Is Only Threat to Coal Supply

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many home owners apparently are concerned about the supply of coal for use in homes and a number of facts of interest along this line come from Appalachian Coals, Inc., Cincinnati, O.

Preliminary figures for 1943 show that 36 million more tons of coal were delivered to retail coal merchants and in turn delivered by them to their customers than in an average year. In other words, last year 120 million tons of coal were delivered for use in homes, altho the average per year for the last 10 years was only 84 million tons.

It is logical to assume that a very large amount of this coal is still in coal bins in homes. Unfortunately there are a few local areas which have an unprecedented demand for coal, due to shifts in population, lack of other fuels, etc., and which actually need fuel.

Authorities have urged that any one who has several tons of coal in his bin, enough to last out the season, or at least two or three months supply, should not order more coal now.

This is asked in order that the coal industry may have more opportunity to take care of people who are in actual immediate need for fuel. Voluntary coöperation of this sort is much easier and less bothersome than rationing. There is no lack of supply of coal; the only problem is to get equitable distribution.

In the interests of fuel conservation Appalachian Coals, Inc., Transportation building, Cincinnati, will be glad to answer questions pertaining to heating problems. A letter addressed to the above address, care of chief engineer, also will bring you a copy of "Save Coal," a chart for users of hand fired equipment, and "Stoker Etiquet" for stoker users, free of charge.

FORMER TILDEN STUDENTS SET RECORD IN WAR

Many Win Citations; 81 Give Lives.

What are the boys of Tilden doing now? The same boys who not so long ago worried about their Latin marks and who'd win the basketball tournament and where the school prom would be held. They are the men who are scattered all over the world now.

Tilden High school is proud of the record of her boys on the battlefront. Many have won citations for bravery beyond the call of duty. Many will not be back to visit the school campus, for the service flag of Tilden High contains 81 gold stars.

Among the students who have won citations, a large number of them former R. O. T. C. cadets, are:

Silver Star to Marine.

Army: Edward Berry, Purple Heart; Thomas F. Berteau, distinguished service cross; John T. Daksnis, Purple Heart; Thomas Gerrity, D.S.C. and silver star; Harold J. Hannah, Purple Heart; Andrew Hansen, Purple Heart and silver star; Bernard E. Kaufman, soldier's medal; Joseph Lu Casey Jr., Purple Heart; Joseph W. Manella, Purple Heart; John V. McKenzie, silver star; Richard Newport, Purple Heart, air medal, distinguished flying cross, three clusters; Thomas White, Purple Heart.

Air Corps: Henry J. Domagalski, two citations for bravery; George B. Farrell, D. F. C.; James T. Jarman, D. F. C. and oak leaf cluster; Richard M. Krug, D. S. C.; Lester Lind, Purple Heart and air medal; Patrick McIntyre, D. S. C.; Carl Pearson, air medal and two oak leaf clusters; Wilbert C. Peterson, air medal; William D. Riley, air medal and three oak leaf clusters, and George W. Vickers, air medal and two oak leaf clusters.

Wins Special Praise.

Robert J. Canavan of the coast guard recently won the praise of the country for his heroic deeds for which he was awarded the presidential citation. He received the citation for outwitting the Japanese on Guadalcanal. In a patrol boat with five companions who were killed by the Japs, Canavan also played dead and when the opportunity presented itself, he escaped the machine gun fire and swam and floated for 19 hours until he reached Florida island. The next day he swam a 400 yard channel and met a marine detachment. The story of his experiences has been recounted in two books about the war in the South Pacific.

Among the former Tilden students who gave their life is Richard V. Graff, a former TRIBUNE employe who worked in the advertising order department for 11 years. He was killed in the Philippines in 1942.

ONE TIME FRAT HOUSES CHAPEL FOR CATHOLICS

Calvert Club Is Open to U. of C. Students.

The house at 5735 University av. looks like all the others on fraternity row. Even the plaque on the outside which identifies it as the St. Francis De Sales center fails to hint to passers-by that the three story brick building is one of the most unique to be found on the diverse campus of the University of Chicago.

Sandwiched between a former fraternity house and a fraternity house, the former Chi Psi lodge now houses the headquarters of the Calvert club, Catholic student organization, and contains one of the few Catholic chapels to be found on a secular campus in the United States.

The dining room of the fraternity house has been converted into a small chapel which is open to the students for daily masses at 7 and 7:45 o'clock each morning and at 7:30 and 8.15 o'clock on Sundays.

Use Table as Altar.

Small stations of the cross done in the style of modern Catholic art by a volunteer artist, Sister Helene, line the walls of the small room. The heavy fraternity dinner table has been made into a large altar which is adorned with handturned walnut candlesticks. A walnut altar cross of Christ the King stands on the altar. A modernistic ceramic holy water font and copies of the beautitudes on the chapel walls complete the decor.

In addition to its use for the student masses and as a place of meditation, the chapel has been used for several marriage ceremonies performed for former university students.

When the newspapers recently revealed the former Chicago address of Saburo Kurusu, special envoy from Japan at the time of Pearl Harbor and former Japanese consul in Chicago, club members understood the origin of a Japanese letter that had been found in a chart when club members redecorated the house. It had been the Kurusu residence before becoming a fraternity house.

Has Lounge, Library.

Other rooms in the house have been arranged to provide a large lounge which members use for discussion groups, lectures, reading, and informal gatherings. A library of representative Catholic books is available in a newly constructed reading room on the first floor. The basement houses several recreation rooms.

The Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Joseph D. Connerton, resides in the house along with the Calvert club president, Peter Perschnacher, and several student priests.

The club itself was organized more than 20 years ago by Prof. Jerome Kerwin as an extension of a Catholic student club which had been on the campus for two decades before Kerwin came to the university.

Named after Sir George Calvert, first baron of Baltimore, an English statesman who colonized Maryland, the club aims to aid Catholic students in forming an intellectual basis for their faith, in providing opportunities for the frequent and proper exercise of their religious duties, in promoting social functions, and in coöperating with other religious groups for the general welfare of the students.

Mrs. Bernhard F. Amato.

AFRICAN EXHIBIT TO REMAIN OPEN ANOTHER WEEK

Negro Art Featured in South Side Show.

The collection of African art and craft now on exhibition at the South Side Community Art center, 3831 Michigan av., will continue from 1 to 9 o'clock until next Sunday when the display closes.

Among the items of special attraction are two rhinocerous hide shields, highly ornamented, brought from Ethiopia and the western Sudan. Included in the display of native musical instruments are several that have no counterpart in American or European cultures. One of the species is a guitar-harp, made of goathide in Nigeria. Another is a musical handbox constructed of reed rather than metal, and which is played with the fingers.

Have "Talking Drum."

Among the drums on display is an African "talking drum," a musical counterpart of the European kettle drum. Held tightly under one arm, it changes pitch as pressure is applied, and can be manipulated so that a primary tune can be played upon it. Other items include a ceremonial drum, and a native marimba, forerunner of the zylophone.

Native textiles, spun and woven from cotton, iron spearheads, weapons, masks, ceremonial thrones, and copper figures are also included in the exhibition. There are 18 paintings by an unknown African painter on exhibit in addition to the folk craft.

Works Are Loaned.

The committee sponsoring the exhibit includes: Ethel M. Hilliard, Jessica Anderson, Mrs. Kathryn Dickerson, the Rev. Theodore P. Ford, Morris Lewis, Frank M. Davis, David P. Ross, Marion Perkins, and Margaret T. Goss.

The works of art were loaned by the Art institute of Chicago, the Warren Buck collection, the David Alexander collection, and from Ladislas Segy, R. C. Kinsloe, and Mrs. Ida Solobillings.

JAP FLYERS NOT TOO HAPPY OVER MONSOON FLYING

But Weather Does Not Stop Yanks!

American bomber crews based in India carry on their raids over Burma despite the tough flying weather of the monsoons, but the Jap flyers don't show the same intrepidity.

Lt. Holman.

This has been the experience of Lt. Scott Holman Jr., 26, 6801 Paxton av., who returned recently from 13 months' action as bombardier on a Mitchell bomber. He took part in 35 raids against Jap railway installations, barracks, oil fields, and air fields in Burma.

U. S. Planes Carry On.

"Our planes weren't stopped by the rain, wind, and clouds of the monsoons," Lt. Holman said, "but the Jap fighters didn't like it very well. We met the least resistance during this period."

Because of clouds, he said, American crews had to rely on instrument flying during many of the raids and their bomb runs usually were made at low level.

Meets Alex Small.

During a furlough in Calcutta five months ago, when hotel accommodations were crowded, Lt. Holman shared a room in the Grand hotel with Alex Small, Chicago Tribune war correspondent.

"We spent most of the night discussing our war experiences," he said.

Lt. Holman is a graduate of Western Military academy, Alton, Ill., and of Colorado college, Colorado Springs. He was an instructor at Western Military academy when he entered the infantry in June, 1941. He transferred to the air corps six months later.

Two Companions Killed.

Of the five fellow crewmen with whom he trained at Greenville, S. C., for five months before going to India, two have been killed. One, a gunner, died five months ago while taking part in a raid in another plane. The other, a pilot, was killed several weeks ago in a transport plane crash while coming home on furlough.

Lt. Holman's father is executive vice president of Libby McNeill & Libby, food products. A brother, Gregory, 22, is in the army specialized training program at the University of Chicago.

Block Buys Bonds for Its Yanks

Tech. Sgt. Lester R. Newgren, 634 East 76th street, receives a $25 war bond from Mrs. Walter B. Ingledew, chairman of "Our Block" and Philip Olson, block captain. The organization, which is the outgrowth of OCD block meetings, converted its funds to buying war bonds for the 13 service men of the block. Mrs. Ingledew resides at 7543 Champlain avenue, and Mr. Olson at 7554 Langley avenue.

UNITY ON HOME FRONT IS BEST CHILD OF WAR

OCD Work Fathers Social Club.

Our Block is a social group that grew out of the civilian defense block meetings. The residents of the block, bounded by 75th and 76th streets and Langley and Champlain avenues, discovered they got along so well they'd like to give card parties and other social events. Since the civilian defense frowns on the passing around of money at block meetings, they formed Our Block.

With the proceeds of these promotions, which turned out to be quite a success, Philip Olson, block captain, who lives at 7554 Langley avenue, and Mrs. Walter B. Ingledew, chairman and morale warden, who resides at 7543 Champlain avenue, decided to buy war bonds with the proceeds for the boys of the block now in the service.

Buy Bonds for 13.

This suggestion met with the aproval of the entire organization and as a result, 13 service men will receive $25 war bonds in the next week.

Tech. Sgt. Lester R. Newgren, 634 East 76th street, who is home on furlough was awarded his bond last Tuesday. Sgt. Newgren, who has been stationed in the Hawaiian islands, said this was one of the pleasant surprises he hadn't expected and declared that all the boys would be grateful to receive the gift, which "really is a morale builder."

Certificates are being sent to the other boys, since the government has asked that bonds not be sent the boys. The families will receive the bond.

Meet Each Month.

The boys who will receive these certificates are: Robert Allen Paul, fireman 3d class, 7530 Langley avenue, coast guard; Sgt. Matthew A. Driscoll, 7530 Langley avenue, army; Sgt. Bertel Anderson, 7522 Langley avenue, army air corps; Pvt. Dominick J. Venti, 7526 Langley avenue, army; Sgt. William B. and Corp. Edmond G. Morris, 7513 Champlain avenue, army; Arthur VanHerwynen, motor machinist mate 3d class, 7531 Champlain avenue, navy; Lt. Walter B. Ingledew Jr., 7543 Champlain avenue, army air corps; James J. Pottinger, seaman 1st class, 7524 Langley avenue, navy; Pvt. James J. and Pvt. Louis Lapasso, 649 East 75th street, army and Edward Hennessy, radioman 3d class, 7521 Champlain avenue, navy.

The group meets once a month, either in the Olson home, or in the home of Joseph Parisi, 7515 Champlain avenue, and the attendance usually totals 30 to 35.

Plan Party for Inductees.

"Our Block is planning another party for the next batch of men who will go into the service soon," said Mrs. Ingledew.

"That means me," Mr. Olson said, displaying an envelope from Uncle Sam with his draft board number on the upper left hand side. "Just received it today and I guess I'll be leaving soon." Olson's wife, Evelyn, was one of the first residents of the block, her father having built the home they now live in over 30 years ago. Mrs. Ingledew, however, has a slight edge over Mrs. Olson, having been a resident of the block for 33 years.

CHICAGOANS AID YANK CONQUEST OF KWAJALEIN

List Men Who Helped Take Jap Base.

America's fighters from Chicago and the metropolitan area were well represented in the recent speedy conquest of the key positions of the Kwajalein atoll, the easternmost bastion of the Japanese empire in the Marshall Islands.

Our Losses Light.

Correspondents on the scene have told how battleship and aircraft deeffectively softened Japanese defenses that the 4th marine division kept its losses down as it stormed ashore behind a rolling barrage. More than 8,000 Japanese were killed while the American dead totaled 286 in the lightning capture of the atoll.

Naval support is said to have been the most magnificent that ever accompanied an amphibious assault. The beach soon was filled with marines. The Kwajalein invasion took its place as "one of the world's historic artillery bombardments" and the war's end was brought closer.

Several programs to stimulate tolerance, understanding and good will which will be held on the south side this week in celebration of Brotherhood week, today thru Saturday, were announced by Dr. James M. Yard, executive director of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews.

Three Protestant ministers and three Jewish rabbis will exchange pulpits this week. They are: Dr. George M. Gibson, United Church of Hyde Park, and Rabbi Ralph Simon, Congregation Rodfei Zedek; Dr. Rolland Schloerb, Hyde Park Baptist church, and Rabbi Asher T. Katz, Congregation Isaiah Israel, and Dr. Eric Titus, First Baptist church, and Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, K. A. M. temple.

Plan Special Programs.

Special programs built around the theme, "Brotherhood or Chaos," also will be held. Dr. David M. Jordan, pastor of the Gammon Memorial Methodist church, will speak before the Baptist Missionary Training school on Thursday.

Idea Is 10 Years Old.

Brotherhood week was originated 10 years ago and was again recognized this year by proclamations of President Roosevelt, Gov. Green, and Mayor Kelly.

Gov. Green declared in his message that "the ideals of equality and tolerance are traditionally dear to Americans. They have given color and distinctive quality to our national life from its very beginning. Inspired by these ideas, men of all races and all creeds have served our Republic and have helped it achieve commanding rank in the world."

JAN TOMASOW SOLOS ON W-G-N SYMPHONY HOUR

Jan Tomasow, South American violinist, will be the soloist on The Chicago Theater of the Air Symphony hour over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 11 p. m. tomorrow.

Tomasow will play the allegro, andante Cantabile, and rondo from Mozart's Concerto No. 4 in D major.

The orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, W-G-N's director of music, will open the program with the performance of the four movements of Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, including the allegro con brio, larghetto, gavotte, and finale. "Les Prelude," by Liszt also will be played by the orchestra.

SO YOU WANT TO GET INTO RADIO! O. K., HERE'S HOW

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"How can I get into radio?" That's the question most often asked of this desk. Mothers with youngsters who have too much talent to become Quiz Kids ask it. Small town and big city girls, too, write and say they're at least as good as Barbara Luddy; so why can't they get at a mike? A lot of bathroom tenors used to write in comparing themselves favorably to Jimmy Melton. [The army and navy probably have them now.] We suspect there actually is a lot of unrecognized and latent talent at large.

But how to get these talented folks on the air? Broadly speaking, you need some breaks—altho many a topnotch entertainer has made his own breaks.

One way to get in is to be there when the doors open. Among those knocking when radio started off were Eddie and Fanny Cavanaugh, Frank Munn, Wendell Hall, Vincent Lopez, Harvey Hays, Grace Wilson.

Lucky, you say. Yes, but you've got to hand it to them for sticking to it for 20-odd years.

Fibber Makes Own Break.

Jim Jordan [Fibber McGee] made his own break. He was a chautauqua singer back in the '20s, heard a singer on WIBO, Chicago, he didn't like, called the station and said he could do better. So they gave him a chance. He brought Marian, now his "Molly," along. And soon they were on their way.

Jack Benny, once a vaudeville entertainer, made his first mike appearance as a guest of Ed Sullivan. "This is Jack Benny," Jack began. "Now there'll be a slight pause while you say 'Who cares?'" People have been laughing at him ever since.

Edgar Bergen had been laughed out of radio studios at the suggestion of putting a ventriloquist's act on the air. One night Rudy Vallee saw Bergen and Charlie at the Chez Paree in Chicago. That was enough. Rudy introduced a lot of other entertainers to radio: Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Burns and Allen, and Frank Fay among them.

The Whiteman Springboard.

Paul Whiteman has been a springboard for many radio folk, among them Bing Crosby, Morton Downey, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Helen Jepson, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Matty Malneck, and Johnny Mercer. Eddie Cantor helped Deanna Durbin and Dinah Shore on their way.

The late Hal Kemp was responsible for getting Kay Kyser started. And Kay in turn spotted Ginny Simms singing with Tom Gerun's orchestra at the Chicago World's fair in 1934, and talked her into joining his band.

Bill Thompson [Wallace Wimple] was discovered in an amateur contest at the Chicago exposition. Frank Sinatra determined to become a singer one night while listening to Crosby. He got his first break via Major Bowes, sang on New York local stations, and later joined Tommy Dorsey before starting out alone.

Lucky Ones the Exception.

Lucky people are the exception. Behind almost every star is a story of sweat and tears. And determination. Faint heart never won a fat soap opera sponsor. A good bet, if you live in the city, is to badger the network [or station] script and program departments. Also the radio departments of advertising agencies.

Oddly enough, many of the people successful in radio say they are going to get out of it. Yes, as soon as they make one more thousand they are going to buy that farm or a spot on a Wisconsin lake and fish. The rigors of radio—irregular hours, night work, snacks between rehearsals, the nervous tension involved—all contribute to what is known as a "radio stomach." Any one in the business will tell you there are more ulcers per torso in radio than anywhere outside the Mayo clinic. So before you lay your plan of attack consider the possible consequences.

'BLOSSOM TIME' IS NEXT OPERETTA FOR W-G-N AIR THEATER

The romantic story of the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, as told in Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night before an audience of more than 4,000 spectators at Medinah temple. The performance will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire, prima donna of the series, will sing the role of Mitzi, and Igor Gorin, popular baritone, will be heard as Schubert. The part of Baron Schober will be sung by Attilio Baggiore.

Music for the performance will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the series, will produce the show.

MERCY SCHOOL TO GET SALUTE ON CITIZEN HOUR

Mercy High school on Chicago's south side will be saluted on the Citizens' of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. today. Sister Mary Agnita, the principal, will speak briefly. The school glee club, directed by Sister Mary Norinne, will sing.

Philip Maxwell, as master of ceremonies, will conduct the news quiz and will add two names to the roll of honor: Louise Dieterle, 17, of Mercy high, and Joan Hartell, 17, Belleville, Ill.

NBC Symphony Airs All-Russian Program

Works of the Russian-born composers, Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakov and Stravinsky, will be played during the NBC Symphony orchestra hour from 4 to 5 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC. The orchestra, conducted by Leopold Stokowski, will highlight today's all-Russian program with a world premiere presentation of Daniele Amfitheatrof's "De Profundis Clamavi."

Depict White House Life on W-G-N Lincoln Hour

Abe Lincoln's Story, to be heard at 3:30 p. m. today over W-G-N-Mutual, will depict incidents affecting White House life during early Civil war days in an episode titled "War Comes to the White House." McKay Morris stars in the role of Abe Lincoln. De Witt Emery, president of the National Small Business Men's association, will speak.

TRAFFIC SAFETY DRIVE TO START IN LAKE COUNTY

Area Council Pledges Its Support.

The Lake County [Ind.] Area council of the Chicago Motor club pledged its support to the safety campaign soon to be started in the Chicago area by the army's sixth service command to reduce traffic accidents among war plant workers. The campaign is the result of a plea by Mayor Kelly to combat accidents which he labeled as one of the most deadly saboteurs of home front efficiency.

Specially designed safety posters will be erected in war plants, newspaper and radio publicity will emphasize the importance of safety to pedestrians and motorists, and safety publicity will be inserted in pay roll envelopes. Working with the army command are the Chicago Motor club, the National Safety council and the Greater Chicago Safety council.

Will Supplement Driver.

The Lake County Area council will supplement the campaign by urging churches, schools, and civic organizations to preach safety.

Rep. William A. Rowan [2d Dist.] and Rep. Ray Madden [1st Dist., Ind.] are supporting the area council in pointing out the need for flasher signals at the Kennedy avenue crossing over the Grand Trunk railroad near Highland, Ind., where five persons were killed recently in an auto-train collision.

One of the council projects completed is the raising of flasher lights with the installation of new poles which are easily seen at night at the crossing of Ridge road over the Monon railroad track in Munster.

Hammond Men at Conference.

Among those from Hammond who attended a recent meeting of the council were: Dr. Robert Gillis, chamber of commerce; Edward Brown and J. C. Johnson, Chicago and Calumet District Transit company; Thomas J. Martinson, chief of police, Msgr. E. J. Mungoven, All Saints church; G. M. Arnette and J. E. Ogren, Chicago Motor club; L. A. Otto, safety council, and Rollis Weesner, board of education.

PRIZES IN CASH AWAIT SCHOOLS IN PAPER DRIVE

Catholic Pupils Compete for $500 Total.

Instead of flags, six cash prizes totaling $500 will be distributed to the parochial schools which lead in collecting waste paper during the campaign from Feb. 14 to March 18.

This amount is the parochial school's share of the $1,000 prize money donated to Chicago schools for the drive by the Chicago Newspaper Publishers association.

In deciding on this plan, Msgr. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools, said that almost every parochial school now has a fine stand of national colors, but needs cash to carry on many of its activities.

First Prize $200.

"We believe the cash prizes will greatly stimulate interest and rivalry between the various schools, and thus increase the collection of America's number one critical war material," he said.

First prize for the largest paper collection during the campaign will be $200. The second prize will be $100, third, $75; four and fifth, $50 each, and sixth, $25.

A different system of prize awards will be used by the public schools. To the leading schools in the nine districts flags will be given. Every two weeks the boy and girl with the largest paper collection record in each of more than 300 schools will receive a ribbon of merit.

Sisters to Keep Records.

Msgr. Cunningham and Joseph H. Marcus, representing the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, have worked out a record keeping system for each of the parochial schools. The sister superiors in charge of the schools will each week send a post card to Msgr. Cunningham's office detailing the amount of scrap paper collected and sold during the week.

Twenty schools have their waste paper collected by the Catholic Salvage bureau. Proceeds from the sale of this paper will go to charities named by church authorities. Those schools not on the list serviced by the Catholic Salvage bureau will have their paper collected by trucks assigned to the work by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee.

Assert Hoarding Is Only Threat to Coal Supply

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many home owners apparently are concerned about the supply of coal for use in homes and a number of facts of interest along this line come from Appalachian Coals, Inc., Cincinnati, O.

Preliminary figures for 1943 show that 36 million more tons of coal were delivered to retail coal merchants and in turn delivered by them to their customers than in an average year. In other words, last year 120 million tons of coal were delivered for use in homes, altho the average per year for the last 10 years was only 84 million tons.

It is logical to assume that a very large amount of this coal is still in coal bins in homes. Unfortunately there are a few local areas which have an unprecedented demand for coal, due to shifts in population, lack of other fuels, etc., and which actually need fuel.

Authorities have urged that any one who has several tons of coal in his bin, enough to last out the season, or at least two or three months supply, should not order more coal now.

This is asked in order that the coal industry may have more opportunity to take care of people who are in actual immediate need for fuel. Voluntary coöperation of this sort is much easier and less bothersome than rationing. There is no lack of supply of coal; the only problem is to get equitable distribution.

In the interests of fuel conservation Appalachian Coals, Inc., Transportation building, Cincinnati, will be glad to answer questions pertaining to heating problems. A letter addressed to the above address, care of chief engineer, also will bring you a copy of "Save Coal," a chart for users of hand fired equipment, and "Stoker Etiquet" for stoker users, free of charge.

LENT TO OPEN WITH SOLEMN RITES

A GENIUS HIDES HIS TALENTS UNDER APRON

Jack of All Trades, He's Master, Too!

BY IRENE PONTO.

Only a village could produce an individual as individual as Miles V. Hartong of Plainfield.

Practical yet artistic, active yet relaxed, with an inherent dignity not lost in amusing mannerisms, he has during his 73 years been a farmer, barber shop proprietor, life insurance agent, garage man, sheet metal contractor, operator of a restaurant and concession in old Electric park of Plainfield, and hobbyist extraordinary. He now operates the village community hall-skating rink in his garage building.

Left a widower 21 years ago, he has been father and mother to his five children. "I did all the cooking for three years," he says, incidentally. He sent two of the children thru college and now has two daughters, Louise and Thyra, at home. Sgt. Burton is in England, Hobart lives out west, and Margaret is in Normal, Ill. Thyra and Burton have pilot licenses and Louise is working for hers.

Builds Miniature Fort.

The family home is across from the village green, which boasts only one structure, a miniature Fort Beggs constructed by Hartong, who has become the town and, some say, almost the county historian. Fussily dissatisfied with historical accounts of scenes and actions with which he is familiar, he is attempting to correct these "errors."

From his array of antiques, which furnish the home, and fill a couple small barns, he has brought out a cherry table and made a fine typewriting stand of it by installing a movable shelf. At his elbow is a polished burr of wood mounted on short legs, an auxiliary table.

"My daughters don't like the straight legs; they'd like something fancier," but I claim this is easier to dust," says Houekeeper Hartong.

What! No Coat?

Ambling in his moccasins out the door to his auto, he was asked about an overcoat. "Uh, I wore my coat only once last winter and not at all this winter. People see me running around without a coat, but I see them all bundled up," he grins from over his spectacles. With voluminous trousers hitched up almost to his shoulder blades and with a collegiate topper on his head, Busyman Hartong is aware of his comic appearance, but dismisses it as inconsequential in view of larger plans.

By early afternoon he must have the monster furnace of his skating rink-dance hall roaring for the high school gym and sports classes, and still going strong for the evening dance or organization jamboree. Hartong's hall is the one commodious building of the village and here all large events are held.

Hall Reveals His Touch.

The hall, too, reveals the master's touch. He has roofed over the inside and put recessed lights, covered with unbreakable glass, in the ceiling. He has rigged up his own loudspeaker system. Adjoining is a small store with Hartong made sections for roller skates under the counter and a display of Hartong made bows and arrows and various daggers, stilettos, and bowie knives for relatives to send to their service men.

Upstairs is a dressing room for the football and basketball players. Their equipment litters the area at times and often is draped over Hartong's cherished log cabin and fort replicas. A pingpong ball may settle lightly near a cannon on the fort's parade ground, and as Hartong swoops upon the puff, he crankily complains, "I wish I could make these boys keep order up here," just as he scolds when he pulls out a fresh, but buttonless, shirt from a drawer at home, "Just like the children; I can't depend on them!"

He's Always in a Hurry.

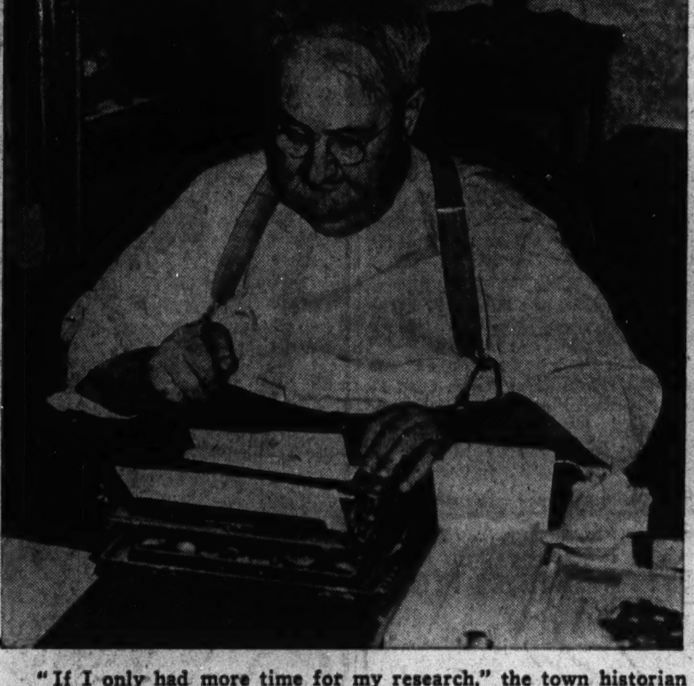
Talking at a clip of 350 m. p. h., because he is always in a hurry, the beloved village character finds his greatest joy in describing how he makes bows out of hedgewood and osage wood, arrows from Norway pine, daggers from hacksaw blades, handles from steer bones he has boiled, scraped, and bleached. All in the same breath, he recounts how early writers have erroneously placed the site of Chicago at its present location rather than in the Calumet-Sag valley farther south, "at the southwest corner of Lake Michigan as it was first known thruout the world," he thunders, and mops again a steamy brow.

Remembering the dark and waiting hall, he skips and runs across its waxed floor to the light switches, quoting Barbara Fritchie or Stanley Brown or some other verse equally appropriate to the occasion.

Miles Hartong enjoys life in this topsy-turvy world. He may complain mildly of minor stresses, but, pop! he meets another new idea and off he goes to employing his ingenuity in fresh activity.

Plainfield's Historian Is Also a Busy Man at Other Trades

Miles Hartong, 73, is Plainfield's village historian, operator of its meeting hall, and busy man of affairs and hobbies. Happy as a kid when absorbed in his handicraft ventures or while engaged in carrying out one of his numerous "ideas," Hartong has fitted up a basement workshop, knocking out part of a wall and digging out some of the ground himself. He presides over wheels and belts, manufacturing daggers and bowie knives and a few bows and arrows. His kitchen chair, mounted on stilts, is a lordly throne and he sits enveloped in a huge canvas apron to which he ingeniously has added canvas "wings" to take care of a spreading girth.



"If I only had more time for my research," the town historian moans occasionally. Mr. Hartong has started a history of Will county, he knows Plainfield history backwards and forwards, and for his public lectures he has rigged up historical slides, with his notes typewritten in looseleaf notebooks. Characteristically, Miles Hartong has his own typewriting and spelling system, admits it, and wishes simultaneously for a stenographer to get facts and notes into genuine articles for publication. He would like a historical room opened in the village library for old pictures, articles, and his homemade replicas of forts.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Harry Neal Baum of Hinsdale will have a leading role in the play "In Time to Come," to be presented four nights, starting Thursday, by the Little Theater of Western Springs. Mr. Baum, who is advertising manager for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., considers theatricals merely as a hobby, but as a small boy he attended the first performance of "The Wizard of Oz" of which his father, L. Frank Baum, was the author.

Mr. Baum was asked by a reporter visiting his home at 218 E. Hickory st., Hinsdale, to recall memories of his father, who wrote the book that became familiar to most American households and which was turned into a musical extravaganza that ran for seven years thruout the country at the turn of the century.

Tells Stories to Sons.

"Father was the swellest man I ever knew," Mr. Baum began. "With my brother Ken on one knee and myself on the other, he told us whimsical stories before they became material for his books. We used to sak him, for instance, how black birds baked in a pie could later come out and sing. He gave us his own satisfactory explanation."

L. Frank Baum was born near Syracuse, N. Y., the son of a wealthy oil man. When he was 21, the family fortune had dwindled and he and his wife went west to Aberdeen, S. D. The couple homesteaded at first, and then Frank became editor of a weekly newspaper in the town. Harry and his younger brother were born in Aberdeen, where copies of the Baum newspaper are still cherished.

The man with jingles in his soul decided to take the family to Chicago. Here, a job as a salesman of chinaware appeared as an opportunity. The work required traveling and, during leisure hours on the road, Mr. Baum began writing magazine stories.

Move to South Side.

At first the family resided in a large rented home near Humboldt park, but later moved to the south side. Mr. Baum's first book was "Mother Goose in Prose," and much of its material was of the sort the boys had heard on their father's knee. The illustrator was Maxfield Parrish, and Harry Baum has one of the original drawings on the wall of his Hinsdale home.

When "Father Goose" was published in 1899, W. W. Denslow made the drawings, which were among the first to be in color. It was Mr. Baum's conviction that children loved color with their pictures, altho it was difficult to influence publishers to go to the additional expense at the time.

"The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," 1899, not only provided a meal ticket for the family, which included four boys, but the luxuries of life. There was a summer home in Michigan as well as a residence on the south side. Then Montgomery and Stone, eccentric dancers, made the play that seemed to have been made especially for them. Fred Stone became the Scarecrow and Dave Montgomery the Tin Woodman.

The author and his wife later moved to Hollywood, Cal., where, at 63, he died in 1919. To the last he continued to write "Oz" books, modernized fairy tales in which the wonderment is retained, and the nightmares left out.

Dedicates Book to Son.

In his Hinsdale library Harry Baum has one book which his father dedicated to him, "The Life and Adventures of Santa Claus." He also has an orginal copy of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz." Both Mr. Baum and his wife, Brenda, are members of the Western Springs Little Theater. Mr. Baum will take the role of President Wilson in "The Time to Come," which has a background of Washington and Paris during the 1918 peace conference.

W. SIDE FLYERS MAKING HISTORY IN S. W. PACIFIC

Record in Air Battles Is Impressive.

West side airmen are making history in the Southwest Pacific as they add victories to the United States' cause.

The achievements of the west side pilots and their crews are impressive and historical, Tribune correspondents have reported. First hand accounts of some of the heroes have been received in Chicago.

Destroys Jap Plane.

Among the top flight pilots in the Southwest Pacific, is Lt. Louis H. Zedlicka, 5313 25th st., who received the distinguished flying cross for destroying a Jap Zero plane in a 30 minute fight over Buin.

Another flyer, Lt. James H. Case of Oak Park, destroyed four planes in an hour and 25 minute over Ambon. He also received the distinguished flying cross. Lt. John Clarke, 4022 Lexington st., was awarded the air medal for sinking a Jap submarine at Lae.

Wins Silver Star.

The silver star was awarded to Capt. Paul G. Brown of Oak Park for gallantry in action when he used the propellor of a Airacobra he was flying to cut away the top of a Zero's rudder and its vertical fin to destroy it in combat. The air battle took place in the New Guinea area.

Richard Barsh of St. Charles was a gunner on one of two patrol boats that shot down four of 30 Jap planes off Gasmata. The distinguished flying cross also was awarded to Capt. Frank C. Libuse of Cicero, who has seen much action in the Southwest Pacific.

CHICAGOANS AID YANK CONQUEST OF KWAJALEIN

America's fighters from Chicago and the metropolitan area were well represented in the recent speedy conquest of the key positions of the Kwajalein atoll, the easternmost bastion of the Japanese empire in the Marshall Islands.

Correspondents on the scene have told how battleship and aircraft deeffectively softened Japanese defenses that the 4th marine division kept its losses down as it stormed ashore behind a rolling barrage. More than 8,000 Japanese were killed while the American dead totaled 286 in the lightning capture of the atoll.

Naval support is said to have been the most magnificent that ever accompanied an amphibious assault. The beach soon was filled with marines. The Kwajalein invasion took its place as "one of the world's historic artillery bombardments" and the war's end was brought closer.

West side men who took part in the battle are Sgt. John S. Stauffer, 300 N. Latrobe av.; Pvt. John M. Guilfoyle, 1923 S. Talman av.; Pvt. Anthony M. Ciangik, 1017 S. Oakley blvd.; Pvt. Stephen M. Kosek, 2641 Cullerton st.; Pvt. Theodore S. Kusnierz, 1737 16th st.; Hospital Apprentice Martin Nadis, 1612 S. Trumbull av.; Pvt. Robert Kawell, Lombard; Pvt. Eugene L. Porod, Cicero; Pvt. Charles B. Holmer, River Forest; Pvt. Samuel F. Angelucci, Cicero, and Seaman John R. Persche, Brookfield.

JAN TOMASOW SOLOS ON W-G-N SYMPHONY HOUR

Jan Tomasow, South American violinist, will be the soloist on The Chicago Theater of the Air Symphony hour over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 11 p. m. tomorrow.

Tomasow will play the allegro, andante Cantabile, and rondo from Mozart's Concerto No. 4 in D major.

The orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, W-G-N's director of music, will open the program with the performance of the four movements of Prokofieff's Classical Symphony, including the allegro con brio, larghetto, gavotte, and finale. "Les Prelude," by Liszt also will be played by the orchestra.

SO YOU WANT TO GET INTO RADIO! O. K., HERE'S HOW

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"How can I get into radio?" That's the question most often asked of this desk. Mothers with youngsters who have too much talent to become Quiz Kids ask it. Small town and big city girls, too, write and say they're at least as good as Barbara Luddy; so why can't they get at a mike? A lot of bathroom tenors used to write in comparing themselves favorably to Jimmy Melton. [The army and navy probably have them now.] We suspect there actually is a lot of unrecognized and latent talent at large.

But how to get these talented folks on the air? Broadly speaking, you need some breaks—altho many a topnotch entertainer has made his own breaks.

One way to get in is to be there when the doors open. Among those knocking when radio started off were Eddie and Fanny Cavanaugh, Frank Munn, Wendell Hall, Vincent Lopez, Harvey Hays, Grace Wilson.

Lucky, you say. Yes, but you've got to hand it to them for sticking to it for 20-odd years.

Fibber Makes Own Break.

Jim Jordan [Fibber McGee] made his own break. He was a chautauqua singer back in the '20s, heard a singer on WIBO, Chicago, he didn't like, called the station and said he could do better. So they gave him a chance. He brought Marian, now his "Molly," along. And soon they were on their way.

Jack Benny, once a vaudeville entertainer, made his first mike appearance as a guest of Ed Sullivan. "This is Jack Benny," Jack began. "Now there'll be a slight pause while you say 'Who cares?'" People have been laughing at him ever since.

Edgar Bergen had been laughed out of radio studios at the suggestion of putting a ventriloquist's act on the air. One night Rudy Vallee saw Bergen and Charlie at the Chez Paree in Chicago. That was enough. Rudy introduced a lot of other entertainers to radio: Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Burns and Allen, and Frank Fay among them.

The Whiteman Springboard.

Paul Whiteman has been a springboard for many radio folk, among them Bing Crosby, Morton Downey, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Helen Jepson, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Matty Malneck, and Johnny Mercer. Eddie Cantor helped Deanna Durbin and Dinah Shore on their way.

The late Hal Kemp was responsible for getting Kay Kyser started. And Kay in turn spotted Ginny Simms singing with Tom Gerun's orchestra at the Chicago World's fair in 1934, and talked her into joining his band.

Bill Thompson [Wallace Wimple] was discovered in an amateur contest at the Chicago exposition. Frank Sinatra determined to become a singer one night while listening to Crosby. He got his first break via Major Bowes, sang on New York local stations, and later joined Tommy Dorsey before starting out alone.

Lucky Ones the Exception.

Lucky people are the exception. Behind almost every star is a story of sweat and tears. And determination. Faint heart never won a fat soap opera sponsor. A good bet, if you live in the city, is to badger the network [or station] script and program departments. Also the radio departments of advertising agencies.

Oddly enough, many of the people successful in radio say they are going to get out of it. Yes, as soon as they make one more thousand they are going to buy that farm or a spot on a Wisconsin lake and fish. The rigors of radio—irregular hours, night work, snacks between rehearsals, the nervous tension involved—all contribute to what is known as a "radio stomach." Any one in the business will tell you there are more ulcers per torso in radio than anywhere outside the Mayo clinic. So before you lay your plan of attack consider the possible consequences.

'BLOSSOM TIME' IS NEXT OPERETTA FOR W-G-N AIR THEATER

The romantic story of the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, as told in Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night before an audience of more than 4,000 spectators at Medinah temple. The performance will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire, prima donna of the series, will sing the role of Mitzi, and Igor Gorin, popular baritone, will be heard as Schubert. The part of Baron Schober will be sung by Attilio Baggiore.

Music for the performance will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the series, will produce the show.

EIGHT TRIBUNE REPORTERS ON SPELLING BEE

Whether women reporters are better spellers than newspaper men will be determined when eight Chicago Tribune reporters join the spelling bee over W-G-N at noon today.

Members of the women's team will be June Geserick, Jean McCarthy, Dorothy Johnson, and Dorothy Cook. The men are Robert Young, Merle Hubka, Lee Shassere, and Leslie Moneypenny. Guy Savage will be the master of ceremonies. Cash awards will be given to members of both teams and an individual award will be given to the contestant with the highest score.

MERCY SCHOOL TO GET SALUTE ON CITIZEN HOUR

Mercy High school on Chicago's south side will be saluted on the Citizens' of Tomorrow program over W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. today. Sister Mary Agnita, the principal, will speak briefly. The school glee club, directed by Sister Mary Norinne, will sing.

Philip Maxwell, as master of ceremonies, will conduct the news quiz and will add two names to the roll of honor: Louise Dieterle, 17, of Mercy high, and Joan Hartell, 17, Belleville, Ill.

LYONS TOWNSHIP PUPILS COLLECT GIFTS FOR VETS

Lyons Township High school in La Grange has an active war commission and to that organization has fallen one of the unusual activities peculiar to war time. This time it is a double headed affair, a collection drive that comes to a close tomorrow.

Books, playing cards, and dictionaries are being sought for the use of veterans at Hines hospital. The dictionaries are desired by crossword puzzle fans, and this phase of the drive is being made for the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The other half of the service job is a collection of costume jewelry for troops in the South Seas to be used for presents to natives. In this collection, the L. T. H. S. war commission is aiding the work of the La Grange civilian defense organization.

The society maintains national headquarters in Cicero. During the last year, Mr. Musik said, the organization has purchased bonds to build two bomber planes and $1,250,000 in bonds toward the cost of the Liberty ship, A. J. Cermak, launched last November.

ASK STUDENTS AT PROVISO HIGH FOR OLD CLOTHES

Old clothes to be distributed to refugees in foreign countries and to poverty stricken people here at home are to be collected by O. O. Dillner's senior chapter of Proviso Hi-Y at the high school Thursday and Friday.

The Proviso student body will be asked to contribute either new clothes or used clothing in good condition. New or mended shoes are also solicited for distribution to war sufferers anywhere—Spain, Switzerland, North Africa, and elsewhere—as opportunities for service arise.

Promotes Good Will.

The project is being carried thru by arrangement with the American Friends Service committee, which attempts to relieve human suffering and to promote international good will thru a ministry of reconciliation. Motivated by a desire to serve, the committee makes no distinction of race, creed, religion, or political affiliation.

Founded in 1917, the committee represents the Society of Friends. Its work in war areas, in depressed industrial sections of the United States, and in peace education has been widely supported.

Distribute Tons of Clothes.

During 1943, 83 tons of clothing were distributed to needy persons by committee workers in England, Continental Europe, North Africa, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, and the United States.

The project, sponsored by the Hi-Y club and promoted thru its service committee, is the first activity of its kind to be undertaken by a high school group.

PRIZES IN CASH AWAIT SCHOOLS IN PAPER DRIVE

Catholic Pupils Compete for $500 Total.

Instead of flags, six cash prizes totaling $500 will be distributed to the parochial schools which lead in collecting waste paper during the campaign from Feb. 14 to March 18.

This amount is the parochial school's share of the $1,000 prize money donated to Chicago schools for the drive by the Chicago Newspaper Publishers association.

In deciding on this plan, Msgr. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools, said that almost every parochial school now has a fine stand of national colors, but needs cash to carry on many of its activities.

First Prize $200.

"We believe the cash prizes will greatly stimulate interest and rivalry between the various schools, and thus increase the collection of America's number one critical war material," he said.

First prize for the largest paper collection during the campaign will be $200. The second prize will be $100, third, $75; four and fifth, $50 each, and sixth, $25.

A different system of prize awards will be used by the public schools. To the leading schools in the nine districts flags will be given. Every two weeks the boy and girl with the largest paper collection record in each of more than 300 schools will receive a ribbon of merit.

Sisters to Keep Records.

Msgr. Cunningham and Joseph H. Marcus, representing the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, have worked out a record keeping system for each of the parochial schools. The sister superiors in charge of the schools will each week send a post card to Msgr. Cunningham's office detailing the amount of scrap paper collected and sold during the week.

Twenty schools have their waste paper collected by the Catholic Salvage bureau. Proceeds from the sale of this paper will go to charities named by church authorities. Those schools not on the list serviced by the Catholic Salvage bureau will have their paper collected by trucks assigned to the work by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee.

Assert Hoarding Is Only Threat to Coal Supply

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many home owners apparently are concerned about the supply of coal for use in homes and a number of facts of interest along this line come from Appalachian Coals, Inc., Cincinnati, O.

Preliminary figures for 1943 show that 36 million more tons of coal were delivered to retail coal merchants and in turn delivered by them to their customers than in an average year. In other words, last year 120 million tons of coal were delivered for use in homes, altho the average per year for the last 10 years was only 84 million tons.

It is logical to assume that a very large amount of this coal is still in coal bins in homes. Unfortunately there are a few local areas which have an unprecedented demand for coal, due to shifts in population, lack of other fuels, etc., and which actually need fuel.

Authorities have urged that any one who has several tons of coal in his bin, enough to last out the season, or at least two or three months supply, should not order more coal now.

This is asked in order that the coal industry may have more opportunity to take care of people who are in actual immediate need for fuel. Voluntary coöperation of this sort is much easier and less bothersome than rationing. There is no lack of supply of coal; the only problem is to get equitable distribution.

In the interests of fuel conservation Appalachian Coals, Inc., Transportation building, Cincinnati, will be glad to answer questions pertaining to heating problems. A letter addressed to the above address, care of chief engineer, also will bring you a copy of "Save Coal," a chart for users of hand fired equipment, and "Stoker Etiquet" for stoker users, free of charge.

EXPECT CHURCH CROWDS IN LENT

MOZART PUPILS HEAP 40 TONS ON PAPER PILE

Rooms Compete for War Job Honors.

Catholic schools to compete for cash prizes in paper salvage contest. Details page 6.

Already 40 tons of waste paper have been been collected by students of Mozart school, 2200 N. Hamilin av., to be turned into cartons for blood plasma, bomb fins, and K ration containers. Mozart is not the only school in the city doing valuable work in salvaging waste paper; it is just one of the hundreds of city schools coöperating in the nation-wide campaign. But its enthusiasm is typical of the spirit with which young Americans are attacking a war job they are able to do.

The drive at Mozart began last Dec. 2. Principal Charles P. Saunders visited each of the rooms, displaying a five pound bundle of newspaper, to show that every student, however small, could carry that many old papers to the school's salvage pile. In the weeks which have followed, the students have gone further, commandeering coaster wagons, wheelbarrows, sleds, and even an old baby buggy to bring in their waste paper.

Put Drive on Game Basis.

Realizing that young contributors must have some tangible reward to spur them on, and knowing that a contest whips up interest among young people, the school officials put the salvage drive on a game basis. The reward was a trophy, going each week to the room which has turned in the most waste paper in the week preceding. The results were tabulated on a bulletin board in the main hall, with the goal of 10 tons of paper for each room marked "Tokio," and the progress toward that goal charted each week by tiny red paper airplanes.

The trophy is a bit of salvage itself. Last spring, when the students brought in scrap metal, school engineer Roy Brady recognized in one tarnished and battered piece some good metal. The piece was dissembled, burred and polished in the school machine shop, and turned out to be a gleaming flag pole of brass, surrounded by a tiny fence of brass knobs. Ftted out with a new flag and new ropes, the trophy is highly coveted.

Waste Paper for Show Tickets.

Also stimulating the drive at Mozart was the magician's show held last week. In order to get a ticket for the show, each student had to pay an "admission price" of 30 pounds of waste paper.

Altho the 8th grade now leads the contest with 13,000 pounds of scrap paper, not all the work is being done by the older students. The trophy was held last week by a room of 3A and 4B students. Almost all of them had contributed to the drive, and Betty Jean Bentsen, 2501 N. Avers av., had brought in 150 pounds herself, part of a wagon load of 232 pounds the three Bentsen children had hauled to school.

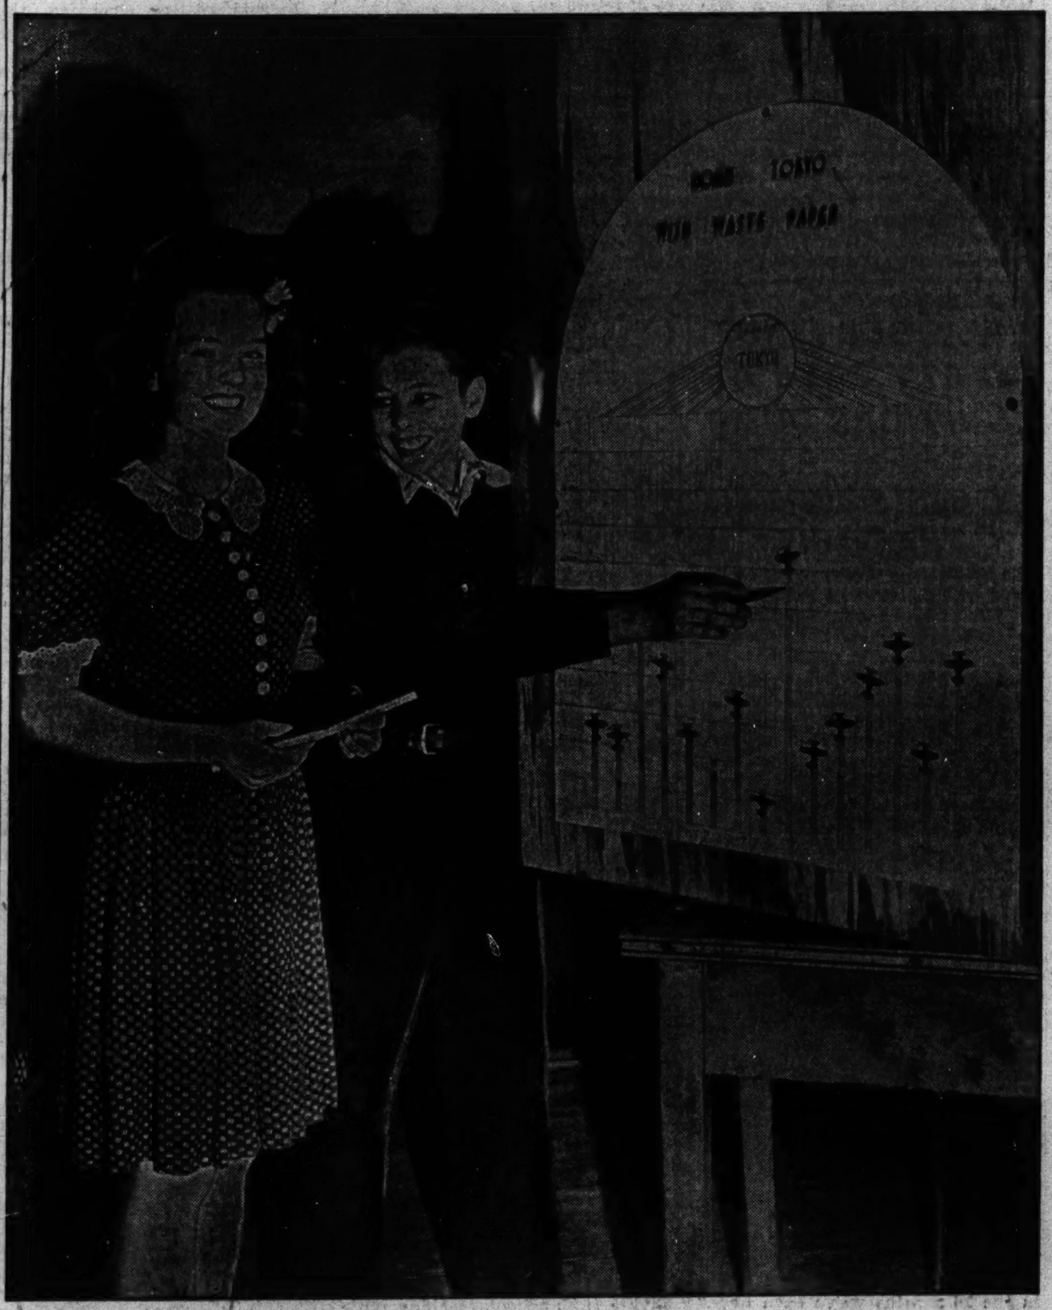
The kindergarten is second in the contest, with 10,000 pounds. Half the afternoon kindergarten children brought in scrap paper last week, and some of their bundles were so heavy mothers came and did the carrying.

Save Bottle Tops.

Newspapers are not the only old paper pupils collect. There are many magazines, bundles of loose paper, and old cardboard cartons on the scrap pile. Frugal students save the paper caps from their milk bottles, the sacks in which they bring their lunches, and clean out their desks periodically for the drive.

Many of the schools in the paper salvage campaign are using the proceeds of sale of the paper in school recreation. But not Mozart. Some of the money goes into the school fund, but a far greater amount has been given to the infantile paralysis fund, the Red Cross, and Boy Scouts. One of the next contributions will be to the U. S. O.

Pupils of Mozart School Set a Fast Pace in Paper Salvage Drive



Flying straight for Tokio are the students of Mozart school, 2200 N. Hamlin av. Finding a war job they can do well, they have plunged into the paper salvage campaign with enthusiasm. As a result, 80,000 pounds of scrap paper have been collected already, and school officials are confident of reaching and even passing their goal of 100,000 pounds by April 1. Showing the progress of the different rooms, a large chart hangs in the main hall. Tiny red paper airplanes fly upward each week, nearer their goal of Tokio. William Schutz, 3855 Fullerton av., points out to Rosalie Anderson, 2342 N. Central Park av., that their room, 301, of 8th grade students, is ahead in the race, with 13,000 pounds to their credit.

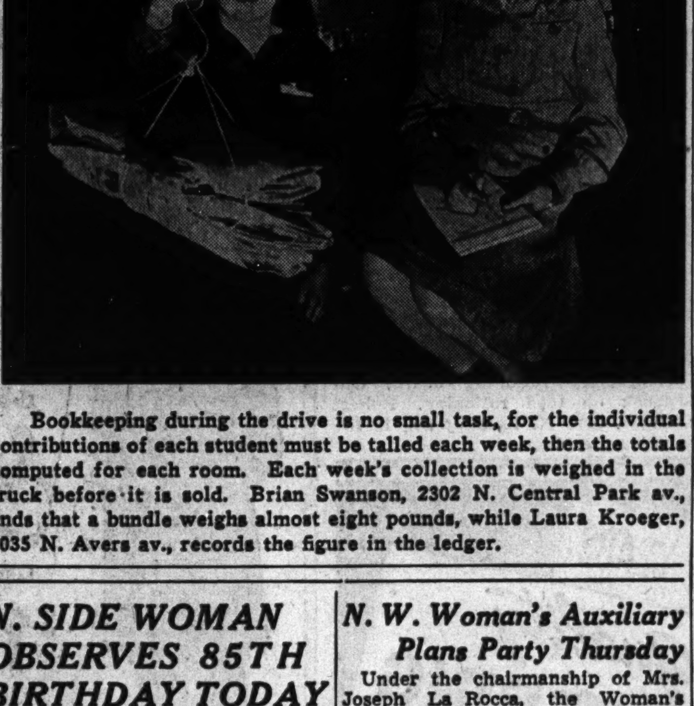
Wagons, wheelbarrows, sleds, and even old baby buggies are used by Mozart students to transport their loads of bundled newspapers. Joyce and Tommy Dare, 3742 Fullerton av., wheel a buggy full of paper into the school. Joyce and Tommy have a special interest in the campaign, for their cousin, Lt. Sherry Dare, was the first Chinese pilot to be commissioned by the United States army air forces, and is now a fighter pilot in the Asiatic theater of war.

Traveling trophy in the Mozart school paper drive is this gleaming brass flag pole, resurrected by School Engineer Roy Brady during the scrap metal drive last spring. Polished and buffed in the school shops, the flag pole turned into a thing of beauty, and now the pupils vie each week for its possession. The 3A and 4B students had it last week, for the week preceding they had brought in the most waste paper. At the end of the drive, the room with the largest total gets permanent possession of the trophy. As his classmates crowd around him, Marshall Payne, 3713 Palmer st., tests the ropes which raise or lower the tiny flag.

Betty Gotz, 2246 N. Springfield av., brought in 30 pounds last week, the "admission price" to a magician's show in the auditorium. Jacqueline Goldenburg, 2312 N. Drake av., has been a consistent contributor to the scrap paper pile.



Bookkeeping during the drive is no small task, for the individual contributions of each student must be tallied each week, then the totals computed for each room. Each week's collection is weighed in the truck before it is sold. Brian Swanson, 2302 N. Central Park av., finds that a bundle weighs almost eight pounds, while Laura Kroeger, 2035 N. Avers av., records the figure in the ledger.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Harry Neal Baum of Hinsdale will have a leading role in the play "In Time to Come," to be presented four nights, starting Thursday, by the Little Theater of Western Springs. Mr. Baum, who is advertising manager for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., considers theatricals merely as a hobby, but as a small boy he attended the first performance of "The Wizard of Oz" of which his father, L. Frank Baum, was the author.

Mr. Baum was asked by a reporter visiting his home at 218 E. Hickory st., Hinsdale, to recall memories of his father, who wrote the book that became familiar to most American households and which was turned into a musical extravaganza that ran for seven years thruout the country at the turn of the century.

Tells Stories to Sons.

"Father was the swellest man I ever knew," Mr. Baum began. "With my brother Ken on one knee and myself on the other, he told us whimsical stories before they became material for his books. We used to sak him, for instance, how black birds baked in a pie could later come out and sing. He gave us his own satisfactory explanation."

L. Frank Baum was born near Syracuse, N. Y., the son of a wealthy oil man. When he was 21, the family fortune had dwindled and he and his wife went west to Aberdeen, S. D. The couple homesteaded at first, and then Frank became editor of a weekly newspaper in the town. Harry and his younger brother were born in Aberdeen, where copies of the Baum newspaper are still cherished.

The man with jingles in his soul decided to take the family to Chicago. Here, a job as a salesman of chinaware appeared as an opportunity. The work required traveling and, during leisure hours on the road, Mr. Baum began writing magazine stories.

Move to South Side.

At first the family resided in a large rented home near Humboldt park, but later moved to the south side. Mr. Baum's first book was "Mother Goose in Prose," and much of its material was of the sort the boys had heard on their father's knee. The illustrator was Maxfield Parrish, and Harry Baum has one of the original drawings on the wall of his Hinsdale home.

When "Father Goose" was published in 1899, W. W. Denslow made the drawings, which were among the first to be in color. It was Mr. Baum's conviction that children loved color with their pictures, altho it was difficult to influence publishers to go to the additional expense at the time.

"The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," 1899, not only provided a meal ticket for the family, which included four boys, but the luxuries of life. There was a summer home in Michigan as well as a residence on the south side. Then Montgomery and Stone, eccentric dancers, made the play that seemed to have been made especially for them. Fred Stone became the Scarecrow and Dave Montgomery the Tin Woodman.

The author and his wife later moved to Hollywood, Cal., where, at 63, he died in 1919. To the last he continued to write "Oz" books, modernized fairy tales in which the wonderment is retained, and the nightmares left out.

Dedicates Book to Son.

In his Hinsdale library Harry Baum has one book which his father dedicated to him, "The Life and Adventures of Santa Claus." He also has an orginal copy of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz." Both Mr. Baum and his wife, Brenda, are members of the Western Springs Little Theater. Mr. Baum will take the role of President Wilson in "The Time to Come," which has a background of Washington and Paris during the 1918 peace conference.

GUNNER ON 'FORT' TELLS OF BOUTS IN AIR WITH NAZIS

N. W. Sider Wins Flying Cross and Oak Leaves.

The distinguished flying cross and the air medal with three oak leaf clusters has been awarded Sgt. Russell J. Damm, who recently completed his 25th heavy bombing assault over Germany and the occupied countries of Nazi Europe. Sgt. Damm, 24 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Damm of 6119 Grace street, is engineer and waist gunner on the 8th air force Flying Fortress, Horrible Hanks.

Sgt. Russell J. Damm.

Altho Sgt. Damm has had several narrow escapes, his most dangerous experience, he says, was during an attack on Huls, Germany. Just before reaching the target, the supercharger on one of the engines was hit by enemy fighter attack.

"That put the engine out of commission," Sgt. Damm said. "Then the tail was shot up. One fighter after another came in and caught the tail with heavy bursts of ammunition. The tail guns were knocked out, and the tail gunner was wounded. The oxygen system also was thrown out of gear. We were flying about 20,000 feet, but rather than risk losing the protection of the formation, we stayed where we were without oxygen."

2 Engines Knocked Out.

The plane was further damaged when the Nazis changed their tactics and started to make head-on attacks on the nose. "They knocked out numbers one and three engines," Sgt. Damm recounts, "and shot up the control cables on the right side of the ship. That knocked us out of formation completely, and we had to turn and make for home."

Flying by itself, the Fortress was an easy target for enemy planes. They were just about to queue up to finish it off, when an escort of Spitfires arrived and fought off the Nazi attack.

"During that flight I came closer than ever before to being hit," says Sgt. Damm. "A bullet came right thru my window and took the toe off my flying boot. It didn't touch me, but it wounded the other waist gunner."

On another flight, Sgt. Damm's mechanical ability saved the Fortress from a possible explosion. During the bombing of St. Dizier, two incendiary bombs jammed in the bomb bay instead of releasing.

Ship in Peril.

"One was hanging by a wire, the other was half released," Sgt. Damm recalls. "We couldn't leave them that way because if we left the bomb bay doors open, it would slow down the ship and make us easy meat for the Nazi fighters. If we closed the doors, the whole ship was liable to blow up."

Taking a pair of pliers, Sgt. Damm went down into the bomb bay. It took a few minutes and a great deal of ingenuity, but Sgt. Damm succeeded in releasing the bombs. It was only then that the crew of the Fortress began to breathe easily again.

Sgt. Damm, who has been in the service since March, 1941, is a former student of Lane Technical High school. Before his induction he operated his own gas station on the northwest side.

LT. W. E. WIELAND HAS CLOSE CALL ON 'BLIND DATE'

Plane Weathers Storm of Nazi Flak.

The Flying Fortress Blind Date, of which Lt. Warren E. Wieland, 3048 North Parkside avenue, is co-pilot, has kept numerous dates with Mars since its crew christened the ship some time ago. Few of the "dates" have been so perilous, however, as a recent mission to Gelsenkirchen, Germany, in which the ship was badly shot up by the enemy.

Lt. Wieland.

The Fortress was flying at an altitude of more than 20,000 feet when it was riddled by flak fire which severed its oxygen lines and control cables, forcing the ball turret and left waist gunners to leave their stations and attach their masks to other oxygen lines.

Tore Gunner's Helmet Off.

"The flak was so heavy," reported Lt. Wieland, "that it tore up the waist and tail sections of our plane and gave the gunners back there a pretty rough time. The right waist gunner's helmet was torn off by flak."

Lt. Wieland played an important part in helping to drive back the Nazi fighters, since on this mission he served as the fire control officer. It was his duty to call off the positions of the incoming planes to the gunners.

Was 18th Mission.

The assault on Gelseinkirchen was the 18th bombing mission for Lt. Wieland, who now holds the air medal with two oak leaf clusters.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Wieland of the Parkside avenue address, Lt. Wieland was an electrical worker with the Automatic Electric company before entering the service.

America's fighters from Chicago and the metropolitan area were well represented in the recent speedy conquest of the key positions of the Kwajalein atoll, the easternmost bastion of the Japanese empire in the Marshall Islands.

Our Losses Light.

Correspondents on the scene have told how battleship and aircraft defectively softened Japanese defenses that the 4th marine division kept its losses down as it stormed ashore behind a rolling barrage. More than 8,000 Japanese were killed while the American dead totaled 286 in the lightning capture of the atoll.

Naval support is said to have been the most magnificent that ever accompanied an amphibious assault. The beach soon was filled with marines. The Kwajalein invasion and the war's end was brought closer.

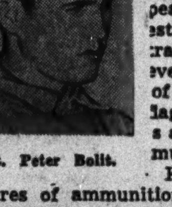
N.W. SIDER FINDS SAFETY PAYS AT MUNITIONS DUMP

Sgt. Bolit Stationed in England.

To casual observers, or even to the searching eyes of Nazi reconnaissance flyers, the army air base at which Sgt. Peter F. Bolit is stationed in England looks like a peaceful country estate. The air of tranquility, however, is the result of skilful camouflage, for the site is actually a huge munitions dump.



Sgt. Peter Bolit.

Keeping the stores of ammunition concealed is a 24-hour a day task for Sgt. Bolit and the company of which he is the noncom head. Long lines of trucks snake thru the depot day and night, unloading stores or heading towards a bomber base with their stacks of olive-drab bombs.

Worth Without Lights at Night.

"Keeping the supplies moving is one of our toughest jobs," says Sgt. Bolit, son of Mrs. Sofia Bolit of 2950 North California avenue. "At night we work without a single light. But in spite of this problem, we've handled thousands of tons of high explosives without an accident in the 16 months we've been here."

Sgt. Bolit supervises the handling of all types of ammunition and bombs, from relatively small .50 caliber shells to 4,000 pound block busters, from the time they enter the depot until they leave for the bombers which will give them special delivery to Germany.

Repair Damaged Ammunition.

By repairing threads in nose and tail fuse cavities, and by replacing damaged retainer rings and adapter boosters, Sgt. Bolit and his repair crews have rescued an estimated million dollars' worth of blasting power which would otherwise have been scrapped.

Sgt. Bolit has worked with explosives since his induction, June 3, 1940, at Selfridge field, Mich. Asked how he and his men managed to attain such a safety record, he replied, "Anybody working around explosives has to be careful. There isn't a man alive today who can claim he's been careless with bombs."

Sgt. Bolit is a former student of Carl Schurz and Lane Technical High schools.

Costumed in the voluminous satins and laces of half a century ago, Mrs. L. E. Davies and Mrs. W. J. De Cook will pour at the tea and social meeting to be held Tuesday, the 50th anniversary of the Park Ridge Woman's club.

Special guests at the program at 2 p. m. in the American Legion club rooms will be 10 past presidents of the club. They are Mrs. Helen S. Holbrook, Mrs. Ida A. Peters, Mrs. Harriette A. Thompson, Mrs. Ethel J. Crawford, Mrs. Lucy M. Whitelaw, Mrs. Esther Mielke, Mrs. Kathryn C. Drenk, Mrs. Una C. Jones, Mrs. Phyllis Herold, and Mrs. Pearl Coughlin.

Mayor to Be Guest.

Other special guests will be Mrs. Charles S. Clark, niece of Mrs. Z. D. Root, who founded the club; Dr. A. J. Buchheit, first mayor of Park Ridge, and James D. Tierney, the present mayor. The Rev. Walter Spangler, pastor of St. Luke's English Lutheran church, will give the anniversary invocation.

The club held its first meeting on Washington's birthday half a century ago at the Park Ridge home of Mrs. Root. Originally known as the Tuesday Literary club, its 20 charter members pledged to support literary, philanthropic, and educational causes.

In 1900 the name was changed to the Park Ridge Woman's club. The organization was admitted to the state federation in 1902, to the 7th district federation in 1911, and to the general federation in 1912.

Encourages Civic Improvements.

During its half-century of existence, the club has done much to encourage civic improvement and to widen educational facilities in the community. Thru the efforts of its civics committee a grant of $5,000 to finance the Park Ridge public library was secured from Andrew Carnegie in 1910. The club also was instrumental in establishing a branch of the Postal Savings bank, the Park Ridge Parent-Teacher association, and a Red Cross unit. It also helps to support the Park Ridge School for Girls, and sponsors the activities of youth groups in the community.

The club has 85 members. Its officers are Mrs. Glenn L. Hackett, president; Mrs. L. E. Davies, 1st vice president; Mrs. B. P. Johnson, 2d vice president; Mrs. Dorothy A. Johann, recording secretary; Mrs. F. J. Burt, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. H. Wunluck, treasurer; Mrs. Will H. Connelly, publicity chairman, and Mrs. W. M. Nelson, program chairman.

Co-ed Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Willis E. Roe of Park Ridge have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lois, to Lt. Ralph Vincent Switzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Switzer of Roseville, Ill. Miss Roe is a graduate of Maine Township High school, and is attending the University of Illinois. Lt. Switzer, a graduate of the University of Illinois, is with the United States army air forces at Salt Lake City, Utah.

NORWOOD PARK WOMEN TACKLE HEAVY PROGRAM

Club Members Pledge Aid to Vets.

In one of the most comprehensive programs it has ever tackled, the Norwood Park Woman's club has just announced its club-wide service program, wherein each of the club's 250 members will pledge herself to work on one or more projects during the period from January thru mid-April. Hospitalized veterans, the U. S. O. and an orphanage will reap the benefits of the club's extensive work.

Mrs. Allen C. Wideburg.

Mrs. Alfred F. Lange.

First project is that of collecting carpet rags for the veterans at Hines hospital. The ex-service occupational therapy division of the club is sponsoring this, with Mrs. Allen C. Wideburg as chairman. The war service committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Herbert V. Trieger, is managing the "gloom chaser" scrapbook project, compiling books of stories, cartoons, and pictures for the U.S.O. Third project is being handled thru the philanthropic division, headed by Mrs. Alfred F. Lange, and consists of providing quilts for the Lydia Children's home, 4300 Irving Park rd.

Rag Quota Is 500 Pounds.

In the campaign for carpet rags, the goal has been set at 500 pounds, with individual assignments of five pounds. Members have contributed carpet rags to Hines for more than a decade, but the largest yearly contribution thus far had been 65 pounds, little more than an eighth of this year's quota.

To collect five pounds of clean, strong rags is not as easy a task as it might sound. The rags must be washed, torn into narrow strips, folded three times so that no raw edges are exposed, and then rolled tightly into compact balls weighing one pound each.

First to fill her quota of five pounds was Mrs. Arthur J. C. Harper, 6939 Hobart av.

The men at Hines like bright colors in the rags which they make into rugs. But if the women find any white rags, torn from old sheets or towels, these are wound into separate balls, and dyed by the men at the hospital. The club members hold extra meetings, when they spend an afternoon chatting over their tasks of tearing, sewing, folding, and winding the rags. They declare a fine new sociability has sprung up just since they started the job.

Family Enterprises Develop.

The scrapbooks which the club members are making for the U. S. O. have developed into family enterprises. To fill the club quota of 300 such scrapbooks, each member signing for this project must complete five books. This means much clipping of old magazines, assembling pictures of "pin-up" girls, and editing jokes and poems and cartoons to make the books sparkle.

The books are purchased from the U. S. O. by the club, and individual members may contribute toward that cost if they wish. To date, none of the members has completed her five scrapbooks, but all who have accepted the assignment are working toward their joint goal of 300. Many are aided by their children, who find in the scrapbooks an opportunity to do their bit for men in service.

When completed, the books may be sent directly to men in service, turned over to military or naval hospitals, U. S. O. clubs, or returned to the U. S. O. headquarters for distribution.

Set Quotas on Quilts.

Each member who signs up for the quilt project must fill a quota of eight blocks, toward the dozen summer and winter comforters the club is making for one of the boys' rooms at the Lydia Children's home. All patches are in the same pattern, and may be made with scraps from the club member's sewing basket, with three colors in each patch.

First to complete her quota was Mrs. Henry A. Kaiser, 6337 Sayre av. Shortly afterward, Mrs. Robert G. Ball, 5873 Harlem av., president of the club, turned in 24 blocks, and is still at work piecing more. When all the blocks are completed, the committee will put them together into comforter tops, and in March the club will hold an old fashioned comforter tying afternoon.

Furnish Girl's Room.

Also on the program for the philanthropic division is the furnishing of a girl's room at the Lydia home. Each girl takes her turn living by herself in this small room, away from the dormitory, and the club members are determined to make the room as attractive as possible.

SO YOU WANT TO GET INTO RADIO! O. K., HERE'S HOW

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"How can I get into radio?" That's the question most often asked of this desk. Mothers with youngsters who have too much talent to become Quiz Kids ask it. Small town and big city girls, too, write and say they're at least as good as Barbara Luddy; so why can't they get at a mike? A lot of bathroom tenors used to write in comparing themselves favorably to Jimmy Melton. [The army and navy probably have them now.] We suspect there actually is a lot of unrecognized and latent talent at large.

But how to get these talented folks on the air? Broadly speaking, you need some breaks—altho many a topnotch entertainer has made his own breaks.

One way to get in is to be there when the doors open. Among those knocking when radio started off were Eddie and Fanny Cavanaugh, Frank Munn, Wendell Hall, Vincent Lopez, Harvey Hays, Grace Wilson.

Lucky, you say. Yes, but you've got to hand it to them for sticking to it for 20-odd years.

Fibber Makes Own Break.

Jim Jordan [Fibber McGee] made his own break. He was a chautauqua singer back in the '20s, heard a singer on WIBO, Chicago, he didn't like, called the station and said he could do better. So they gave him a chance. He brought Marian, now his "Molly," along. And soon they were on their way.

Jack Benny, once a vaudeville entertainer, made his first mike appearance as a guest of Ed Sullivan. "This is Jack Benny," Jack began. "Now there'll be a slight pause while you say 'Who cares?'" People have been laughing at him ever since.

Edgar Bergen had been laughed out of radio studios at the suggestion of putting a ventriloquist's act on the air. One night Rudy Vallee saw Bergen and Charlie at the Chez Paree in Chicago. That was enough. Rudy introduced a lot of other entertainers to radio: Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Burns and Allen, and Frank Fay among them.

The Whiteman Springboard.

Paul Whiteman has been a springboard for many radio folk, among them Bing Crosby, Morton Downey, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Helen Jepson, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Matty Malneck, and Johnny Mercer. Eddie Cantor helped Deanna Durbin and Dinah Shore on their way.

The late Hal Kemp was responsible for getting Kay Kyser started. And Kay in turn spotted Ginny Simms singing with Tom Gerun's orchestra at the Chicago World's fair in 1934, and talked her into joining his band.

Bill Thompson [Wallace Wimple] was discovered in an amateur contest at the Chicago exposition. Frank Sinatra determined to become a singer one night while listening to Crosby. He got his first break via Major Bowes, sang on New York local stations, and later joined Tommy Dorsey before starting out alone.

Lucky Ones the Exception.

Lucky people are the exception. Behind almost every star is a story of sweat and tears. And determination. Faint heart never won a fat soap opera sponsor. A good bet, if you live in the city, is to badger the network [or station] script and program departments. Also the radio departments of advertising agencies.

Oddly enough, many of the people successful in radio say they are going to get out of it. Yes, as soon as they make one more thousand they are going to buy that farm or a spot on a Wisconsin lake and fish.

The rigors of radio—irregular hours, night work, snacks between rehearsals, the nervous tension involved—all contribute to what is known as a "radio stomach." Any one in the business will tell you there are more ulcers per torso in radio than anywhere outside the Mayo clinic. So before you lay your plan of attack consider the possible consequences.

'BLOSSOM TIME' IS NEXT OPERETTA FOR W-G-N AIR THEATER

The romantic story of the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, as told in Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night before an audience of more than 4,000 spectators at Medinah temple. The performance will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire, prima donna of the series, will sing the role of Mitzi, and Igor Gorin, popular baritone, will be heard as Schubert. The part of Baron Schober will be sung by Attilio Baggiore.

Music for the performance will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the series, will produce the show.

20 N. W. SIDERS IN ILLINOIS TECH GOLDEN CLASS

Institute Reaches Fiftieth Year Tomorrow.

When Illinois Institute of Technology holds its golden anniversary commencement tomorrow, 20 northwest side residents will be among the 218 seniors and seven graduate students receiving college degrees.

Arnold Thompson.

Fifty years of service and educational progress will be climaxed by the institute's commencement celebration. Armour Institute of Technology, which merged with Lewis institute in 1940 to form Illinois Tech, first opened its doors to students on Sept. 14, 1893. E. C. Elliott, president of Purdue university, will be the commencement speaker at the graduation convocation, to be held at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow evening in Orchestra hall.

Giving Honorary Degrees.

In addition to the 225 students receiving college degrees, several outstanding industrial executives and high ranking army and navy officers will be awarded honorary degrees.

Baccalaureate services will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at Central Church of Chicago. Dr. H. W. Ruopp, pastor, will deliver the sermon.

Northwest side students and their classmates who will receive degrees are completing their college work four months early, instead of in June because of Illinois Tech's round-the-calendar, war time program.

Northwest Sider Ranks High.

One of the highest ranking students in the class is a northwest side resident, Arnold Thompson, 2234 N. La Crosse av. With an average of 2.89, Thompson is third high among engineering graduates, and first among seniors in industrial engineering.

The February seniors constitute the largest of the three classes to be graduated from Illinois Tech during 1944. Classes also will be graduated in June and October. Thirty-four of the graduating students, four of them from the northwest side, will be wearing the navy blue. They are among the 694 navy V-12 students stationed at Illinois Tech for engineering training.

Navy V-12 students from the northwest side, and the fields in which they will receive degrees, are: Eldred Koenig, 212 S. Oak st., Itasca, fire protection engineering; Thomas McAvoy, 4251 N. Mozart av., chemical engineering; Thompson, industrial engineering, and John Yoxen, 4449 N. Linder av., civil engineering.

Approximately two-fifths of the class—95—will receive bachelor of science degrees in mechanical engineering. In addition to the students named above, northwest side graduates and the departments from which they receive bachelor of science degrees are:

Mechanical engineering: Tullio Carnesciali, 2924 N. 75th ct., Elmwood Park; James Cubbidge, 4729 Deming pl.; Chester Kostrzewa, 6325 Newport av., and Harmon Yessne, 3402 Ohio st.

N. W. RESIDENT GIVES 11 TIMES TO BLOOD BANK

Many northwest side residents have appeared among those who donated blood at the Red Cross Blood Donor service recently. Ben Copple, 5120 Kildare av., had the most donations, 11, to his credit. Having donated 10 pints of blood each were William McBride, 2106 N. Oak Park av.; Theodore Mykiel, 5240 Montrose av.; Herbert Woodward, Park Ridge, and Eleanore Karcher, Barrington.

Nine time donors included Mrs. Lena Panek, 5754 Lawrence ave.; Elizabeth Morehouse, 7233 Odell av.; Mrs. Alice Webster, 4222 Keystone av., and Patrick Connolly, 4219 Kedvale av. Eight time donors were Ferdinand Materer, 3113 Major av.; Sophie Mazurewicz, 2501 Lotus av.; Morton Petrie, 5944 Fitch av.; Anna Rehak, 2607 Mulligan av.; Albert G. Kantz, 4958 Deming pl.; Felix Klafta, Park Ridge, and Mrs. Annette Woodward, Park Ridge.

Largest number of northwest side residents registered were seven time donors: Mrs. Evelyn Nelson, 5455 Lynch av.; Mrs. Violett Rupp, 5721 Leland av.; Frank Witt, 5262 Larned av.; Mrs. Helen Schuett, 5109 Ardmore av.; Harold Starkel, 7226 Summerdale st.; Eleanor Fischer, 5144 Altgeld st.; Marlowe Holter, 5037 Montana st.; Ruth Bayna, 2036 Keystone av.; Mrs. Beatrice Boultbee, 5508 Waveland av.; Nan C. Rauen, 4929 Kenneth av.; Margaret Williams, Des Plaines; Walter Petri, Villa Park, and Paul Pettet, Villa Park.

"Unfinished Symphony" Slated on W-G-N-Mutual

Schubert's Symphony No. 8 in B Minor, more widely known as the "Unfinished Symphony," will be featured by the Cleveland Symphony orchestra between 8 and 9 o'clock tonight over W-G-N Mutual. Mozart's overture to "Marriage of Figaro," Wagner's "Bacchanale" from "Tannhauser," and Strauss' "Voices of Spring" waltzes will also be played.

Cited in Science Talent Quest

Four Maine Township High school seniors have been awarded honorable mention citations in the 3d annual science talent search conducted by the Westinghouse Electric company, and sponsored locally by James R. Irving, head of Maine's science department. The high ranking students, here shown at work in the chemistry laboratory, are, left to right, Elaine Vavrinek, Carol Oberbillig, Perky Gates, and Frances Hodes.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Feb. 21.

It is about time to sow some vegetable and flower seeds and there are a few things that should be kept in mind. First, the container is important. It should not be so large that it is unwieldly, especially if it is to occupy a window in the house. A cigar box with a few holes bored in the bottom makes an excellent flat or seed box and usually a considerable number of plants can be started in it.

Cover the hole with pieces of broken pot, or place a layer of small stones over the bottom; sift soil and use the rough particles on the bottom above the stones and tamp it down gently with a piece of board so that the sides are compacted. Then sift soil thru a smaller mesh wire and sow the seeds.

Tuesday, Feb. 22.

Recently several amateur gardeners stated that their gardens were in a west suburban section but they couldn't grow potatoes. On making inquiry, it was discovered the soil was a sticky clay that was most unsuitable for potato growing.

Gardeners should not attempt growing potatoes unless the soil is suitable. Corn, peas, and several others had better not be grown, for they take too much space in the small garden. The best potato land is one that contains an abundance of humus and is well drained. A good seed sowing container is a tobacco tin bent at the open end sufficiently to prevent too rapid flow of seed.

Wednesday, Feb. 23.

It is a good time to spray the scale infested shrubs and trees with lime-sulphur or miscible oil concoctions. They can be obtained, with full directions for their use, from local dealers.

Spraying fruit trees at the proper time is a must if good fruits are to be enjoyed. Lay in a supply of stakes so that all plants will be labeled immediately after sowing or planting.

Thursday, Feb. 24.

Sow seeds of the following at once if it hasn't been done: Lobelia, ageratum, petunia, verbena, and pentstemon. Give them plenty of light. Many plants will begin showing activity and a little fertilizer can be given. Use it sparingly in the beginning and as activity increases more can be applied.

Gardeners living where cow manure can be obtained should soak half a barrel of water to half a bushel of manure and use the liquid obtained. Weaken it at first by adding water.

Friday, Feb. 25.

Grapes should be pruned now. A good method is to cut away the oldest wood leaving a few of the principal stems. There are several methods of training the grape and all are good when properly executed.

A wild grape or a Concord variety over the back porch furnishes shade and fruits but the old wood must be pruned back to prevent too much foliage. Several amateur gardeners are planting dwarf fruit trees for they have a spread of only 12 feet and grow no higher; the standard fruit tree, like the apple, has a spread of 25 or more feet and grows equally as high, which makes it too large for the average back yard.

Saturday, Feb. 26.

Purchase a few geraniums for planting in borders. There are many good varieties and in several colors, and most of them do well if given proper care. They should be kept "on the dry side," that is, do not keep the ground saturated with water for they flower best when the soil is moist but not soaked continually.

Too much food causes a soft growth and flowers are not produced abundantly as they should be. Buy a few of the pelargonium tricolor, meaning those with highly colored foliage. They furnish colorful pot plants during the summer. A collection of these is always interesting and unique.

DRAFT OFFICIALS PRAISE WORK OF N. W. SIDE PARKS

The provisions for inductees' examinations in Portage Park and Pulaski Park fieldhouses have been commended by Col. Paul G. Armstrong, state director of selective service, in a letter revealed recently by George T. Donoghue, general superintendent of the park district. Under the new regulations providing for the examination of selective service registrants in advance of induction, this and other local examination headquarters in the parks will no longer be needed. Col. Armstrong states, however, that the "system of examination stations in Chicago's parks was designated the 'best in the country' by Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, national chief of the medical division." In his letter, Col. Armstrong points out that the success of the system of examinations in the parks was especially due to the coöperation of John Zelinski, supervisor of Pulaski park; Michael J. George, supervisor of Portage park; V. E. Brown, chief of recreation, and Roger F. Shanahan, chief of police.

PRIZES IN CASH AWAIT SCHOOLS IN PAPER DRIVE

Catholic Pupils Compete for $500 Total.

Instead of flags, six cash prizes totaling $500 will be distributed to the parochial schools which lead in collecting waste paper during the campaign from Feb. 14 to March 18.

This amount is the parochial school's share of the $1,000 prize money donated to Chicago schools for the drive by the Chicago Newspaper Publishers association.

In deciding on this plan, Msgr. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools, said that almost every parochial school now has a fine stand of national colors, but needs cash to carry on many of its activities.

First Prize $200.

"We believe the cash prizes will greatly stimulate interest and rivalry between the various schools, and thus increase the collection of America's number one critical war material," he said.

First prize for the largest paper collection during the campaign will be $200. The second prize will be $100, third, $75; four and fifth, $50 each, and sixth, $25.

A different system of prize awards will be used by the public schools. To the leading schools in the nine districts flags will be given. Every two weeks the boy and girl with the largest paper collection record in each of more than 300 schools will receive a ribbon of merit.

Sisters to Keep Records.

Msgr. Cunningham and Joseph H. Marcus, representing the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, have worked out a record keeping system for each of the parochial schools. The sister superiors in charge of the schools will each week send a post card to Msgr. Cunningham's office detailing the amount of scrap paper collected and sold during the week.

Twenty schools have their waste paper collected by the Catholic Salvage bureau. Proceeds from the sale of this paper will go to charities named by church authorities. Those schools not on the list serviced by the Catholic Salvage bureau will have their paper collected by trucks assigned to the work by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee.

Assert Hoarding Is Only Threat to Coal Supply

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many home owners apparently are concerned about the supply of coal for use in homes and a number of facts of interest along this line come from Appalachian Coals, Inc., Cincinnati, O.

Preliminary figures for 1943 show that 36 million more tons of coal were delivered to retail coal merchants and in turn delivered by them to their customers than in an average year. In other words, last year 120 million tons of coal were delivered for use in homes, altho the average per year for the last 10 years was only 84 million tons.

It is logical to assume that a very large amount of this coal is still in coal bins in homes. Unfortunately there are a few local areas which have an unprecedented demand for coal, due to shifts in population, lack of other fuels, etc., and which actually need fuel.

Authorities have urged that any one who has several tons of coal in his bin, enough to last out the season, or at least two or three months supply, should not order more coal now.

This is asked in order that the coal industry may have more opportunity to take care of people who are in actual immediate need for fuel. Voluntary coöperation of this sort is much easier and less bothersome than rationing. There is no lack of supply of coal; the only problem is to get equitable distribution.

In the interests of fuel conservation Appalachian Coals, Inc., Transportation building, Cincinnati, will be glad to answer questions pertaining to heating problems. A letter addressed to the above address, care of chief engineer, also will bring you a copy of "Save Coal," a chart for users of hand fired equipment, and "Stoker Etiquet" for stoker users, free of charge.

S. W. CHURCHES PLAN LENTEN RITES

FORMER TILDEN STUDENTS SET RECORD IN WAR

Many Win Citations; 81 Give Lives.

What are the boys of Tilden doing now? The same boys who not so long ago worried about their Latin marks and who'd win the basketball tournament and where the school prom would be held. They are the men who are scattered all over the world now.

Tilden High school is proud of the record of her boys on the battlefront. Many have won citations for bravery beyond the call of duty. Many will not be back to visit the school campus, for the service flag of Tilden High contains 81 gold stars.

Among the students who have won citations, a large number of them former R. O. T. C. cadets, are:

Silver Star to Marine.

Air Corps: Henry J. Domagalski, two citations for bravery; George B. Farrell, D. F. C.; James T. Jarman, D. F. C. and oak leaf cluster; Richard M. Krug, D. S. C.; Lester Lind, Purple Heart and air medal; Patrick McIntyre, D. S. C.; Carl Pearson, air medal and two oak leaf clusters; Wilbert C. Peterson, air medal; William D. Riley, air medal and three oak leaf clusters, and George W. Vickers, air medal and two oak leaf clusters.

Wins Special Praise.

Robert J. Canavan of the coast guard recently won the praise of the country for his heroic deeds for which he was awarded the presidential citation. He received the citation for outwitting the Japanese on Guadalcanal. In a patrol boat with five companions who were killed by the Japs, Canavan also played dead and when the opportunity presented itself, he escaped the machine gun fire and swam and floated for 19 hours until he reached Florida island. The next day he swam a 400 yard channel and met a marine detachment. The story of his experiences has been recounted in two books about the war in the South Pacific.

Among the former Tilden students who gave their life is Richard V. Graff, a former TRIBUNE employe who worked in the advertising order department for 11 years. He was killed in the Philippines in 1942.

Many in Army.

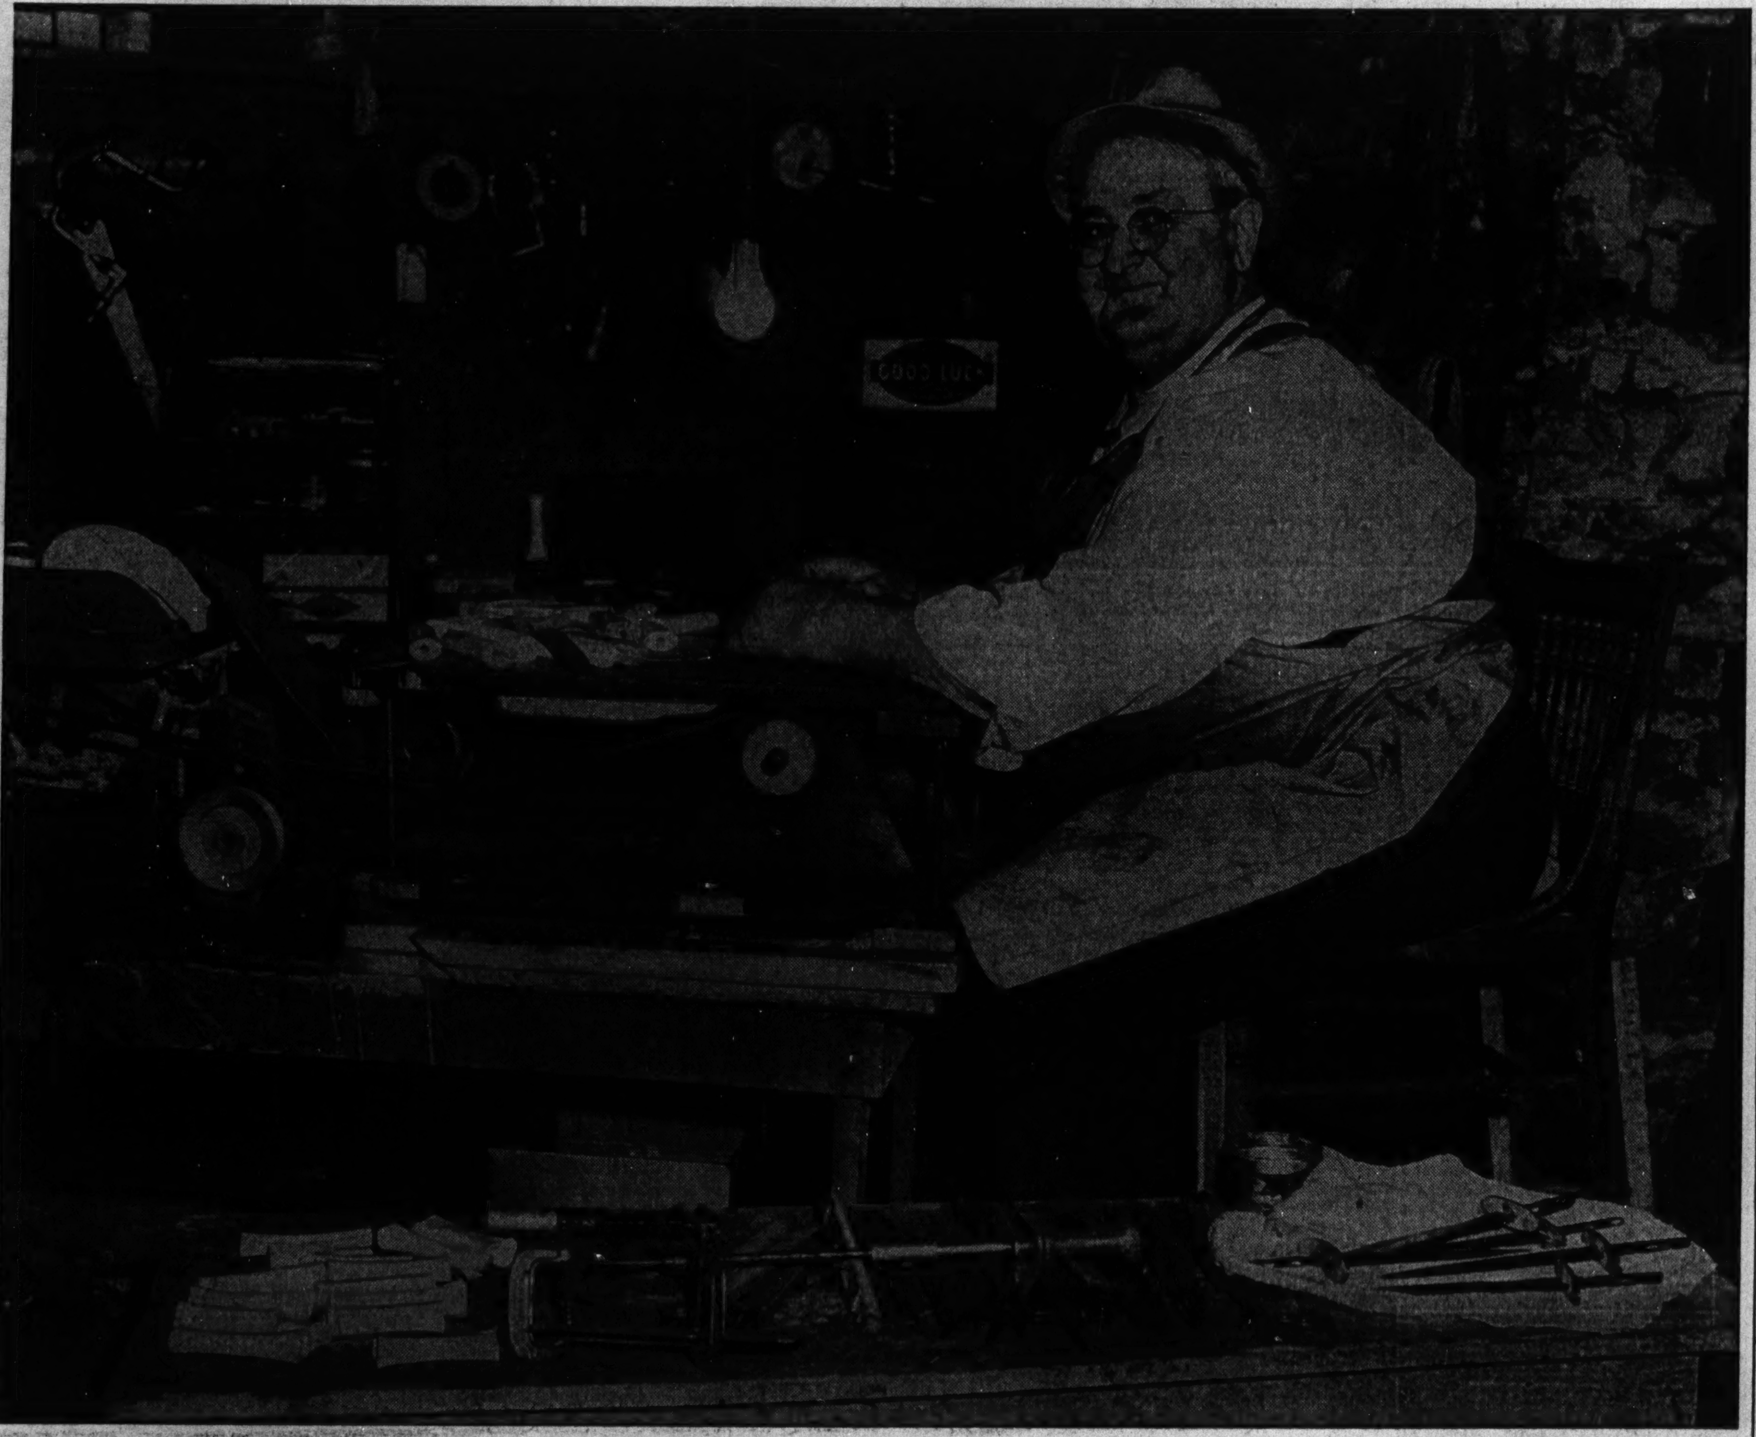
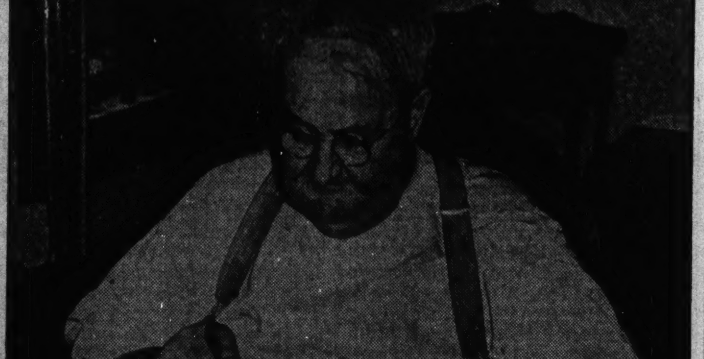
Dale Carnegie Will Speak on Harvey Forum Feb. 28

Dale Carnegie, author and business consultant, will speak on "Living in a War Torn World," at 8:15 o'clock Monday evening, Feb. 28, before the Harvey community forum, sponsored by the Harvey Optimist club. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of Thornton Township High school.

Plainfield's Historian Is Also a Busy Man at Other Trades



Miles Hartong, 73, is Plainfield's village historian, operator of its meeting hall, and busy man of affairs and hobbies. Happy as a kid when absorbed in his handicraft ventures or while engaged in carrying out one of his numerous "ideas," Hartong has fitted up a basement workshop, knocking out part of a wall and digging out some of the ground himself. He presides over wheels and belts, manufacturing daggers and bowie knives and a few bows and arrows. His kitchen chair, mounted on stilts, is a lordly throne and he sits enveloped in a huge canvas apron to which he ingeniously has added canvas "wings" to take care of a spreading girth.



"If I only had more time for my research," the town historian moans occasionally. Mr. Hartong has started a history of Will county, he knows Plainfield history backwards and forwards, and for his public lectures he has rigged up historical slides, with his notes typewritten in looseleaf notebooks. Characteristically, Miles Hartong has his own typewriting and spelling system, admits it, and wishes simultaneously for a stenographer to get facts and notes into genuine articles for publication. He would like a historical room opened in the village library for old pictures, articles, and his home-made replicas of forts.

Because his leg went to sleep while he crouched in a foxhole, Pvt. Edward R. Budding, 8834 Talman av., found himself inside Japanese lines and a surprise visitor to an enemy trench on Bougainville Island. Slowed up by his stiff leg, Budding found his outfit had moved up ahead of him. Sniper fire broke out and he dove into a foxhole. He found himself among four Japs.

"I pulled the pin of a grenade," the marine recounts, "and jumped out. It took only a couple of seconds because I was scared stiff." He later contacted his unit 50 yards ahead.

10 PARACHUTES FOR 11 MEN, SO ALL COME BACK

Plane Returns to Base Despite Fires.

Among the tales Lt. John Pezzoli, 1135 Union avenue, Chicago Heights, will have to tell when he returns from the South Pacific war area are his adventures when the Liberator bomber on which he was navigator fought off seven Zeros and landed safely at an advanced base despite several separate fires aboard and brakes that would not work.

The bomber was on its way home from an armed reconnaissance of the Bismarck sea when, without warning, an incendiary bullet tore thru the plane, setting fire to the emergency radio set. A gunner was hit, but came to in time to fire at the seven Zeros attacking the plane.

10 Parachutes for 11 Men.

After a shell started a fire in the front of the plane, the pilot ordered the 11 members of the crew to prepare to bail out, but another shell tore thru the observer's parachute, leaving only 10 available 'chutes for the 11 men.

As the plane started losing altitude, the control cables were shot away, fire broke out in the bomb bay, in the air intake of one engine, and in the bail-out radio.

Down Two Zeros.

During the 20 minute fight, the Liberator downed two Zeros and proceeded to an advanced air base where, as soon as the front wheels touched the ground, the crew raced to the rear of the plane to make the tail come down, since the landing gear was damaged.

Despite 50 holes from machine gun fire, the Liberator was back in the air two days later.

Genius Hides His Talents Under Apron

BY IRENE PONTO.

Only a village could produce an individual as individual as Miles V. Hartong of Plainfield.

Practical yet artistic, active yet relaxed, with an inherent dignity not lost in amusing mannerisms, he has during his 73 years been a farmer, barber shop proprietor, life insurance agent, garage man, sheet metal contractor, operator of a restaurant and concession in old Electric park of Plainfield, and hobbyist extraordinary. He now operates the village community hall-skating rink in his garage building.

Left a widower 21 years ago, he has been father and mother to his five children. "I did all the cooking for three years," he says, incidentally. He sent two of the children thru college and now has two daughters, Louise and Thyra, at home. Sgt. Burton is in England, Hobart lives out west, and Margaret is in Normal, Ill. Thyra and Burton have pilot licenses and Louise is working for hers.

Builds Miniature Fort.

The family home is across from the village green, which boasts only one structure, a miniature Fort Beggs constructed by Hartong, who has become the town and, some say, almost the county historian. Fussily dissatisfied with historical accounts of scenes and actions with which he is familiar, he is attempting to correct these "errors."

From his array of antiques, which furnish the home, and fill a couple small barns, he has brought out a cherry table and made a fine typewriting stand of it by installing a movable shelf. At his elbow is a polished burr of wood mounted on short legs, an auxiliary table.

"My daughters don't like the straight legs; they'd like something fancier," but I claim this is easier to dust," says Houekeeper Hartong.

What! No Coat?

Ambling in his moccasins out the door to his auto, he was asked about an overcoat. "Uh, I wore my coat only once last winter and not at all this winter. People see me running around without a coat, but I see them all bundled up," he grins from over his spectacles. With voluminous trousers hitched up almost to his shoulder blades and with a collegiate topper on his head, Busyman Hartong is aware of his comic appearance, but dismisses it as inconsequential in view of larger plans.

By early afternoon he must have the monster furnace of his skating rink-dance hall roaring for the high school gym and sports classes, and still going strong for the evening dance or organization jamboree. Hartong's hall is the one commodious building of the village and here all large events are held.

Hall Reveals His Touch.

The hall, too, reveals the master's touch. He has roofed over the inside and put recessed lights, covered with unbreakable glass, in the ceiling. He has rigged up his own loudspeaker system. Adjoining is a small store with Hartong made sections for roller skates under the counter and a display of Hartong made bows and arrows and various daggers, stilettos, and bowie knives for relatives to send to their service men.

Upstairs is a dressing room for the football and basketball players. Their equipment litters the area at times and often is draped over Hartong's cherished log cabin and fort replicas. A pingpong ball may settle lightly near a cannon on the fort's parade ground, and as Hartong swoops upon the puff, he crankily complains, "I wish I could make these boys keep order up here," just as he scolds when he pulls out a fresh, but buttonless, shirt from a drawer at home, "Just like the children; I can't depend on them!"

He's Always in a Hurry.

Talking at a clip of 350 m. p. h., because he is always in a hurry, the beloved village character finds his greatest joy in describing how he makes bows out of hedgewood and osage wood, arrows from Norway pine, daggers from hacksaw blades, handles from steer bones he has boiled, scraped, and bleached. All in the same breath, he recounts how early writers have erroneously placed the site of Chicago at its present location rather than in the Calumet-Sag valley farther south, "at the southwest corner of Lake Michigan as it was first known thruout the world," he thunders, and mops again a steamy brow.

Remembering the dark and waiting hall, he skips and runs across its waxed floor to the light switches, quoting Barbara Fritchie or Stanley Brown or some other verse equally appropriate to the occasion.

Miles Hartong enjoys life in this topsy-turvy world. He may complain mildly of minor stresses, but, pop! he meets another new idea and off he goes to employing his ingenuity in fresh activity.

TELLS HOW DAD WROTE 'WIZARD OF OZ' STORIES

Harry Baum of Hinsdale Is Amateur Actor.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Harry Neal Baum of Hinsdale will have a leading role in the play "In Time to Come," to be presented four nights, starting Thursday, by the Little Theater of Western Springs. Mr. Baum, who is advertising manager for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., considers theatricals merely as a hobby, but as a small boy he attended the first performance of "The Wizard of Oz" of which his father, L. Frank Baum, was the author.

Mr. Baum was asked by a reporter visiting his home at 218 E. Hickory st., Hinsdale, to recall memories of his father, who wrote the book that became familiar to most American households and which was turned into a musical extravaganza that ran for seven years thruout the country at the turn of the century.

Tells Stories to Sons.

"Father was the swellest man I ever knew," Mr. Baum began. "With my brother Ken on one knee and myself on the other, he told us whimsical stories before they became material for his books. We used to sak him, for instance, how black birds baked in a pie could later come out and sing. He gave us his own satisfactory explanation."

L. Frank Baum was born near Syracuse, N. Y., the son of a wealthy oil man. When he was 21, the family fortune had dwindled and he and his wife went west to Aberdeen, S. D. The couple homesteaded at first, and then Frank became editor of a weekly newspaper in the town. Harry and his younger brother were born in Aberdeen, where copies of the Baum newspaper are still cherished.

The man with jingles in his soul decided to take the family to Chicago. Here, a job as a salesman of chinaware appeared as an opportunity. The work required traveling and, during leisure hours on the road, Mr. Baum began writing magazine stories.

Move to South Side.

At first the family resided in a large rented home near Humboldt park, but later moved to the south side. Mr. Baum's first book was "Mother Goose in Prose," and much of its material was of the sort the boys had heard on their father's knee. The illustrator was Maxfield Parrish, and Harry Baum has one of the original drawings on the wall of his Hinsdale home.

When "Father Goose" was published in 1899, W. W. Denslow made the drawings, which were among the first to be in color. It was Mr. Baum's conviction that children loved color with their pictures, altho it was difficult to influence publishers to go to the additional expense at the time.

"The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," 1899, not only provided a meal ticket for the family, which included four boys, but the luxuries of life. There was a summer home in Michigan as well as a residence on the south side. Then Montgomery and Stone, eccentric dancers, made the play that seemed to have been made especially for them. Fred Stone became the Scarecrow and Dave Montgomery the Tin Woodman.

The author and his wife later moved to Hollywood, Cal., where, at 63, he died in 1919. To the last he continued to write "Oz" books, modernized fairy tales in which the wonderment is retained, and the nightmares left out.

Dedicates Book to Son.

In his Hinsdale library Harry Baum has one book which his father dedicated to him, "The Life and Adventures of Santa Claus." He also has an orginal copy of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz." Both Mr. Baum and his wife, Brenda, are members of the Western Springs Little Theater. Mr. Baum will take the role of President Wilson in "The Time to Come," which has a background of Washington and Paris during the 1918 peace conference.

CHICAGOANS AID YANK CONQUEST OF KWAJALEIN

America's fighters from Chicago and the metropolitan area were well represented in the recent speedy conquest of the key positions of the Kwajalein atoll, the easternmost bastion of the Japanese empire in the Marshall Islands.

Our Losses Light.

Correspondents on the scene have told how battleship and aircraft de-effectively softened Japanese defenses that the 4th marine division kept its losses down as it stormed ashore behind a rolling barrage. More than 8,000 Japanese were killed while the American dead totaled 286 in the lightning capture of the atoll.

Naval support is said to have been the most magnificent that ever accompanied an amphibious assault. The beach soon was filled with marines. The Kwajalein invasion took its place as "one of the world's historic artillery bombardments" and the war's end was brought closer.

Southwest Side Fighters.

Among those from the southwest area who took part in the battle were Pvt. Stanley E. Babula, 4729 S. Komensky av.; Leo S. Podbielski, 12128 Halsted st., pharmacist's mate second class; Pvt. Harold R. SEEK TO WIDEN UNDERPASSES ON SOUTHWEST SIDE

Members of the South area council of the Chicago Motor club at a recent meeting urged the reconstruction and widening of underpasses at 40th st. and Ashland av. and at 40th and Halsted sts. to correspond with street widths. Cars moving in both directions must slow down and change lanes when passing under the two viaducts, it was pointed out. Ald. Connelly [11th] will be asked to investigate the plan.

The council also urged Ald. Olin [8th] to press the extension of 83d st. and make it a main artery for south side traffic. Installation of traffic signals at 63d st. and Central av. were reported, marking the completion of a council project.

Among those who attended were Fred L. Steers, Ridge Civic council; John S. Kavanaugh, Highland Business District association; George W. Engelhardt and James B. SO YOU WANT TO GET INTO RADIO! O. K., HERE'S HOW

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"How can I get into radio?" That's the question most often asked of this desk. Mothers with youngsters who have too much talent to become Quiz Kids ask it. Small town and big city girls, too, write and say they're at least as good as Barbara Luddy; so why can't they get at a mike? A lot of bathroom tenors used to write in comparing themselves favorably to Jimmy Melton. [The army and navy probably have them now.] We suspect there actually is a lot of unrecognized and latent talent at large.

But how to get these talented folks on the air? Broadly speaking, you need some breaks—altho many a topnotch entertainer has made his own breaks.

One way to get in is to be there when the doors open. Among those knocking when radio started off were Eddie and Fanny Cavanaugh, Frank Munn, Wendell Hall, Vincent Lopez, Harvey Hays, Grace Wilson.

Lucky, you say. Yes, but you've got to hand it to them for sticking to it for 20-odd years.

Fibber Makes Own Break.

Jim Jordan [Fibber McGee] made his own break. He was a chautauqua singer back in the '20s, heard a singer on WIBO, Chicago, he didn't like, called the station and said he could do better. So they gave him a chance. He brought Marian, now his "Molly," along. And soon they were on their way.

Jack Benny, once a vaudeville entertainer, made his first mike appearance as a guest of Ed Sullivan. "This is Jack Benny," Jack began. "Now there'll be a slight pause while you say 'Who cares?'" People have been laughing at him ever since.

Edgar Bergen had been laughed out of radio studios at the suggestion of putting a ventriloquist's act on the air. One night Rudy Vallee saw Bergen and Charlie at the Chez Paree in Chicago. That was enough. Rudy introduced a lot of other entertainers to radio: Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Burns and Allen, and Frank Fay among them.

The Whiteman Springboard.

Paul Whiteman has been a springboard for many radio folk, among them Bing Crosby, Morton Downey, Jane Froman, Mildred Bailey, Helen Jepson, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Matty Malneck, and Johnny Mercer. Eddie Cantor helped Deanna Durbin and Dinah Shore on their way.

The late Hal Kemp was responsible for getting Kay Kyser started. And Kay in turn spotted Ginny Simms singing with Tom Gerun's orchestra at the Chicago World's fair in 1934, and talked her into joining his band.

Bill Thompson [Wallace Wimple] was discovered in an amateur contest at the Chicago exposition. Frank Sinatra determined to become a singer one night while listening to Crosby. He got his first break via Major Bowes, sang on New York local stations, and later joined Tommy Dorsey before starting out alone.

Lucky Ones the Exception.

Lucky people are the exception. Behind almost every star is a story of sweat and tears. And determination. Faint heart never won a fat soap opera sponsor. A good bet, if you live in the city, is to badger the network [or station] script and program departments. Also the radio departments of advertising agencies.

Oddly enough, many of the people successful in radio say they are going to get out of it. Yes, as soon as they make one more thousand they are going to buy that farm or a spot on a Wisconsin lake and fish. The rigors of radio—irregular hours, night work, snacks between rehearsals, the nervous tension involved—all contribute to what is known as a "radio stomach." Any one in the business will tell you there are more ulcers per torso in radio than anywhere outside the Mayo clinic. So before you lay your plan of attack consider the possible consequences.

'BLOSSOM TIME' IS NEXT OPERETTA FOR W-G-N AIR THEATER

The romantic story of the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, as told in Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night before an audience of more than 4,000 spectators at Medinah temple. The performance will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire, prima donna of the series, will sing the role of Mitzi, and Igor Gorin, popular baritone, will be heard as Schubert. The part of Baron Schober will be sung by Attilio Baggiore.

Music for the performance will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Jack La Frandre, writer-director of the series, will produce the show.

Frankie Steps Out Alone at 5 Months

Brimful of vigor, Frankie Rust, who was 5½ months old when this picture was taken, steps out to meet life more than half way. Physically advanced for his age, Frankie excels in accomplishments that normally come later in a baby's development. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rust of 1553 West 94th street. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Here Frankie suspends himself from his mother's hands. In the next moment he will have chinned himself. Frankie has been working on this feat since he was 5 weeks old.

OCD Card Party.

An OCD card party will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in Madison Athletic club, 4715 Madison st.

FRANKIE'S JUST LITTLE BOY WITH GREAT BIG IDEAS

Frankie Rust is only a little man trying to get ahead. A high stepper at his present age of 6 months, Frankie hasn't as yet run away from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rust, 1553 West 94th street, but they may expect to miss him from the back yard one of these spring days.

Right now Frankie is walking with scarcely any support, and indications are that he may soon branch out for himself.

Three Squares a Day!

He turns somersaults, chins himself, balances himself, seated, on his father's outstretched hand, and eats three square meals a day because he uses up so much energy.

All this information came from Frankie's proud mother. His father, a draftsman for a southwest side plant, was a football player in high school, good enough to win a scholarship to college on his athletic prowess. He did not accept the award, said Mrs. Rust, but enrolled in a technical course at Iowa State college.

Measures 20 Inches at Birth.

Frankie was born last July 30 at Little Company of Mary hospital. He weighed in at 8 pounds and 9 ounces and measured 20 inches. Mrs. Rust noticed the nurse didn't support Frankie's back during his first week, and questioned it. The nurse grinned, said it wasn't necessary, but she would do so to quiet the mother's fears.

At 2 weeks, Frankie began rolling himself over and attempted to crawl. At 5 weeks he really was crawling. At 40 days he tried chinning himself and has worked on it successfully ever since. He also began to drink out of a cup because he was weaned at 1 month. At 3½ months he could stand up by holding onto the coffee table.

Frankie is on his way!

Catholic Pupils Compete for $500 Total.

Instead of flags, six cash prizes totaling $500 will be distributed to the parochial schools which lead in collecting waste paper during the campaign from Feb. 14 to March 18.

This amount is the parochial school's share of the $1,000 prize money donated to Chicago schools for the drive by the Chicago Newspaper Publishers association.

In deciding on this plan, Msgr. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools, said that almost every parochial school now has a fine stand of national colors, but needs cash to carry on many of its activities.

First Prize $200.

"We believe the cash prizes will greatly stimulate interest and rivalry between the various schools, and thus increase the collection of America's number one critical war material," he said.

First prize for the largest paper collection during the campaign will be $200. The second prize will be $100, third, $75; four and fifth, $50 each, and sixth, $25.

A different system of prize awards will be used by the public schools. To the leading schools in the nine districts flags will be given. Every two weeks the boy and girl with the largest paper collection record in each of more than 300 schools will receive a ribbon of merit.

Sisters to Keep Records.

Msgr. Cunningham and Joseph H. Marcus, representing the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, have worked out a record keeping system for each of the parochial schools. The sister superiors in charge of the schools will each week send a post card to Msgr. Cunningham's office detailing the amount of scrap paper collected and sold during the week.

Twenty schools have their waste paper collected by the Catholic Salvage bureau. Proceeds from the sale of this paper will go to charities named by church authorities. Those schools not on the list serviced by the Catholic Salvage bureau will have their paper collected by trucks assigned to the work by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee.

Assert Hoarding Is Only Threat to Coal Supply

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many home owners apparently are concerned about the supply of coal for use in homes and a number of facts of interest along this line come from Appalachian Coals, Inc., Cincinnati, O.

Preliminary figures for 1943 show that 36 million more tons of coal were delivered to retail coal merchants and in turn delivered by them to their customers than in an average year. In other words, last year 120 million tons of coal were delivered for use in homes, altho the average per year for the last 10 years was only 84 million tons.

It is logical to assume that a very large amount of this coal is still in coal bins in homes. Unfortunately there are a few local areas which have an unprecedented demand for coal, due to shifts in population, lack of other fuels, etc., and which actually need fuel.

Authorities have urged that any one who has several tons of coal in his bin, enough to last out the season, or at least two or three months supply, should not order more coal now.

This is asked in order that the coal industry may have more opportunity to take care of people who are in actual immediate need for fuel. Voluntary coöperation of this sort is much easier and less bothersome than rationing. There is no lack of supply of coal; the only problem is to get equitable distribution.

In the interests of fuel conservation Appalachian Coals, Inc., Transportation building, Cincinnati, will be glad to answer questions pertaining to heating problems. A letter addressed to the above address, care of chief engineer, also will bring you a copy of "Save Coal," a chart for users of hand fired equipment, and "Stoker Etiquet" for stoker users, free of charge.

How Increasing Your Vocabulary Will Help You Get Ahead in Life

is the well-known author and lexicographer, for 16 years President of the famous dictionary-making firm of Funk and Wagnalls. His collaborator, Mr. Norman Lewis, is a well-known author of text-books and teacher of English.

IF YOUR vocabulary is limited, your chances of success are limited. The greater your vocabulary the more likely you are to succeed!

The truth of this has been proved time and again by experts who have given thousands of scientifically accurate tests comparing the vocabularies of successful executives with run-of-the-mill employees.

In fact, many leading psychologists use vocabulary tests alone to determine a person's intelligence. Stanford University has found that such tests are 90% as accurate in determining your intelligence quotient as the standard Stanford-Binet "I. Q." tests.

AND IN BOTH THE ARMY AND NAVY a man's rating in his vocabulary quizzes overshadows any other single test in deciding his advancement!

In other words, regardless of the field of endeavor in which you are engaged, the number of words you know and can use correctly is the most important single measurement by which others judge your ability. Therefore, a better command of words will not only improve the processes of your mind and help you get ahead faster, but it will also give you assurance; build your self-confidence; lend color to your personality; increase your popularity.

However, the proof that you doubtless already realize the truth of these statements is indicated by the fact that you have probably always wanted to increase your vocabulary. For years you have wished to make your language richer, more persuasive, more sparkling. But, up to now, perhaps you have never found a method which would actually make you eager to do it. That is why you will welcome this announcement of a wonderful new book, "30 Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary," which really makes it exciting fun—a fascinating game—to learn new words!

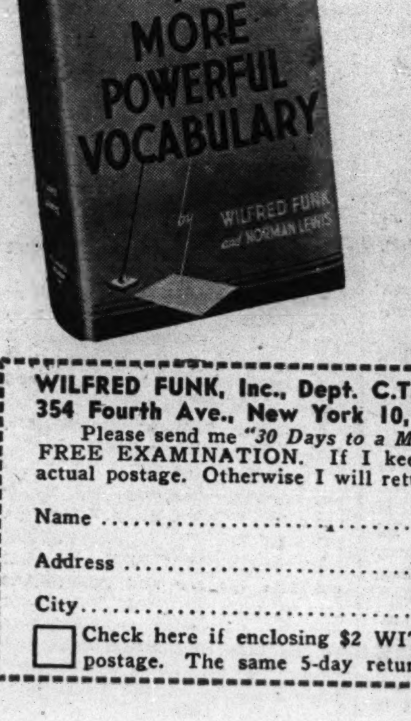
This book is divided into 30 delightful daily chapters. Each day you spend 15 enjoyable minutes with this book—and it does FOR you, and for your vocabulary, the things you will read about in the 30 little boxes shown here at the right.

"I Like This Book Immensely"

Perhaps the best outline of what this new book will do for you is given in an interesting review for the Springfield (Mass.) Union by Mr. A. L. S. Wood. "This book," writes Mr. Wood, "is really something. It goes at the business of giving you a better command of English in something of a novel way. You'll master not only a number of words, but use them properly, and improve not only your speech but your thinking.

"The more you know about words, the more you know how to use and to understand, the better you will get along. For life depends upon thought; thought must precede all action. The clearer our thinking, the more effective our acts. We cannot think clearly unless we think in words. Hence, it follows that the more we know about our language the better off we shall be.

"I like this book immensely. In 30 days it really would give you a more powerful vocabulary. It will give almost anyone a better understanding of his language, a clearer grasp of its infinite variety, and a greater love of this marvelous, flexible, powerful and accurate English language of ours."



You'll Enjoy Yourself With This Book

As the review you have just read indicates, "30 Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary" does many more things than merely add words to your speaking and writing "tool-box." It digs into your present vocabulary, and roots out the mispronunciations you have been making for years. It tells you the intensely interesting stories behind many of our words, so that you'll understand them better, use them more expressively. You will find scores of tests for checking yourself—even a whole section that will make a lively parlor game for your friends!

If you will enjoy yourself with this unique volume for just 15 minutes a day and for just 30 days—you will (as proven by tests) add more new and useful words to your vocabulary than the average adult acquires in 25 years.

"A First Aid to Better Speech"

"This book not only provides practical ideas for enlarging any vocabulary, but shows up the shortcomings by progressive tests. The arrangement of the material in a thirty-day course towards 'a more powerful vocabulary' successfully avoids making the exercises monotonous. The authors show how every day can contribute its quota. This is not a memory course, but a solid first aid to better speech."

VIRGINIA KIRKUS,
Eminent Literary Critic.

"Simple, Clearly, Directly Written"

"It makes a strong appeal to the reader's own desire for self-improvement and it stimulates him step by step to work through the exercises."

DONALD L. CLARK,
Associate Professor of English
Columbia University, New York City.

"Benefits in an Incredibly Short Time"

"This volume is unique, compact, lucid and fascinating. Seldom if ever, does one come across a book of this type whose many pages fairly bristle with practical knowledge so entertainingly and forcefully presented that its benefits become apparent within an incredibly short time."

Met Opera Buzzing About Its Chicago Repertory

Troupe Coming April 17 for a 2 Week Season

By Claudia Cassidy.

NEW YORK.—Altho the Metropolitan Opera is buzzing like a beehive about the Chicago repertory for the two weeks at the Civic Opera house starting April 17, exact information on that fascinating subject is as elusive as tickets to "Oklahoma!" When I ask Edward Johnson what he is bringing us, he counters with, "What do you think we should bring?" and I say, "The things you do best." I don't know how else to cope with New York's curious conviction that Chicago has specialized and unpredictable tastes.

So the Metropolitan is falling back on a kind of ballot, listing the following operas as possibilities, and asking you to communicate with the Chicago Opera company, 20 Wacker dr., stating your preferences:

Verdi—"Aida," "The Masked Ball," "Rigoletto," "La Traviata."
Wagner—"Tannhäuser," "Tristan and Isolde, "Parsifal."
Strauss—"Der Rosenkavalier," "Salomé."
Puccini—"La Boheme," "Gianni Schicchi" [on double bill with "Salomé"].
Mascagni—"Cavalleria Rusticana."
Leoncavallo—"Pagliacci," with a ballet.
Bizet—"Carmen."
Offenbach—"The Tales of Hoffmann."
Gounod—"Faust."
Mozart—"The Marriage of Figaro," "The Magic Flute."
Thomas—"Mignon."

"Parsifal" is being considered as a special performance on Sunday afternoon, April 23, probably with Emile Cooper conducting. Mr. Cooper's revival of "Pelléas and Mélisande" is, alas, not on the list, altho my last Chicago check had more than 20 written requests for the opera. There were requests, too, for "Boris Godunoff." On the New York end of the booking Sir Thomas Beecham wants to do a "Tristan and Isolde" for us with Marjorie Lawrence as Isolde. He says her singing of the role is magnificent, and that her inability

Sir Thomas' spring visit with the Met will be his last for a long time, because he will not be available for Ravinia or other summer concerts. When the Metropolitan season is over, he goes to England to work with the London Philharmonic on the long American tour now being planned as a good will gesture. The orchestra is being booked into the Civic Opera house next season by the Allied Arts corporation.

But back to the Met. I went to a performance of "The Tales of Hoffmann" and found its stylized decor by Joseph Urban as commonplace as Robert Edmond Jones' for "Othello"—a kind of pictorial twilight of the gods. But Ezio Pinza had a field day as Mephistophelean Dr. Miracle, popping in and out of doors and spraying Paganini sparks from a demented fiddle, and there was an exceptionally interesting performance of Dapertutto by the French baritone, Martial Singher. Mr. Singher was less sinister than the ideal menace on the Venetian scene, but he has a voice of rare sensitivity and a distinguished presence. I shall count the Chicago season half lost if we do not get a look at him in "Pelleas and Melisande."

Sitting alongside me in Mr. Johnson's box that night was Jeanette MacDonald, who did not deny that the Chicago operatic powers that be are dickering for her to sing Juliet in our midst. Miss MacDonald, who had just seen "Pelleas" for the first time, was inclined to consider it caviar for the few. Not many people outside Chicago realize the number of times Debussy's opera adorned the Auditorium boards. The trouble with bringing a revival of "Pelleas" to Chicago is not that Chicago might fail to appreciate it, but that Chicago might find it inferior to the unforgotten productions of Mary Garden days. Still, many of us would like to take the chance.

One of my more fruitless pursuits this trip has been television, as I seem to be about a month too early to see anything worth writing about. Most of the television equipment now in use, they tell me, is about four years old, and is waiting on the war's end to bring into public view some of the experiments now blazing laboratory trails. R. C. A. experts are particularly interested in televising sports events, pointing out the exciting possibilities of the long range camera that will bring football huddles more clearly into your living room than you can hope to see them from a seat in a stadium. Speaking for opera, Edward Johnson calls television the theater of the future, particularly when the experiments in color become practical. But Guthrie McClintic, speaking as a theatrical producer, says that television seems to him more of a challenge to the movies than to the stage. It will bring talking pictures right into your home, he says, but a live actor will still be a live actor.

• • •

Theatrical conversation here, as in Chicago, invariably takes a turn for Gene Fowler's "Good Night, Sweet Prince," the best selling, best reading life of John Barrymore. Margaret Webster, who made her first appearance on the stage doing a bit in the London production of Barrymore's "Hamlet," says she has her doubts about the title. Barrymore's was the finest Hamlet she ever saw, she admits, and she worked with Gielgud and Evans, but there was nothing sweet about it. "He was a pure devil," she remembers, "a pure devil, and magnificent."

Another Barrymore tale comes from Max Siegel, co-producer of "Three Is a Family," who is eternally grateful to Fowler for clearing up a mystery that has haunted him most of his showgoing life. Siegel started in show business as office boy for John D. Williams, who produced "Justice," and he made numerous trips to Barrymore's eyrie hideout, carrying manuscripts. Every time that he reached the top floor, he says, he was greeted by Barrymore, who invariably had a brick in his hand, and he never knew whether or not he was about to be assaulted by a mad actor. Not until he read Fowler's book did he know of Barrymore's expensive and abortive effort to build a roof garden, complete with brickwork, but minus drainage.

There is a lot of talk here about a company of "Decision" for Chicago, but I doubt it. The play's success or failure is still in the Broadway balance, and it could close as abruptly as "Suds in Your Eye," which also was contemplating a Chicago duplication. More likely prospects at press time are Vincent Youmans' revue, backed to the tune of more than $200,000 by Doris Duke, which is being turned into a ballet production starring Leonide Massine, and possibly that Victor Herbert score currently the love of Michael Todd's life. The Golden office has its eye on Chicago for Arthur Kober's "My Dear Bella," providing it clicks here and can be successfully copied, and also for a new play, currently called "Out of This World," a title which would have to be changed because of the wry taste left by the Actors' company failure with a piece by the same name.

THE SEASON OPENS

"That's right, you can't." And he knew he was in love for instead of being vexed with her for her too maternal devotion he found that it only added another virtue to the many he saw in her.

"I'm sorry, Van. It was a lovely idea you had."

He reached up and took her hand. "Will you come out for just a little while, Collie? Not in the car. Just in the back of your house here. We could sit for a while and talk and you could hear the children if they called."

"All right. Just a minute and I'll be there."

He walked around to the back and lit a cigaret while he waited for her. It was such a scrubby little back yard her children played in. No smooth, green lawns here. Gardeners and unnecessary use of water were unknown at the edge of town. There was a huge striped umbrella stuck into the sand and Van smiled a little as he pictured Collie planting it there with grim determination that Little Jewel should keep her magnolia white skin despite the desert sun.

He turned away from the umbrella and Collie was standing beside him in the moonlight. She had a bulky, white robe on and her honey-colored hair floated mistily about her face.

"You look like an angel," he said.

"A trick of the moonlight, I assure you."

"I don't think so, I think it's just you, Collie." He put his arm around her and this time she did not draw away. She let him hold her closely and kiss her and when she finally stepped from his embrace he saw that there were tears upon her cheeks.

"What is it, Darling?"

She shook her head. "Van, please go away."

"Go away? I'm never going away from you again, Collie. I'm 35 and I've never been in love before. Do you suppose that now that I've found you—"

"You haven't found me, Van, in the sense that you mean. And if you really love me you'll go away and not make things tougher. Please don't complicate—"

"Collie, there'll be no complication of any kind. I'm only asking you to marry me."

• • •

She stood there looking very small and young. Childishly she fumbled in the pocket of her bathrobe and brought out a large handkerchief and Van realized that it was Johnny's robe and Johnny's handkerchief.

"Van, I can't marry you."

"Johnny?" he asked.

"No. Johnny's gone. I gave him everything I had to give while he lived. I don't owe him anything."

"Then?"

She straightened her shoulders in the absurdly large robe. "Van, I was thru it once. Never again."

He looked at her disbelievingly. "You mean marriage? You mean you won't marry again?"

Her voice was very low. "I mean I was married once to a very charming guy who didn't like to earn money the hard way."

Slater grinned. "I knew Johnny Moreland pretty well, Collie, better than you think. I've drawn a few people out on the subject and I can't see any resemblance between Johnny and myself."

"Can't you, Van? Do you think maybe it's because you don't want to? Van, listen to me. You can have the loveliest home in town and a couple of cars and a couple of servants and the most faultlessly tailored clothes and still you're like Johnny Moreland. Do you know why?"

"No, I'm afraid I don't."

She fixed her eyes on a distant sand dune, white and weird in the moonlight. "Well, I'll tell you why, Van. It's because you know all the best people thru your business just the same as he did but none of them ask you home. You in your midnight blue tails are just as far from an invitation as Johnny in his pale blue Levis." She paused for breath. "Van, there are other things I can tell you. Your children, if you had any, would feel instinctively that they were outside a charmed circle that other children were in. I know how your children would feel. You see, I have Johnny Moreland's to watch."

"Now just a minute, Collie. I have enough pride to resent being compared in so general a manner to Johnny. As I understand it, from more than one source, Johnny was not altogether a credit to himself, his family or the community. I own a gambling house, but—"

She smiled wryly. "You own a gambling house. Period. Anything that comes after that doesn't matter, Van, and I think you know it. If you don't know it, go home and count the invitations you've had from solid citizens."

Van Slater said nothing. He stood staring out toward the silver dunes. His face was hard and expressionless. Presently he reached for another cigaret and lit it with slow deliberation. Collie spoke again without looking at him.

"Don't think it doesn't hurt to talk this way, Van."

"I don't know what to think, Collie." He shrugged his broad shoulders. "What difference does it make? Whatever I think is unimportant now. I thought you loved me."

It was her turn to be silent. "Collie, you're the last woman in the world I would have picked to care a hoot in hell about conventional people and their opinions and their snobbish little invitations and all the rest. I wouldn't have believed it if some one had said that Collie Moreland wanted to dine at the Bronsons or play bridge in Mrs. Patterson's set."

She was stung by his words. "If you think the Bronsons or Mrs. Patterson is the goal I'm shooting at, you're crazy. I'd settle for an evening of bridge with the butcher and the baker. They're solid citizens, too, you know. Decent people who work hard for a living. That's all I want—friendships and mutual respect. Is that too much to ask?"

His eyes were bitter as she looked at her. "You don't want me," he said. "Just let us drop the matter there."

"Van, you're hurt. I didn't mean to hurt you but I'm not much of a hand at being clever and brilliant and keeping back the truth."

"I wanted the truth." He started to walk away from her but he paused just within her range of vision and turned and came back. "Collie, there's just one thing you have to tell me. This rubber plant respectability you crave is for Tony and Little Jewel, isn't it? If you were a woman alone you'd marry me, wouldn't you?"

That was the question that had been bound to come. She followed along the natural sequence. If he wanted her enough he would perhaps give up the Casino. Then what? What would he do? Tag all the rich men he had met and ask jobs of them? The day would come when he would hate her for the soft life he had sacrificed for her. And worse still, he would come to regret deeply what he had given up for Johnny Moreland's children. There was not much she could spare Tony and Little Jewel. She could spare them being resented by a man upon whom they must depend.

She looked up at Van Slater and shook her head. "No, Van."

"Then I was mistaken about—"

"You were kind to me so naturally I like you but—"

"I see."

He walked away swiftly then, not glancing back at the small figure in Johnny Moreland's bathrobe. He jumped into his car, backed it around and drove rapidly from the cottage at the edge of town. He thought perhaps he'd drive for hours. The Casino would run itself. He didn't have to go back tonight. He'd made no plans. He'd just drive until he found himself thinking about other things, anything but Collie. He had been so certain that she wanted him as much as he wanted her. Damn a woman anyhow for thinking it necessary to be so sweet that a man could confuse gratitude with love.

Slater drove madly thru the quiet night, past the shops and the hotels and out to the desert roads beyond the town. Past the turn-off to the Casino and on and on. What did it matter where he went? There was so much he could have done for her and for her children. Why couldn't she have loved him a little? Collie with her honey colored hair and the sweet blue gray eyes. She would take a lot of forgetting. It was senseless to drive thru the desert. It wouldn't help any. He might better be back at the Casino attending to his business but somehow he could not bring himself to mingle with his guests and listen to their inane conversation.

There was Blue Dunes. She had been on her way there when he had met her. He saw the Blue Dunes hotel and shuddered at the thought of Collie sleeping in its dirty rooms. He had told her just the night before that he saw everything now in relation to her. It was true. Everything.

Now Blue Dunes was behind him but still he sped on, trying to run away from himself. He knew it couldn't be done. All men knew it couldn't be done, but they still tried. Some men drank when they were hurt and heartsore. He never had. He just drove. He drove hard and fooled himself into thinking that it helped.

If she knew how much he loved her she wouldn't have the heart—no, he didn't want her that way. He wanted her to come to him because she loved him. And she never would. She didn't love him. Sweet Collie, the only woman he had ever wanted for keeps didn't want him. Why was it so? There should be some chemical reaction that took care of such things. When a man loved a woman so deeply that it was a never ceasing ache there should be a natural arrangement that caused her to respond with equal passion. It wasn't fair that things were otherwise. There was surely enough anguish for mankind without this added burden of loving where one was not loved.

Van grinned up at him. "I'm blocking your progress, kid. I'm making a fool of Cupid."

There was a car ahead of him now. The first one he had seen in 40 minutes. It was a dark, low convertible and it looked familiar. Who had such a car? The answer came without much effort. Richard Bronson, of course. What was he doing so far from town? That answer came, too. The boy was riding thru the moonlight with the girl he loved. Lucky boy.

• • •

Within a few minutes Van came abreast of the convertible and glanced inside. It was Richard and Jane all right, but he was perplexed by their manner. They did not look toward him. They kept their faces averted. Common sense told him that this was not natural. They would at least look at a stranger and since they did not look at him he was convinced that they had recognized his car and were trying to avoid him. For what reason? This was absurd. Richard had always been a most friendly lad.

"Hello, there," Van called.

Richard replied at once. "O, hello, Mr. Slater. Taking a ride?"

"Now that doesn't really require an answer, does it?"

Richard laughed nervously. "Kind of a silly question, I guess." He spoke to Jane and Van guessed that it was something informative like, "There's Mr. Slater."

Jane looked across at Slater but she did not speak. Her face was tense and her eyes gleamed in the lights from the dashboard.

"Nice night for a ride," Van called.

"O, O, yes. We thought we'd come out for a ride. It was such a nice night."

Richard was capable of making more intelligent conversation than that, Van thought. Perhaps it was moonlight and love and having the only girl in the world beside him that reduced him to sheer idiocy. Well, it was nice work if you could get it. Van waved to them and then pulled on ahead. But a half mile down the road he slowed up. There was a sign there. State line. He had not realized he had come so far. Three miles on the other side of the line was Edgeville and suddenly Van understood Richard's nervousness and his desire to be passed without being recognized.

Van raised his eyes to his rear vision mirror. Richard's car was still coming. Richard was a fine boy. A good, clean kid with a pair of swell parents. This was almost kidnaping. To let it happen made him, Slater, a full partner with the Lansings. Van thought of Charlie Bronson who took his winnings like a gentleman and his losses like a man. Charlie Bronson who never kicked or complained and whose word was his bond. O, no, those phony Lansings weren't going to get away with this.

Slater pulled his car lengthwise across the road and jumped out. He was sitting on the running board smoking a cigaret a moment later when Richard arrived.

"What's the idea, Mr. Slater? What are you doing here?"

Van grinned up at him. "I'm blocking your progress, Kid, I'm making a fool of cupid."

"What do you mean?"

"You know what I mean. Now turn your little buggy around and head for home."

Richard climbed out of his car and Jane followed him. Her face was dark and sullen, her eyes flashing.

"Really Mr. Slater, I can't see why you—"

Van silenced her with a look. "You can let Richard talk," he said. "He might have something to say."

"Yes, I definitely have. We intend to go to Edgeville and you are not going to stop us."

"O, then Edgeville is your actual destination?"

"Suppose it is? What business is it of yours?"

Van Slater stared at the light on his cigaret. "You know that's a silly question just like the one you asked me back there on the road. Whenever a person's in the wrong he springs that question as tho it settled everything. It doesn't, you know. It's my business because I'm the only one here with good sense."

Jane turned to Richard. "Isn't there something we can do to make him move out of the way?"

"He'll move," Richard assured her. "He doesn't understand that this is serious. He thinks we just decided this without thinking it over, don't you, Mr. Slater?"

Van shook his head. "I've known you were in love with the young lady ever since I first saw the two of you together and no doubt you've talked this over, but you haven't talked it over with your parents else you wouldn't be going to Edgeville."

"I don't have to talk it over with my parents. I'm 21."

"O, you're 21." Van nodded. "I see; I didn't understand. Well, that's different. You're 21 so of course you don't have to show your parents any further courtesy or consideration."

Jane's lips tightened into a thin line and she glared at Slater.

"It isn't a question of courtesy or—" Richard began.

"The hell it isn't, my boy. They've given a very large piece of their lives to rearing you and it's possible they're interested in the important steps you take. I'd like to have a dollar for every time they've considered y o u r happiness."

"Now just a minute," Richard said. "My marrying Miss Lansing isn't going to make them unhappy, you know."

Van Slater looked Jane full in the face and spoke coolly. "Certainly not. I was addressing Miss Lansing, too. Think how her father will feel at not having been consulted. He's apt to be really furious."

"O, I don't think so." Richard rejected the suggestion immediately. "Mr. Lansing is extremely fond of me. Isn't he, Jane?"

"Of course he is."

Richard smiled hopefully at Slater. "You see? Mr. Lansing likes me and my parents are crazy about Jane."

"Then go on back to town and get their blessing," Slater ordered roughly.

"Now, listen, Mr. Slater. This is an elopement. Don't be such a killjoy. We're silly romanticists, if you like, but we want a secret, runaway wedding."

"And you've no right to one. All your life you've gone screaming to your parents with everything unpleasant that's happened to you. They have a right to be in on a few of the happy times. Doesn't that make sense?"

Richard did not answer. He stared at the road and looked like a sulky boy in the principal's office.

"Listen, Kid, I know you two have talked it over and decided to dodge the big wedding and the social page and all the rest but it isn't fair. Your parents have a right to be at your wedding. They've earned that minute when they can stand with their eyes full of tears and watch you in your big happiness and say to themselves, 'We did a good job of raising our boy.' You have no right to come spring the news on them as tho they were a couple of chance acquaintances."

Richard shifted his weight uncomfortably from one foot to the other. "Sure, I see that, Mr. Slater, but—"

"There aren't any buts, Richard. What's your duty is your duty and no excuses."

• • •

He saw Richard's eyes go questioningly to Jane's face but she was not looking at Richard. She was looking at Slater himself. The dark despair that he had read in her eyes before was magnified a thousandfold. With sudden shock he saw the situation from the girl's angle. Her little plan to marry money was being frustrated by the man with whom she was infatuated. Van looked back at her levelly. He could be sorry for the girl who had taken a kiss too seriously but not for the one who wanted Richard only because a fortune went with him.

"Well, what do you say, Richard?" he demanded shortly.

"What is there to say? You're blocking the road, aren't you?"

Slater laughed. "Yes, I am, but I like a vote of confidence on my argument, too. Don't you think I'm really talking sense?"

"O, I suppose so," Richard turned to Jane. "I guess your father would get a kick out of me doing the proper thing. I ought to ask his consent."

Van nodded approvingly. "Sure. That's the stuff. You tell your parents, Kid, and then go and ask Mr. Lansing's permission."

Jane stood motionless in the middle of the road. She seemed to have heard nothing of the last minute's conversation. All the spirit had died within her and her young shoulders drooped as tho with unbearable fatigue.

Richard put his arm around her. "I guess we weren't so smart, Honey," he said. "He's right. We ought to do it the regular way. Come on."

Slater laughed. "No deal, Kids. I've been double crossed before and by experts. The little lady will drive home with me."

Richard smiled weakly. "Don't you trust me?"

"Making certain, Pal, is better than trusting. It cost me a lot to learn that lesson and I'm giving it to you free." He took Jane's arm and helped her into his car. "Good night, Richard."

"O, now wait a minute, Mr. Slater. Honestly we wouldn't—"

The voice died away as Slater purposefully slammed the heavy car door. "Go on, Richard, let's get moving."

Richard without further protest got into his car and started the trip back to the hotel. Van Slater watched him with an expression on his face that would have surprised the boy. There was pity and understanding in the hard, dark eyes as they followed Richard's car down the road.

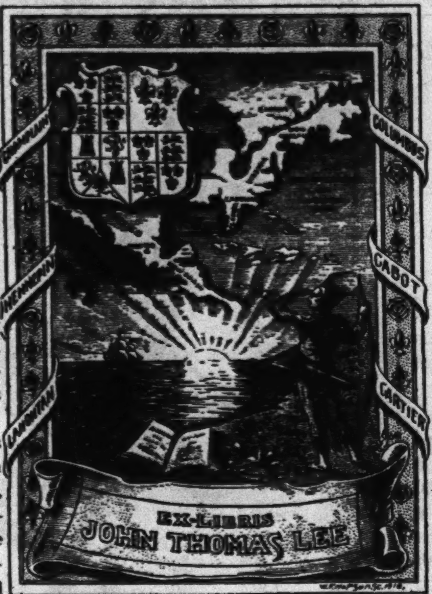
BOOKPLATES OF BOOKMEN

THE bookplate of John Thomas Lee of Chicago has more than passing interest, for Mr. Lee not only has two fine plates of his own, but makes a hobby of collecting them.

However, he modestly says, "I do not in any way qualify as a literary personage. . . . I'm merely a retired business man who is at the same time a bit of bibliophile and a bit of a collector. It is true that in the last 40 years I have written many articles on bibliographical and historical subjects—just for fun!"



Specializing in the work of certain American designers and engravers, Mr. Lee has been collecting bookplates for more than 25 years. His collection, he says, eventually will go to the State Historical society of Wisconsin.

Among the designers whose work he particularly admires is Dr. A. J. Brown of Omaha, not only because of his excellent designs, but also because he is a pupil of E. D. French. Mr. Lee has an almost complete set of Mr. French's work.

Deciding which of Mr. Lee's two plates to reproduce in these columns was a problem, since both of them are unusual. The one shown here is his Americana plate, relating to his interest in historical subjects. It was designed for him by Sangorski & Sutcliffe, English bookbinders, and engraved by William F. Hopson of New Haven.

His other bookplate depicts a placid library scene, framed in an elaborate architectural border. It was designed for him by Sidney L. Smith, whom he calls the greatest bookplate artist this country has produced, and it is a real work of art. K. G.

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAY-OFF.
"THE OPENING DOOR," by Helen Reilly. [Random House, $2.]	Charlotte Foy's vague influence in the romances of her motherless nieces and her intangible grip upon the home of Hugh Flavell, their father, led to a tough circumstantial puzzle when she is murdered.	Inspector McKee does a neat job of extricating an innocent suspect, and boring thru to a long concealed family skeleton. Moving heart interest woven into a dramatic baffler.
"MURDER MAKES A VILLAIN," by Denis Scott. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.]	Theft of a rare manuscript involves Long Island set and revolves around Sylvia Kent, devastating actress, before she is murdered. Mike James, a Chicago detective, gets the facts between drinks.	Circumstances are sufficiently confusing to make this a first rate detective puzzle. Police antics provide mild strain of humor. Plot includes novelties.
"A SPY FOR MR. CROOK," by Anthony Gilbert. [Barnes, $2.]	A member of parliament, his amusingly sharp spinster secretary, and Mr. Crook, astute London detective, get to the bottom of some vicious espionage as murder follows murder.	Mr. Gilbert knows how to create fascinating characters for London crime, and put them into a plot that builds up interest to high tension. Thoroly absorbing fiction.

INSTALMENT VI.

JANE smiled and waved as she passed the window. She caught the smile before it faded and held it frozen upon her lips so that she would have it to present to Richard. He was coming toward her now, impatient of his wait at the pool.

"So you could be ready in a few minutes? Well, Miss Lansing, it might interest you to know that you are just a teeny-weeny bit behind schedule."

"All right. All right. Don't rub it in. Just remember that I'm no old hand at dealing with those skin tight breeches. I—"

"You made the bet. No alibis, please."

They ran across the soft grass to the pool and dove with dreadful splashes into the cool, green water. They came up laughing and lazily swam a few lengths before pulling themselves out to lie ecstatically in the hot sun.

"O, Richard, it's such fun to be with you."

"Do you mean that, Jane?"

"Of course, you dope. Why do you think I'm with you every minute?"

"Well, I knew, of course—but, Gosh, Jane, you're swell. You could chase around with anybody at all and—"

"And I'm chasing around with you because you're the most fun. Get it?"

He nodded slowly. "We do have fun, don't we? Jane—"

"What?"

"I'm crazy about you."

She lowered her eyes. "I'm glad, Richard. Are you sure you aren't seeing too much of me? I mean men get tired of being around the same girl all the time."

"I don't. Not when the girl is you. Jane, I've felt ever since I first saw you that this thing is serious. Have you felt that?"

She answered slowly, impressively. "Yes, I have. Right from the start. Isn't that strange. I always felt that our relationship was different from the—O, you know, the shipboard flirtations that always crop up. And you feel it, too, Richard? It seems almost fate doesn't it?"

"It seems just lovely to me." He was quiet for a time. "You know I've been on the point of telling my parents a couple of times that this thing is serious."

She laughed.

"Why did you laugh, Jane?"

"O, I can't tell you."

"Why not?"

She shook her head. "I really couldn't, Richard."

"Of course you could. I could tell you anything, Jane."

"Could you really, Richard? All right. I'll tell you. I laughed because I was on the point of telling my father, too. It just sounded funny to hear you say the same thing that was in my mind. But I decided not to tell him."

"Did you? Why?"

Her mouth drew itself into a small suggestion of a pout. "Well, it's all sort of involved, Richard, but I know you'll understand. You see, people who have been raised the way you and I have been are sort of babied and sheltered. I love my dad and I know you love your parents, too, but there's no denying they baby us, is there?"

He shook his head. "You're right. They do but—"

"O, they mean well. Of course they do but—well, I just feel that anything so serious as falling in love is one's own private business and something I don't want my father to manage for me. Being a man you probably feel that even more definitely than I do."

"Sure. Certainly I do."

"Well, there you are. I can understand perfectly why you don't want to tell your parents. After all, you're not a child any more."

He nodded solemnly.

"Besides parents always want to make a whole hullabaloo out of marriage. White satin and invitations and a round of parties. I don't want my marriage to be like that."

Richard sat blinking thoughtfully in the sunlight.

"Maybe I'm just a foolish, romantic girl but I want to go away secretly with the man I love and be quietly married without a fanfare. It's unusual, I know, for a girl to want to skip all the excitement of wedding plans. It's the man who generally hates the fuss. You would hate a formal wedding, wouldn't you, Richard?"

"What? Oh, yes, I'd loathe it."

"I thought you would." She laughed a little. "I've been thinking about this for a few weeks now."

"If you really love me, Van, you'll go away and not make things tougher."

"Have you, Jane?"

"Yes. Unmaidenly of me, wasn't it?"

"I think it was wonderful."

"I've been thinking, Richard, when the time came—you won't laugh at me, will you?"

"Of course not."

"Well, I've been thinking when we've been secretly engaged long enough we'll go to some place like Edgeville."

"What's Edgeville?"

"Oh, you know, it's that town just over the state line where people always go from here to get married. You get a license and a ceremony immediately with no waits. That's the sort of place I want to go when we decide we're ready."

• • •

Richard looked considerably less than his 21 years at that moment. His eyes shone with boyish excitement and his rumpled hair reminded Jane of Mrs. Moreland's Little Jewel. "I'm ready this minute, Jane."

She squeezed his hand and jumped to her feet. "I'm ready for another swim. Let's really dive now. No more big splashes. Let's—"

He was not looking at the pool. He was looking into her dark eyes. "Jane, what's the use of waiting? We know, don't we—"

"O, Richard, please. Let's be engaged a little while. That's fun, too."

She walked upon the springboard and stood smiling at him. He thought her the most beautiful and the most honest girl he had ever known and he made up his mind he would talk her out of any nonsensical long engagement. Somehow he'd get her to Edgeville. No matter how she tried to argue him down.

Van Slater paused for a brief moment at the roulette wheel to watch the play. He had never discovered why the customers enjoyed having him stand beside them as they played but unquestionably they did.

But Slater's mind was not on the Desert Casino. It was in a cottage on the edge of town. He was thinking how he had overestimated his control on the preceding night when he had said to Collie Moreland, "I can wait."

This evening he had been back to see her again and he knew that had the children not been there he would have tried to convince her that he had waited long enough. Why should he wait when every day she was forced to endure Jerry Oliver's ill humors? He thought about Collie's honey-colored hair and her wide blue-gray eyes and the way that she looked at him and he knew now he had lied when he had said, "I can wait."

His eyes went to Jane Lansing and he remembered that an hour before he had met Collie he had held Jane in his arms and had been thrilled by her beauty and warmth. It seemed remarkable now that Jane had had even the slightest power to move him. It occurred to him as he stood looking at her that this was the first time he had ever been able to turn his glance upon the girl without meeting her eyes. She was looking at Richard with starry eyes, laughing with him, giving him every iota of her thought and attention. As he watched, Van saw Jane slip her arm thru Richard's and look trustingly up into his face. Van felt a slight twinge of pity for the lovesick boy before he forgot Jane and Richard completely.

He turned his back on the large, noisy room and went downstairs and out into the night that lay so clean and fresh and washed by starlight. He took great lungfuls of the heady air and said to the doorman, "Bring my car, Joe, will you, please?"

Van knew what he had to do. He could wait no longer. Why did she want him to wait? Because she'd been recently widowed? Johnny wouldn't mind. Van smiled to himself. It was amazing how well he knew Johnny and what Johnny would do or say in any given circumstance.

He stepped into his car and the doorman gestured toward the Casino and remarked, "Gets pretty crowded in there, don't it?"

"Yes, thank God," Van returned and drove away.

It was wonderful to be out in the still, peaceful night driving toward the little cottage and Collie. It would be more wonderful to have her beside him in the car. She was his. And he knew that this thought had been in his mind ever since that first moment when he had seen her frantically signalling to him at the roadside. He drove faster as he remembered the expression in her eyes when he had left her this evening. He could not be mistaken, Collie loved him.

When he arrived at the cottage he saw there were no lights burning. That was what he had expected. He got out of his car and walked around the side of the house. He was grateful for knowing in which room the children slept. It would never do to awaken them.

The window of Collie's room was open and he called to her softly. There was a second of silence and then, "Yes, who's there?"

"It's Van."

There was another silence and then her face appeared at the window, small and white in the moonlight.

"What's the matter, Van?"

"Nothing. Only it's a beautiful night and I want you to come and take a ride with me."

She laughed quietly and he could hear the note of relief in her laughter. "You frightened me skulking around like that."

"I didn't want to ring the bell and wake the children. Come on, Collie, get a coat and take a ride with me."

"I can't, Van. I can't leave the children here alone."

Orchestra Continues Mozart Festival This Week

Schnabel Again Soloist; Lange Will Conduct

The Chicago Symphony orchestra's Mozart festival continues with the Tuesday matinee and concludes with the Thursday-Friday concerts. Hans Lange will conduct both concerts and his soloist again will be the eminent pianist, Artur Schnabel. The Tuesday program opens with the overture to "Cosi fan Tutte" and proceeds to Mozart's first symphony [Köchel 16], written at the age of eight and never before played at these concerts. The other orchestra number will be the Divertimento No. 2 in D major [Köchel 131]. Mr. Schnabel will play two piano concertos, in G major [Köchel 453] and in B-flat major [Köchel 595].

The Thursday-Friday program lists only one concerto for the soloist, the beloved and popular one in D minor [Köchel 466]. Mr. Lange will conduct the overture to "La Clemenza di Tito," the Serenade No. 12 in C minor [Köchel 388], and the last of the master's 41 symphonies, that in C major [Köchel 551], popularly known as the "Jupiter."

Mozart again appears on the Saturday night "Pop" concert, when Mr. Lange conducts the overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" in addition to Schubert's C major symphony, Prokofieff's classical symphony, two poems ["Winter" and "Spring"] by Ernest Bloch, and the overture to Wagner's "Rienzi."

Efrem Zimbalist, one of the old guard of front rank violinists, will play the following program at his Orchestra hall recital this afternoon at 3:30: Concerto in C minor by Cimarosa-Benjamin, Glazounoff's Concerto in A minor, "Le Petit Berger," by Debussy, Toccata by Menotti, and two of the concert giver's own compositions, Tango, and Fantasy on Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le Coq d'Or." Seymour Lipkin will be at the piano.

The North Side Symphony orchestra will give a concert this afternoon in Thorne hall at 3 under the direction of Rudolph Reiners. The program lists Strauss' "Fledermaus" overture, the prelude to "The Deluge" by Saint-Saëns, Valse from Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty," one movement of a Mozart concerto for flute, Smetana's "The Moldau," the largo from Bach's concerto for two violins arranged by Mr. Reiners, Moussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain," Grieg's "The Last Spring," and Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody. The soloists will be Mario Paglia, violinist, and Mary L. Wigent, flutist.

Luxurious Three Character Play Deftly Written, Acted

NEW YORK [Special].—In a season where so much is overestimated, suppose we talk first about a startling understatement. I mean the black and white photographs purporting to show the way Margaret Sullavan looks in "The Voice of the Turtle." The little actress who stuck to straight hair and her own babies right thru the Hollywood era of lacquered curls and picturesquely adopted infants, must be moderately amused to find herself, unchanged, just one jump ahead of Antoine and Adrian. With her shining hair-colored hair, somehow more soft than sleek, despite its clarity of sculptured line, and with that plain little jumper dress a Hattie Carnegie dream of violet and primrose, she is just about the prettiest sight on the Broadway stage. True, the whole setup, including Stewart Chaney's custom built apartment and that deceptively casual frock in silver lame, may seem a bit incongruous for a minor actress temporarily at leisure, but it falls upon the eye like the balm of "once upon a time" upon the ear. If you are going to flout logic, you might as well do it with the fairy tale touch.

John Van Druten's luxurious little three character play, deftly written and played with dovetailed invention, does just that.

It is ornamental and amusing from the instant you enter the Morosco theater, which has been touched with a wand on its own account. How many theaters do you know that are drab and dreary and so dark you can't keep pretending your eyes are as good as they ever were? Misnamed playhouses, they are as depressing in their dusty dusk as the bastard Byzantine that engulfed the early prosperity of the movie palace.

Well, there is a man in New York who not only complained about it, but did something about it. His name is Louis A. Lotito, and he is managing director of the Morosco. Because of him the pumpkin coach that was the Morosco has turned into cream and crystal with a touch of crimson and a carpet so garlanded with flowers it joined the Drake's camellia splattered floor in my list of things to covet. Backstage, says Mr. Lotito, is even more so. He is prouder of the plumbing than of the carpet. Myself, I hail both as lustrous indications of good common sense in how to run a business.

It's all very well to be romantic about theater as "the fabulous invalid" of show business, but it's a lot smarter to call in a specialist and cure the patient. Calling Dr. Lotito, calling Dr. Lotito.

Miss Sullavan Is Bewitching.

But to get back to the voice of the turtle dove. It is no more than the tale of Sgt. Elliott Nugent, who expects to spend a week-end with

Illinois Tech Outgrowth of '$1,000,000 Sermon'

218 Graduate Tomorrow at Orchestra Hall

By the Rev. John Evans.

The 50th annual commencement of Illinois Institute of Technology tomorrow night at Orchestra hall will recall the famous "million dollar sermon" delivered by Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus before his congregation at old Plymouth Baptist church in the 1880s.

The baccalaureate sermon to be delivered this morning in Orchestra hall by Dr. Harold Ruopp, minister of Central church, will show the relationship between Dr. Gunsaulus and Central church, which he served for many years as a predecessor to Dr. Ruopp. Dr. Gunsaulus' million dollar sermon was delivered on the subject of "What Would I Do If I Had a Million Dollars?" His reply to his own query was the establishment of a school to help young people who wanted to help themselves.

When the sermon was concluded, Philip D. Armour, a member of the congregation, took Dr. Gunsaulus by the hand and asked, "Do you believe in those ideas you have just expressed?" Dr. Gunsaulus replied that he did.

"Would you carry them out if you had the means?" Armour asked. Again replying affirmatively, Armour declared, "Very well, if you will give me five years of your time, I will give you the money."

In this way was formed the partnership which led to the founding of Armour Institute of Technology, which was merged in 1940 with Lewis Institute to form the new Illinois Institute of Technology.

In 1890, after studying various welfare institutions in this country and in Europe, Dr. Gunsaulus and Mr. Armour decided on the type of school to build, a technological institute. The next year the cornerstone of the new building was laid. It is now the institute's main building, and in 1892 Dr. Gunsaulus took office as the first president of Armour. Doors were first opened to students on Sept. 14, 1893. Two hundred eighteen graduates will receive bachelor of science degrees tomorrow night and 14 honorary degrees will be conferred in recognition of the 50th annual commencement.

The "flying death" poison of the South American jungles, used by natives to tip their deadly arrows, has been applied to clinical practices at the University of Iowa with encouraging results.

Use of this substance, curare, has been successful in control of convulsions associated with electric shock therapy for depressed mental states. Curare produces extreme muscular relaxation.

It is reported in the Iowa medical bulletin that use of curare has simplified and made safe the electric shock treatment by reducing the violence of the convulsion and the possibility of compression fracture of the vertebra.

The Iowa psychopathic hospital staff has treated about 250 mental cases with electric shock therapy in which convulsions have been modified by curare and no fractures have occurred.

Picture Title Changed for British Audiences

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Britannia not only rules the waves, but the film titles of pictures based thereon. "Corvette K-225" has been changed to "The Lord Nelson Touch," for British audiences. The king, queen and others who saw the film of the Canadian navy, made under Hollywood auspices, thought that the new title would lend more glamor to the picture.

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Discovered behind a candy store counter and signed to a movie contract, Terry Ray changed her name to Ellen Drew because there already was one Terry Ray in pictures, besides eight other players named Ray, two Wrays, and a Raye.

Feudal Style of Life Told in This Novel

"DRAGONWYCK," by Anya Seton. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis.

"Dragonwyck" is a well told tale of a seldom considered chapter in American history, the ending of the feudal "patroon" system which prevailed for two centuries along the Hudson river in New York.

Anya Seton.

In it the talented daughter of Ernest Thompson Seton tells how Miranda Wells, daughter of a grimly religious Connecticut farmer, is invited to Dragonwyck to act as governess for the little daughter of a distant cousin, in 1844.

• • •

So the country cousin goes to live in the great manor house of Nicholas van Ryn, and all her dreams of a fairy tale luxury are realized. But there is a sinister influence among Dragonwyck's Gothic towers. On the night that the patroon's fat and unloved wife dies, her little girl hears wild laughter from the red room, and music from the untouched harpsichord.

Miranda marries Nicholas van Ryn a year later, and finds cause for alarm in her wealthy husband's disregard of the growing unrest among his tenants. Neither is she happy with her husband, who is alternately affectionate and cruel.

• • •

How Dr. Jeff Turner enters the story—how Miranda's discovery of a diary hidden in a mattress brings on a thrilling climax—and how the villain in the piece finally makes restitution—all these make fine winter reading. Martin van Buren, the John Jacob Astors, Barnum's museum, and the Mexican war all enter into the story.

"Dragonwyck" is excellently done, with authentic background and good writing combining to make as entertaining a bit of fiction as you are likely to find in many a day.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

AMONG the many traditions of Monte Cassino, the ancient Benedictine monastery, now in ruins because the German army in Italy persisted in using it as a fortress, are a poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, written in memory of a visit there, and a brief passage in Dante's "Divina Commedia." Longfellow's verses are often omitted from editions of his collected works and contain no lines that linger in the memory, altho they describe the venerable retreat in a stately manner.

• • •

Dante's mention of Monte Cassino may be found in the "Paradiso," canto xxii. St. Benedict tells the poet, in Cary's translation:

. . . In old days,
That mountain at whose side Cassino rests
Was, on its height, frequented by a race
Deceived and ill-disposed; and I it was
Who thither carried first the name of Him
Who brought the soul-subliming truth to man.
And such a speeding grace shone over me
That from their impious worship I reclaimed
The dwellers round about, who with the world
Were in delusion lost.

The lines, in the original Tuscan, are a literal translation of a passage from the "Dialogues" of St. Gregory, recounting the life and miracles of St. Benedict.

• • •

A reprint of John Steinbeck's "Cup of Gold" [Tower Fiction] served to keep the editor of this column in approximately good humor during a brief spell of low-grade flu. Collectors of pirate lore are advised to add this item to their shelves of gory buccaneering tales. Steinbeck is a pretty and almost poetic writer in this vein, but no improvement on Robert Louis Stevenson. In his treatment of Henry Morgan's Welsh background he often sounds as if he had been thumped on the head by a volume of "How Green Was My Valley."

This column's recent reference to the reprinting of "The Making of a Saint," an early example of W. Somerset Maugham's fiction, caused Ben Abramson of the Argus Book shop to write:

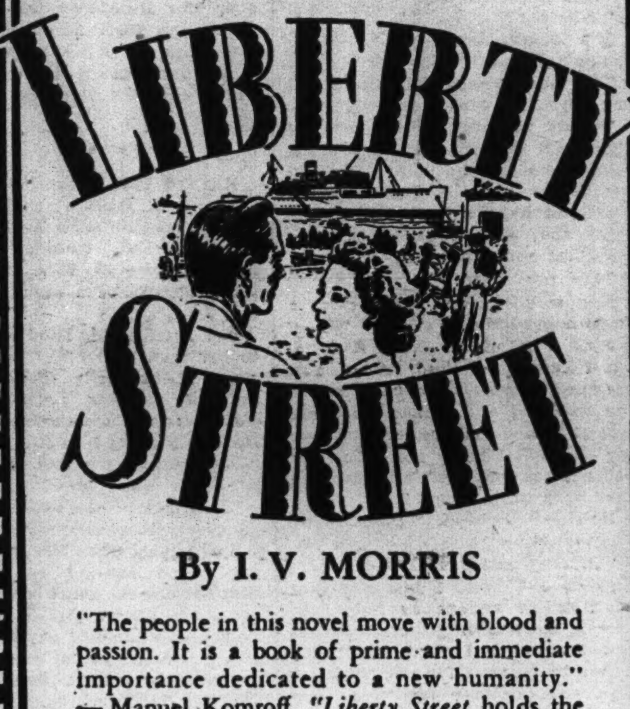
"It may interest you to know that Maugham's 'Of Human Bondage' was first written during the 1890s, under the title of 'The Artistic Aspirations of Philip Carey.' However, the manuscript did not wholly fulfill the author's intentions, so it was put aside and not revised and rewritten until almost 15 years later. Thus Maugham's greatest work is also among his earliest conceptions."

• • •

When Vincent Starrett wrote about Owen Davies, N. Clark st. book dealer, who seeks to sell out his stock at cut prices before March 14 because he has a date with the army, his news gathering eye missed this tabloid "feature," printed as advertising on Davies' circular:

"Dorothy Davies, 1542 N. La Salle st., seeks typing jobs, manuscripts, theses, envelopes, mimeographing stencils, etc., that can be done in her home."

A spirited and moving romance, peopled with individuals from the far corners of the earth, written against an exotic setting



By I. V. MORRIS

"The people in this novel move with blood and passion. It is a book of prime and immediate importance dedicated to a new humanity." —Manuel Komroff. "Liberty Street" holds the reader from the first page to the climax of the story . . . It deserves the popularity it will win, for it is a charming and exciting story and has a real and important message for every American."—John Beecroft, Editor of Literary Guild, in Wings.

"Worthy books are not companions, they are solitudes; we lose ourselves in them, and all our cares."
—BAILEY.

Are you the woman who has discovered the secret that men reserve for men alone?

EVEN IF YOU ARE, you should read Again in October, the story of a woman so good that her pattern of perfection drove her husband away after fifteen years.

Augusta Freer discovered her mistake—and the way out—only when her son's dependence on a woman opened her eyes to a strange truth. "Men are afraid," Phil said to Lynn, the girl he loved, "They must be upheld. To us you women seem reckless, tough, valiant beyond belief. We take our strength from you."

Again in October would be an unforgettable novel even if the plot were not highly unusual, for Lilian Van Ness has a way with words that spells magic for the reader. Augusta, the mother ...Lynn and Phil, the lovers...and John, the husband, who found that walking out didn't quite obliterate the memory of "old joys and old rages", are characters who bring a breath of something fresh and needed in present-day fiction.

This story of young and mature love gets inside a woman's mind—to reveal what women learn and women gain when together they share the secret men reserve for men alone.

Dragonwyck

Dragonwyck, built in defiance of the local superstition, was a huge and sinister old mansion on the Hudson, the symbol of the Van Ryn's feudal wealth and power. To it came Miranda, romantic and very lovely, eager to enter the world of pomp and fashion. But she was sensitive, too, to the chill of the Van Ryn's arrogance, the hollow stateliness of their parties, and gradually her disappointment changed to terror. The drama of her slow realization of the mystery of Dragonwyck makes one of the most exciting narratives in fiction. $2.50

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

THE literary "character" of the week is Ludwig Bemelmans, whose "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep" is the joint March choice of the Book of the Month club. . . . It may well become the choice of other phalanxes of readers. . . . Most of the people in it are fantastic zanies from the international play spots of Europe before the war, who ran like rats from those sinking ships of pleasure—rats whose sharp noses smell out the rich ripe cheeses of New York's most luxurious cage of humanity, the Kiss Royale, a restaurant incredibly expensive and "snob." . . . The central figure is Gen. Erosa of Ecuador, fabulously rich, with a fabulous entourage, who finally goes home to fabulous estates in South America and to a fabulous fate.

The author of this fabulous tale is pretty fabulous himself. . . . I have never met him, but from the first book and first illustration of his I ever saw it was plain that he had pure, underivative originality. He taught himself to draw, he taught himself to write, he taught himself English—and all three of them he does in the unique Bemelmans way.

A Well-Fed Sprite.

Stories about him are wafted our way by those tale carrier pigeons, the gossip column boys, but I have never read a more enlightening few paragraphs than Whit Burnett's character sketch in the current Book of the Month Club News. . . . Mr. Burnett calls Bemelmans "a well fed sprite" and "one of the world's most integrated elves." . . . He tells thus of "Ludwig's" coming to America in 1914, when he was 16 years old: "His parents gave him the final choice of going to the reform school or migrating. His first job was in one of New York's greatest hotels. Years later he used the background in his book, "Hotel Splendide," surprising the management considerably when they found their ex-waiter had issued a limited edition, using satin draperies from the Ritz to bind volumes of his book for his special friends."

"His home he decorates himself," says Mr. Burnett, and gives these pertinent sketches of some of its fabulous items: "A wooden whale, swallowing Jonah, hangs from a Peruvian chandelier. The whale is really a Bavarian pickerel, sixteenth century, wood-carved. To reach the bed one climbs up steps of an Ecuadorian altar, which opens unexpectedly into a night commode. Empty picture frames decorate the hand painted walls."

Bemelmans' Hot Car.

"He even," continues Mr. Burnett, "[in the gasoline days] decorated his automobile. What a car! Imported, magnificent, it had everything. He decorated it with compasses, weathervanes, altimeters, instruments to chart the angle of curves, thermometers, barometers, calendar clocks, oil gauges, gasoline gauges, radios, and musical horns. It was a masterpiece. He drove it up hills, around curves, over bridges, across fields, all the way to Florida, at 75 miles an hour. It was a record. He was very proud of it. But when he got there the whole thing simply collapsed. It was not quite clear to any one what happened. But on piecing it together again, at the cost of two ordinary cars, it turned out that Ludwig had forgotten at all times to put in water, and everything simply fried." What a Bemelmans!

He didn't think this one up, but it's exactly the kind of thing he would whittle out of his fancy. On a Monday night radio quiz the question was asked, "What labor union do grave diggers belong to?" . . . The incredible, macabre, but correct answer was, "The Amalgamated Canners and Packers." Mr. Bemelmans would delight in that alignment.

A Tall Story Teller.

V. Sackville-West, whose "The Eagle and the Dove" was published this week, is a character in her own right, too. . . . She is not enchantingly zany like laughing Ludwig, but definitely some one you'd not forget—a bit on the skyscraper side architecturally—and just naturally dominating any landscape. . . . She and her husband, Harold Nicolson, came here in 1933 to lecture separately and jointly.

"The Eagle and the Dove" is the record of the lives of two Catholic saints, Carmelite nuns who shared the same name but were as different as two women could be. St. Teresa of Avila, "the Eagle," many of whose 67 years were spent sternly cultivating faith during the Spanish inquisition, wrote many books of literary as well as historical value. . . . St. Thérèse of Lisieux, "the Dove," who died of tuberculosis in 1897 at the age of 24, left behind her autobiography, "L'Histoire d'une Ame" . . . a classic of literature and religion.

Boston Money in Michigan Copper Mines

"O DISTANT STAR," by Mary Frances Doner. [Doubleday Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst.

It is a long span from Beacon hill above Boston harbor to Iron bay on the wild shore of Lake Superior, but Miss Doner encompasses the two quite logically in "O Distant Star." Eighty years ago the copper mines were producing on the windy headland of Keeweenaw and the mines of the Marquette range were sending down trainloads of red iron ore to the boats under the trestled docks.

Mary Frances Doner.

It was Boston bankers who financed the mines and the steamships, and Boston engineers who sank the shafts into the iron-bearing hills. What Miss Doner has done in this romantic novel is to follow a few Bostonians west to the Lake Superior wilderness.

• • •

Delia Clune, of South Boston, was ardent and Irish and a rebel all her life. To begin with, she rebelled against the drudgery and commonplace of her life and the hard toil that was the lot of her people. So, when she was sewing lingerie for a Beacon hill bride she grasped at romance with the worldly and aristocratic Richard Cleaves. But life proved to be unyielding, despite Delia's ardent dreams and her willful rebellion. So she turned to her rugged Irish suitor, Dermot Reagan, and at his side she went to the wilderness of Upper Michigan.

The second part of this novel follows Delia's fortunes and misfortunes in the iron ore port of Marquette; it is a narrative filled with dramatic incident and sketched against a vigorously drawn background of the iron country in the '80s and '90s.

• • •

By a long arm of coincidence Richard Cleaves comes to occupy a mansion on Marquette's "Ridge" and to direct mining operations on the range. So for rebellious Delia the dreams and the rebellion are revived. How she comes to a final acceptance of her lot is the substance of this sincere and sometimes penetrating book.

Chez Paree Announces New Revue for March 10

Benny Fields, New Orchestra Are Included

By Will Davidson.

Chez Paree finally is going to have to let Joe E. Lewis go. Joe has been packing the Fritzel-Jacobson bailiwick for a good many weeks now, and could probably continue to pack it for the duration. But a guy has to make use of his luggage some time, doesn't he? And, anyway, Joe has another U. S. O. trip in the offing.

So-o-o, the Chez is announcing a new show for March 10. Like most Chez shows it is well designed as a talented change from the present superb revue. Joe E. Lewis, the Barrys, Rose Marie, et al, are doing splendid work and matching them is not too easy a job. But here's the March 10 lineup of headliners: Benny Fields, the old minstrel man; Hal LeRoy, the singing Murtah sisters, Gay Claridge's orchestra, and a practically new line of Adorables.

• • •

Frank Fay is a very difficult guy to review. His humor is the hardest kind to present effectively to a cafe crowd, depending as it does so thoroly upon hairline adjustment of mood, timing, facial expression, inflection. His delivery is quiet, suave, and monumentally reserved. There is little emphasis, except that of understatement. But well attuned, this tricky talent can be very, very funny, indeed. In the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel Frank finds an ideal setting, and altho his opening performance was in the nature of a warmup, he should find a happy response to his delightful fun.

With Frank in the new show there are the Chandra Kaly dancers, experts in the art of Indian and Latin dances. The Indian numbers, and I am speaking of India Indians, not the Cleveland ball team, are spectacularly mounted, exquisitely delivered. The Mayfair room floor is a bit small for this troupe, but they manage well. There is a fluidity of movement about Chandra Kaly's dancing that sometimes is almost startling. At all times he is expert.

Their supper show is devoted to Latin dances, and these, equally well designed, are in a sense more diverting for a midnight cafe crowd. Color and action combine into a superb effect. The three girls who assist in the routines are beautifully trained and fit neatly into the architecture of the dances.

Neil Bondshu continues to do his great work on the Mayfair's bandstand. He is one of the hardest working leaders in the business, particularly when playing a show. You should hear the unanimous praise he gets from the acts that depend upon his accompaniment. That, friends, is worth a lot in show business.

SINGING HIT

Rose Marie, who not so many years ago was called Baby Rose Marie, is the singing hit of the current Chez Paree show.

• • •

Del Courtney is fast becoming a mainstay of the Blackhawk restaurant, and it is a good thing that he has the music and novelties that so many people like, for there is little enough else at the Blackhawk to attract you. The current show already has been revised, with the Three Billetta sisters replacing Jack Shea. Leopoldi and his partner, Helen Moeslein, are fine entertainers, but I would rather hear them at the Yar or in some other more intimate spot. Their old world air is charming, indeed, and their songs are delightful blends of classic, modern, satirical, whimsical. The bald, cherubic Leopoldi is so very continentally engaging that he makes you long for pre-war Vienna. I hope this couple goes over well in the Blackhawk, for I would hate to see their talents lost thru a mischance of bad booking.

Del plays music that keeps the crowds on the Blackhawk's floor, and that is a pretty good test of any band. He has a wealth of singing talent, too. There's Earl Randall, whom I've been plugging as a potential big name ever since I first heard him with Art Kassel. There's Jack Milton, the only member of the band who was with Del at the Stevens about two years ago. Jack is a personable chap, a likeable singer with a good voice. And, impolitely last, but definitely not least, there's Mary Jane Dodd, the beautiful deb who is developing into a first rate band singer.

Susie's blonde, she's beautiful, she's appealing, she's personable, she sings like a beautiful child with a miraculously mature voice. She has starred in the movies, on the stage, in radio, and in cafes. She wears a $400 gown [without those open areas on the side it comes at $495], and from what I hear, has a ranch in California. The line, gentlemen, forms on the right at the entrance to Camellia House in the Drake hotel, and discursive Frank Amstadt will see that first come is first served.

Susan Miller does only one thing that might lead to more trouble for the police at the Drake. She sings "Mairzy Doats." I'm not complaining, understand, for I'm just the type that WOULD like that song. But there are persons who start rummaging around in old trunks for something lethal every time they hear it. As for the rest of her repertoire, there should be little complaint, if any at all. She does a beautiful "I'm in Love with a Married Man," and a touching Chinese ballad, "Honorable Moon," and she goes lively over an air raid shelter romance halted by the all-clear, and also a Scotch medley in swing. She's a little bit of all right.

Bill Snyder is doing an elegant job of playing for the Camellia House shows and dancing. A fine pianist, Bill has built a very good band. He'll do.

Boswelling the Bistros:

I think a standing ovation should be given Head Waiter Camille Duplex, Owner Steve Healy, Manager Dick Hill, and Publicity Director Fred Joyce of the Stevens hotel, as well as the city's head waiters, chefs, waiters, and kitchen employes, who donated their services for the ultra-million dollar bond party in the Stevens last Monday. The entertainers who did their part, and the purchasers of the bonds also rate a laurel. . . . June Browne, coloratura soprano; Terese Meyers, organist; Mary Wichart, pianist; Hans Muenzer, violinist; Magic Rudy and his tricks, Louie and his gang, all are giving Old Heidleburg restaurant patrons some excellent entertainment these nights. . . . Some of those German communiques on the Russian front fighting sound like waving the bull in front of a red flag.

The Acting Is Boisterous in This War Film

"ROOKIES IN BURMA."

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

KIND: Much ado in the Burmese jungles.

ACTING: Boisterous.

DIRECTION: Casual and roughneck.

DIALOG: Mostly silly.

STORY: Jerry, Mike, and their long suffering Sgt. Burke land in a Jap concentration camp; with true American ingenuity get themselves out—and the chase is on. . . . During same they pick up an elephant, a tank, two dance hall entertainers and a lot of woe. . . . The finale is screwy—but sorta amusing. Sorta.

AUDIENCE APPEAL: Men in the audience seemed to find "Rookies in Burma" a nice change after seeing "Higher and Higher" with Frank Sinatra. The ladies—not so good.

See you tomorrow.

Street Rises Again.

HOLLYWOOD — Altho London's original Half Moon street has been partially demolished by bombs, it will live again in "The Man in Half Moon Street" thru reproductions of photographs owned by the studio's research department.

Film Industry Enjoys Biggest Year in 1943

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—In spite of loss of overseas markets, limitations, nonprofit work on government films, and increased costs, the film industry enjoyed its fattest year in 1943, so far as dividends for stockholders are concerned. The increase over 1942 was 25 per cent. One angle on it is that high class features have held over in so many centers that need for new films has been cut, which proves that good pictures are a good financial investment because they run longer.

Drama Notes

Larry Sunbrock's wild west rodeo and big top circus comes to the Coliseum Saturday for a 15 day run. It will feature cowboys and cowgirls, circus acts, and a company of Hollywood stunt men and crash drivers. The Coliseum has been renovated since the government released it recently. Its seating capacity is in excess of 8,000.

• • •

Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," adjudged the best play of the year by the New York drama critics' circle, opens a local engagement at the Studebaker theater tomorrow night. It will star Walter Hampden as Thomas Jefferson.

• • •

A production called "Show Boat Follies" will be presented by the service men centers' junior hostesses Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday evenings at center No. 2, 430 S. Michigan av. The show was planned and will be emceed by Kay Melchior.

As the Chicago company of "Tomorrow the World" enters its 16th week at the Selwyn the New York company starts its 46th. Theron Bamberger, the play's producer, is now reading scripts in the hope of coming on something with equal potentialities for success. Dickie Tyler, who plays the part of the Nazi boy in the Chicago company, is actually an ardent Boy Scout.

• • •

Rosemarie Stewart, of the ice skating team of Dench and Stewart, will be seen as a solo performer when "Ice-Capades of 1944" opens at the Chicago Arena, Feb. 29. Dench and Stewart toured extensively in pre-war years and once represented England at the Olympic games. "Ice-Capades'" cast of 152 also will include Mar-Yan [Red] McCarthy, an exponent of interpretative ballet skating, who will be seen in his own ice ballet, "The World in Chains."

• • •

The "Kiss and Tell" company has assembled a magazine library backstage at the Harris theater, each member bringing some favorite magazine. In a few weeks the entire collection will be sent to the service men centers and the cast asked to replenish the library.

The appropriate numbers are 2, 7, 10, 5, 6, 4, 9, 8, 12. Unless you correctly identified seven of these nine, you should read "13 Against the Odds," by Edwin Embree. The book is easy and heartening reading—you will spend a pleasant evening discovering how 12 living Negroes and the late George Washington Carver brought and are bringing distinction to their race. And you will also, I hope, be acutely troubled as you discover what the odds against them were and are.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

I WAS grieved to read of the death of Frederick Niven, a few weeks ago, and shocked, as always, by the brief dismissal in the newspapers of a distinguished man of letters, while rascals and nonentities were claiming headlines. Niven was not a giant, but he was a novelist of stature who, altho never popular, will survive in his better works, among them "Justice of the Peace" [1914] and "A Tale That Is Told" [1920]. Two of his admirers, Hugh Walpole and Christopher Morley, wrote prefaces for "Justice of the Peace" when it was reissued, in this country, in 1923; but, even so, the book again proved too grim and Scottish for the reading hordes whose predilections determine the best seller lists.

Born of Scottish parents in Valparaiso, Chile, Niven was educated in Scotland, became a journalist in London, and settled ultimately in British Columbia, where most of his writing was done and where recently he died—leaving Canadian literature the poorer for his passing. He was one of the great readers, and I have preserved for years a charming article he once wrote on books that it was possible for him to re-read. He re-read whatever had pleased him and continued to please him, without reference to whether it was major or minor, a sensible notion which this department recommends.

"Some books sit together on the shelf of books re-read, for reasons not only literary but evocative," he wrote. "They are part of one's past, a past that remains part of the present. . . . A certain sort of succor the spirit needs in this terrestrial stage of its journey. . . . I am not here for long and I know what helps me on the way."

Macfall's Masterpiece.

One of his favorite books, it pleases me to remember, was "The Wooings of Jezebel Pettyfer," by Haldane Macfall, which it was my good luck to call to his attention in one of my early trumpetings about neglected authors. . . . "There are those," he wrote me, later, "who tell me if I must re-read a novel, let it be 'Tom Jones,' for example, not Macfall's 'Jezebel Pettyfer.' Well, they are both here on my shelves: 'Tom Jones' I have read, 'Jezebel Pettyfer' I have re-read. I prefer the humor and humanity of Macfall's book. I think it is one of the greatest novels of our time — or in our literature."

It was of this book, by the way, that George Meredith enigmatically observed — to the author — that it was the finest novel of its generation, but ought never to have been written. One of these days I am going to get a lot of people excited about it.

Incidentally, librarians will want to add Niven to their roll of honor. In his youth he was for some years an assistant librarian in various circulating libraries in Glasgow and Edinburgh. The muster of librarians who have graduated into literature — that is to say, authorship — must now be a fairly long one. It is headed, I suppose, by the amiable Dr. Richard Garnett of the British museum, whose "Twilight of the Gods" is a modern classic, and the notorious Casanova, whose "Memoirs" is a very considerable masterpiece, whatever else it may be.

Sherlock Holmes' Valentine.

It has been at least a fortnight since this department has mentioned Sherlock Holmes, except by indirection, an interregnum occasioned by a remark made by Prof. James Taft Hatfield, the Longfellow specialist. Prof. Hatfield wondered if I didn't talk too much about Sherlock Holmes. With quiet superiority I replied that it wasn't possible to talk too much about Sherlock Holmes, and we debated the question thru four courses of a four course dinner. Just now, as I was thinking of saying something pleasantly innocuous about old Henry W. Longfellow, to please Prof. Hatfield, along comes a note from Chris Morley, enclosing a "Valentine for Irene Adler," written—according to Mr. Morley—by the Master himself, and as far as I know the only verses Sherlock ever wrote. The valentine is a week late, but rather than save so interesting a news beat for another year, I print the historic stanza in its entirety:

If Baker Street required a mate
Or Reason crowned a Queen,
The only one to segregate
Would be, of course, IRENE.

Newsboys' Literary Greetings.

For almost two centuries, American newsboys carried New Year's greetings in prose and verse to their clientèle, in the shape of cards or leaflets distributed, on the morning of January 1, with the compliments of the papers whose good will they represented. To a literary symposium, published by the New York public library to honor H. M. Lydenberg, Gerald D. McDonald contributes a fascinating paper on the development of this custom. Some of the ephemera thus distributed, he reveals, are thought to have been the work of such notables as Franklin, Freneau, Daniel Webster, Poe, Hawthorne, Bryant, Whittier, Holmes, and James Whitcomb Riley, a revelation that will dismay collectors of those men, now faced with the task of running down the vanished trifles. It is certain that the first separate printing of Clement Moore's "Visit from St. Nicholas" was a carrier's address: your commentator has been seeking one for a quarter of a century.

THE RESULTS are history, but for 25 years what really happened when statesmen great and small sat in secret session with our own President Wilson and Colonel House has been locked in the diary of Stephen Bonsal. Bonsal was confidential interpreter for Wilson and House, and kept his diary at Wilson's behest as a reservoir of information for the President's own use.

This secret diary has tremendous significance for the peacemaking to come. It takes you to sit in on the closed sessions where statesmen killed victory with compromise. You hear their voices, witness their quarrels, know what happened to make General Smuts say: "Not Wilson, but humanity failed at Versailles."

Rare Books Help to Produce 'Anna and the King of Siam'

By Harry Hansen.

AN interesting literary adventure lies behind the publication this spring of "Anna and the King of Siam," by Margaret Landon, former resident of Evanston and graduate of Wheaton college, who, with her husband, Kenneth Perry Landon, lived for 10 years in Siam on an assignment from the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. Mrs. Landon has brought to book the remarkable story of an Englishwoman, Anna Leonowens, who was hired by King Mongkut of Siam in the early 1860s to be a tutor for his wives, concubines, and children, as well as secretary. This intelligent and strong willed Englishwoman carried on much of the king's correspondence with foreign lands and became influential not only in suggesting progressive reforms but in saving some of the unlucky wives from the royal disfavor.

Such a career suggests plenty of adventures and Mrs. Landon found them. Anna Leonowens wrote two books, "The English Governess at the Court of Siam," published in 1870, and "The Romance of the Harem." When Mrs. Landon began work on her career she did not own the books, altho she had read them. In 1938 she was going thru a pile of out of print novels in the Economy bookstore of Chicago when she found "The Romance of the Harem." Several weeks later Marshall Field & Co. had a sale of 50,000 unsorted books, and among them was "The English Governess."

Then by accident the author met a woman of 93 who remembered the return of Anna Leonowens to Ireland and thru her she met one of Anna's grandchildren and found much new material. The Siamese section of the Library of Congress also provided opportunities for following Anna's trail. It stands to reason that whatever is worth telling about Anna Leonowens' career will be found in the forthcoming book. The spectacle of a Victorian Englishwoman teaching the king of Siam how to treat his wives ought to have great movie possibilities. John Day will issue the book.

Sandburg and Lincoln.

Carl Sandburg's unique position as the greatest living authority on Abraham Lincoln has brought him in great demand as a speaker and writer on Lincoln. But whereas he spoke on many programs in 1943, his contribution in 1944 is confined almost entirely to writing. His share in the Frederick Hill Meserve book, "The Photographs of Abraham Lincoln," was large. Collier's used an article by him on "The Face of Lincoln." The March number of Photography has something by him on the same subject, and United States Camera will deal with it in April.

A neat bit of publishing enterprise is associated with this year's Lincoln book. When reviewers were reading it they also received copies of Stefan Lorant's "Lincoln: His Life in Photographs," published by Duell, Sloan & Pearce in December, 1941. Thus they were able to compare the two books and the Lorant book proved greatly superior in the reproduction of the photographs. A number of reviewers said so. This book, by the way, is having a good sale. Originally published at $4.50, it appealed only to fervent collectors. Now the price has been cut in half. The book got a good start last fall and is moving along.

Readings by Poets.

The New York public library found the six evenings devoted to readings by poets last fall so well received that it will continue the program this spring. This follows the initiative of the Library of Congress, where Archibald MacLeish has been most hospitable to poets. Thus poets may introduce their work under the most favorable auspices. The New York public library has published in a pamphlet entitled "The Poets Speak" 12 poems by authors who read last fall, with an introduction by May Sarton. They are James Agee, W. H. Auden, William Rose Benét, Padraic Colum, Reuel Denney, Horace Gregory, Langston Hughes, Marianne Moore, Kenneth Patchen, Muriel Rukeyser, William Carlos Williams, and Marya Zaturenska.

People Like to Be Fooled.

John Mulholland, the magician, says it is very hard to make practical business men accept a reasonable explanation for tricks. Sometimes he takes a trick apart, explains it in detail, and shows where the audience was misled. But invariably the comment is: "I don't see how you do it." This had led Mulholland to make all sorts of psychological experiments. He thinks the magician, who is supposed to face skeptical people who dare him to fool them, more often faces people with a great will to believe the impossible. Dunninger, who presumably tells people what's in their minds at the moment, disarms everybody at the start by telling them that it's a trick, but nobody will believe him and the audience enjoys making its bafflement complete. Mulholland told me that in his new book, "The Art of Illusion," he takes people into his confidence, and he wonders if they are going to believe him when he shows how it is done. But for many his line of action will remain illogical. A little experience is needed to make the art of deception perfect. It takes time to develop a good poker player. Scribner will publish Mulholland's book in March.

A Red Ink Shortage.

Kay Boyle, whose novel of espionage, "Avalanche," has had a mixed reception—many of the admirers of her psychological stories can't accept her as a spinner of plots—appeared at a Book and Author luncheon the other day and made a successful talk about the underground news that is smuggled out of France. Her book deals with the way French residents of the Savoy region communicated with secret agents and with Frenchmen in Germany. She told an anecdote about a Frenchman who had been shipped to Germany to do forced labor. Before he left he told his wife that he would write to her in black and red ink; whenever he used black ink she could believe what he said, but when he used red it was a lie.

For a long time after his departure he did not write. Then came a letter written in black, which said, as near as I can quote Miss Boyle: "I am very happily situated here. The Germans are most kind. My work is pleasant. I am well treated, have excellent quarters, good food and clothes. We are very well paid and in our moments of leisure we can buy anything we wish in the stores which are well supplied with everything. You can buy everything here except just one thing: red ink."

Jerry Was One Mutt Who Really Was a Gay Dog

"MONGREL METTLE," by Jesse Stuart. [Dutton, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Bob Becker.

Jesse Stuart again shows he's a master workman in this warm hearted biography of a homely Kentucky mongrel with the quaint name of Jerry B Boneyard Powderjay. Coming from a lowly canine family including one brother that would pass for a hound and one sister that looked like a collie, Jerry B has a series of hilarious and thrilling adventures that are made to order for dog lovers.

• • •

First befriended by Glenna Powderjay who later goes to college, Jerry B decides he must go out into the world and make a name for himself. Then follows a series of exciting experiences as this lovable mongrel is adopted by many masters and mistresses, tries not to get an inferiority complex when associating with an aristocratic, snooty Irish setter with a pedigree, and meets many strange dogs. The author even has brought in a delightful dash of romance for he has Jerry B running wild with a family of foxes which exposes the mongrel to the charms of a pretty little vixen named Fair Fox. This chapter in the life of the roving mongrel is one of the most intriguing in the whole book.

One of the most humorous parts of this unusual narrative is that which details Jerry B's experiences as a watch dog for a still when he fell into temporary disgrace as a drunkard after acquiring a taste for the alcoholic broth from the barrels of illicit mash.

• • •

The charm of this book is irresistible. It's packed with canine philosophy, laughs, dramatic suspense, outdoor lore and even a touch of social satire. And it's so entertaining that this reviewer has no hesitation in commending it to even that small percentage of people who do not like dogs. After reading just one chapter of Stuart's delightful canine dialog I dare them to put the book down.

The story behind the Secret Weapons (and the known ones) that are helping us win this war

SCIENCE at WAR
By GEORGE W. GRAY
Author of "The Advancing Front of Science"

"Brilliant, stimulating . . . one of the most enthralling volumes to come into my life in many a year. Here, in words the least scientific layman can fully understand is the story of the sole science is playing in World War II. It is brilliantly done, page after page being filled with fascinating material about guns, planes, radar, radio, electricity, mathematics, medicine, chemistry, metallurgy. If you are one who thinks these subjects are beyond your ken, disabuse yourself of that opinion; you will not find them so in Science at War.
"George Gray brings to his book a comprehensive understanding of science, its past history and current achievements; he brings to it a scholar's mind and fine writer's pen. All these make Science at War not only an important book but also an exceptionally readable one."

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

Old timers think first of the late Lois Weber, who directed some pretty weighty [or so they seemed then] problem flickers for Universal in the years from 1915 to 1925. Then there was—and still is—Fanchon Royer, who supervised quickies for years and is now active in coördinating inter-American affairs, via educational movies.

• • •

Back in the Hollywood of last week, Virginia Van Upp, scenarist, was appointed co-producer of her own story, "The Impatient Years"—an occasion undoubtedly celebrated in the trade papers with the headline "Upp Upped." And Joan Harrison, her only competitor in the production field, newly covered with laurels for her "Phantom Lady," was mulling offers from several studios—with insiders betting on Universal again to win.

Universal's first female producer in two decades, Miss Harrison made "Phantom Lady" for $350,000—a remarkably low budget for a superduper chiller with a cast including Franchot Tone, Ella Raines, and Alan Curtis. "Phantom Lady" is "almost" Alfred Hitchcock; the part that isn't Hitchcock is Joan Harrison.

Whatever one's preconceived notion of what a lady executive should be like, Miss Harrison upset it completely. The tailored business suit and the quick stride did bespeak a certain mental tidiness and, well—efficiency; but for the rest Miss H. was more like a blonde, blue-eyed babe who has just dropped in for a pot of tea and a chat after a brisk shopping tour.

• • •

She is in her very early 30's, and unattached. "Never had time for it," she told me—the "it" being her manner of lumping the genus homo all in one place, probably an out-of-the-way corner.

Miss Harrison started with Hitchcock as his secretary 10 years ago. He hired her in a hurry, just as he was going to lunch—and lunch, at lunchtime, comes first on Hitchcock's agenda. Subsequently she became his reader, a writer of synopses, and then an actual contributor of bits of business and extra dialog, working on "The 39 Steps," "Lady Vanishes," "Woman Alone," "The Girl Was Young," and "Jamaica Inn." In Hollywood the association continued, thru "Rebecca" [her first writing credit], "Foreign Correspondent," "Suspicion," and "Saboteur" [original story]. Two years ago they parted.

• • •

And what, I inquired, does an associate producer do?

"In my case," Miss H. answered, "I first selected a writer—Bernard Schoenfeld, from radio; he's new, but I believe a new writer can be taught quickly. Then, having worked with Hitch on art direction, I got together with my art director over sets. In England I had learned the importance of economy. A topped street, for example, costs much more than an open street; if you can get by with an open street, you modify your camera angles accordingly.

"Then, actors must often be 'sold' a part. I had to sell Franchot Tone, whom I had always thought of as a heavy rather than a hero, on the idea of playing one. I tested Ella Raines and liked her at once. And here is where the 'woman's touch' comes in!—I went shopping with her personally, saw to it that she dressed as a secretary earning no more, certainly, than $40 a week, would be able to dress.

"I also selected all the types, even bits. Like Hitch, I am a great believer in surprise and suspence and even the most incidental casting may have an important bearing on them."

Miss Harrison had a director, of course: Robert Siodmak. She has no desire to direct, herself; thinks it takes a man really to get tough when it's necessary. "However, I got along very well on the sets," she added. "Most men are by nature chivalrous, you know."

On the Aisle

Audrey Christie, is detoured by a commando, and spends it instead with Miss Sullavan. On a stage which shows you, simultaneously, the living room, kitchen, and bedroom of the Sullavan apartment, they play the old game which proves that nothing is so good for plumping out a dented heart as falling in love.

Miss Sullavan is bewitching, whether she is closing cupboards with a bump of her forehead, her hands being full, or lying motionless, face down, across a bed, to give Miss Christie the stage for her best scene at the telephone. Mr. Nugent is easy as an old shoe, but you get the important idea that he is a nonwolf by inclination, not disability. Miss Christie's predatory lass is wryly amusing, but so hard you could use her to chip ice.

About that Chicago company—Alfred De Liagre Jr., the producer, hasn't made up his mind. Still a bit shaky from parting with his appendix, he is shuffling the cards of a possible cast. Gypsy Rose Lee would be fun for the Christie role, and maybe Dorothy McGuire for the other girl, if you could get her out of a dirndl. I wouldn't want the job of trying to duplicate Mr. Nugent.

That Chicago Repertory Company.

Margaret Webster and Eva Le Gallienne are still trying to start that repertory company talked about for Chicago a couple of years ago. You would think, considering the success of Miss Webster's "Othello" [in which I was sharply disappointed and of which more next week], and of the Webster-Le Gallienne collaboration in "The Cherry Orchard," that money would pour in without the asking. It doesn't. They had a terrible time raising money for the Chekhov play. One man was interested until he heard the title, then he said he didn't care to invest in a play about fruit. Miss Webster said, hastily, "It isn't fruit, it's real estate," but he had fled. Another was on the string until it was discovered that he had a talented daughter, too talented, indeed, for anything less than a leading role.

But they managed, and "The Cherry Orchard" is one of the treats of Broadway, a flowing performance of an ageless play—not the ideal, definitive performance, perhaps, should there be such a thing outside Russia, but one that has soaked up much of its warmth and has not sought to channel its overtones of futility and frustration. Miss Le Gallienne is magnificent as the exquisitely improvident Lyubov, giving the role delicacy and distinction, magnetic radiance, and an utter conviction deeply and richly resourceful.

Joseph Schildkraut plays the brother with a remote, dreamy indifference brushed with style. Stefan Schnabel, son of the pianist now embarked on our Mozart cycle, has gusty vitality and the sublety to indicate the unconquered servility of the man who buys the cherry orchard. And there is an unforgettable performance of the ancient valet, Firs, by A. G. Andrews, oldest active member of Equity, who is 87. When this quiet old man, come too late to serve his ousted master, lies down in the shuttered house to die as the mysterious Chekhovian twang sounds in the distance and the axes begin their destruction of an era, something rich and full has been recreated in terms of theater. He is the perfect period.

Oriental theater—Tommy Dorsey, with his trombone, his record smashing orchestra, and guest star, Gene Krupa, the famous drummer, top the bill. Betty Brewer is the pretty vocalist, and the Sentimentalists, the four Clark sisters, offer close harmony. Completing the show are Paul Regan, mimic, and the Edward sisters, tapsters.

Chicago theater—Singing Star Phil Regan of the screen, musical comedy and night clubs headlines the current bill, together with Comedian Cookie Bowers, impressionist; the Whitson brothers, acrobatic stars; the Chicago theater ballet, and as a special attraction Robert Crum, the young pianist whose improvisations and unique conceptions of the classics attracted wide attention during his sojourn at a local night spot.

• • •

Helsing's Vodvil lounge—An all-star show consists of return engagements for those artists who have proved most popular with patrons during the last year. Included on the bill are Dorothy Davis, personality songstress; Billy Burke, impersonator of radio singers; Jack Waller, the humoristocrat of comedy; Jane Jordon, who dances on roller skates; Chet Roble, the pianist; the Music Men and Anne Reiling with her accordion.

Rialto theater—"Future woman," 6 feet 7⅛ inches of blonde pulchritude, otherwise known as Denise Darnell, joins the road show that also enlists the services of Diana Van Dyne, Dawn Arden, Jack Diamond, and Ethel De Veaux, George Rose, Bea Haden, Jane Owen, Sammy Spears, and Bob Padgett and company.

Wild and Warming Story Is Told in New Bemelmans Book

"NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP," by Ludwig Bemelmans. [Viking Press, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

Ludwig Bemelmans, that wild yet gentile satirist, here has produced his first novel. It is at one time ridiculous and delightful, acidulous and warming, and its hero is the nicest old epileptic phony general to come to life in many a day.

Leonidas Erosa was living in Biarritz when the rumblings arose on the Rhine. He was a general only because the Argentine republic had made him an honorary one out of respect to his vast herds, but he never neglected the title. He drank Roederer 1928 brut like lemonade, had a new portrait painted each month, had a magnificent chef with whom he fought every morning, and lived in strange, gold plated glory surrounded by Miss Graves, the governess for whom there were no children; his valet, and Anselmo, the Indian, who took care of the dogs and the general when he had an epileptic seizure, and who dreamed always of choking the general to death.

Ludwig Bemelmans.

The general was happy in Biarritz, but along came that inconvenient war, so onto a yacht when he, together with his latest portrait, his 16 favorite carpets, six jars of pate de fois gras, and 100 cigars encased in the sedate black coffin Miss Graves had purchased to care for her remains after she committed suicide. The Indian, the valet, the chef, three Great Danes, and Senora Lopez, a beautiful siren who reciprocated his amorous attentions, went also.

* *

Casablanca was their first stop, for the general's younger cousin was Venezuelan consul there. The cousin had much less money than the general, but was compensated for it by a lesser affliction. Whereas the general had epilepsy, the cousin merely walked in his sleep. However, the French authorities wanted to impound the general's household staff, his cellar, and his money, so they moved, en masse, to New York.

Here the general installed his little bevy at the best and most ornate hotel, one that came equipped with Central park for the Great Danes. They had delightful times and the general, the soul of generosity, plastered his beauty, who called him "Swit-hart," with life-size emeralds, and Miss Greves, a lost soul from the start, again is rescued from suicide.

* *

The most acidulous chapter in the book deals with an evening at a New York night club, the Kiss Royale. It is filled with emotional cripples who rushed to New York when Hitler menaced Europe, recognizable playboys, and various New York cafe riffraff so exquisitely delineated you will spot every one of them.

The International set, known as The Immortals, have their own corner, on a dais. They are all there—the refugees from the Riviera, the rich broker who has good sound shipping, the female maitre d'hotel for her friends who arranges their diversions and whose new diversion is the war. Here and there "as if they were on small rafts" are soldiers and sailors, "properly grateful that they were allowed in."

* *

But the general tires of New York. It is well, for his beauty's husband returns to cash in on the money she has mulcted from the gold plated South American. So home he goes to his Hacienda Miraflores, he and the Indian and the dogs and the chef and the valet and Miss Graves with her coffin. It is a horrible voyage, for the general has quarreled with his chef and has to eat sauerbrauten and other ship's cook indigestibles. But at last they reach his idyllic castle and he is about to carry on his old Biarritz life, with a pure child of nature as a companion, when an elemental disaster overtakes the hacienda and all. Just as you suspect all along Miss Graves, the only one who doesn't want to live, survives them all.

The book is thoroly delightful and entertaining thruout. And Bemelmans writes like wild tropical foliage in words that cover and color all.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

IN these days, when the world's attention is centered on the terrific battles overseas, it may seem odd that some persons are still fighting the Civil war. . . . But a group of Chicagoans is carrying on its researches into the life and time of Abraham Lincoln, and it has progressed to the point where it now believes it can answer most of the questions about that era. . . . The group, known as the Civil War Round Table, has just published "Ben Hardin Helm," by R. Gerald McMurtry. . . . The book recounts the career of a general who fought on the Confederate side and who was, surprisingly enough, Lincoln's brother-in-law. . . . Among the researchers are Ralph Newman, book store owner; Newton C. Farr, realtor; Joseph T. Ryerson, manufacturer; Monroe F. Cockrell, banker, and Lloyd Lewis, Leon Stolz, Joseph Ator, and Joseph Parrish, newspaper men. . . . Working and conferring with them whenever he's in town is Carl Sandburg.

• • •

Charles Leavelle of THE TRIBUNE staff, who collaborated with the late Lt. Col. W. E. Dyess in the epochal account of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines, has elaborated the story into a full length volume. . . . The book, based on the series that has been running in this and a hundred other leading newspapers, will be published next month by G. P. Putnam's Sons. . . . About the same time Farrar & Rinehart will issue the story of Comdr. Melvyn H. McCoy and Lt. Col. S. M. Mellnik, two others who were prisoners of war on the islands and who escaped. . . . And a third book setting forth the story is in the offing. . . . Francis Trevelyan Miller's "General MacArthur," first published two years ago by the John C. Winston company, is coming off the presses again. . . . The new edition will include Col. Dyess' report to Gen. Douglas MacArthur regarding the atrocities.

• • •

Bad news for authors: Harry West, speaking for the WPB, notified a group of Chicago printers and textbook publishers the other day that the white paper situation probably will be more acute before the year is over. . . . The book men are restricted to 75 per cent of their former paper usage; a lower percentage is looked for. . . . Mr. West urged his audience to join the newspapers in the waste paper salvage campaign. . . . Alfred A. Knopf has signed up William Rose Benet for a volume of "poems in war time." . . . It will be called "Day of Deliverance" and will be issued next fall. . . . A year ago the J. B. Lippincott company printed "Victories of Army Medicine," by Col. Edgar Erskine Hume. . . . Now Col. Hume is in charge of the Naples district for AMG. . . . He is fighting an epidemic of typhus — the European kind that kills one out of five victims.

SIGRID SCHULTZ REVIEWS "UNFINISHED BUSINESS," BY STEPHEN BONSAL

STORY OF REFUGEES IS GAY AND EXCITING

Making of Peace Involves Some Unfinished Business

"UNFINISHED BUSINESS," by Stephen Bonsal. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.]

Reviewed by Sigrid Schultz.

For every senator, congressman, and diplomat of the United States the book, "Unfinished Business," should be a "must" book. They will be faced with the task of "finishing the business" of a new type of peace guarantees, started a generation ago. Whether one agrees with the need for an international body that will prevent future wars or not is immaterial. But those who will be called upon to decide these questions should be compelled to forget their party blinkers for a while. They should be forced to study Mr. Bonsal's eyewitness report with an open mind.

This recommendation applies also to the numerous groups in our country which are discussing the question of the future peace. They will all have to read with keenness and imagination because Mr. Bonsal banks on the intelligence of his readers. He does not point an accusing finger, he does not preach. He merely records conversations, negotiations, and facts more eloquently than many a tome of men who consider themselves wise and learned and try to create the impression that they alone know how the future can be shaped. After the experiences of the last quarter of a century, we should know the importance of "fact finding" that comes before "theory making." Mr. Bonsal's book is a mine of information for those in quest of facts on which they may be able to build their structure of the future.

Stephen Bonsal.

Most of the author's notes deal with the drafting of the covenant of the league of nations. In the light of what we know now, terms such as the "new order" or the insistence of the Japanese on lengthy discussions about race problems seem specially striking.

Bonsal reveals that Hitler was not the first German commander in chief to rely on "intuition." None other than Gen. Ludendorff used the phrase, "I have the feeling," when short of arguments in the discussion about unrestricted submarine warfare. Count Bernstorff and others were warning him that it might prove dangerous to the German cause to unleash Germany's "steel sharks," her submarines. His "feelings" prevailed in the imperial councils of Germany.

In "Unfinished Business" you can recapture the dramatic atmosphere of the tense days of Paris in 1919 when you read of the struggle of France's great "Tiger," Clemenceau, against "the men of second rate intelligence" who were to try to carry on as his successors—men who were too small to master their own fate and that of their countries.

• • •

You can find one of the answers to the questions, "How was it possible for Germany to rearm so quickly?" in Mr. Bonsal's diaries. He tells of conversations which he had in Berlin in 1919, when he discovered that the free corps of Gen. Von der Goltz, roving thru Finland and the Baltic, managed to escape dissolution for quite a while, thanks to the allies, who saw in them a possible "bulwark against bolshevism." This gave the officers of the free corps time to prepare for the future rearmament of their country.

Hugh Gibson wrote the introduction to the book of the veteran foreign correspondent and war time diplomat, Stephen Bonsal, and he justly warns: "It becomes daily more urgent that we learn to find a safer way amid the old pitfalls, and it is to be hoped that we may profit from Col. Bonsal's objective, straightforward story."

Greek Motif in American Architecture

"GREEK REVIVAL ARCHITECTURE IN AMERICA" by Talbot Hamlin. [Oxford University Press, $7.50.]

Reviewed by Rexford Newcomb.

This very readable book by the librarian of architecture at Columbia university performs an important service in helping to round out the account of our cultural history. Aside from Howard Major's "Domestic Architecture of the Greek Revival" [1926], no comparable attempt has been made to explain the early American love for classical architecture.

It was Thomas Jefferson who first advocated that the architecture of the young American republic be patterned after that of the older republic upon the Tiber. While representing the United States in Paris, Jefferson studied Roman architectural remains on French soil and indeed employed draftsmen to prepare drawings for Roman inspired buildings which he proposed to promote when he returned home.

• • •

Under the leadership of Jefferson and Washington the young republic broke with the building tradition of Georgian England and set a precedent for that classicism which has since characterized American public structures.

But the Roman classicism of Jefferson was not long to prevail for already archaeological research had made the public acquainted with the "inestimable treasures of Hellas" and cultured people were showing a pronounced predilection for the more refined Greek forms. It was this Greek variant of classicism which Benjamin Henry Latrobe, America's first great professional architect, adopted when, in 1798, he designed the bank of Pennsylvania [now demolished] in Philadelphia. The speedy popular approval of this and other Greek inspired works established the Greek revival which became our national architectural style between 1820 and the Civil war.

• • •

It is the story of this important development in American architecture which Mr. Hamlin so logically develops. His procedure is direct. He examines the backgrounds of the classical revival; sketches the rise of American architecture previous to the advent of classicism; then carefully explores the Greek revival as it expressed itself in America.

Rightly, this examination is carried out upon a regional basis, proceeding from the Atlantic seaboard, thru the south, to the old northwest and west. Due attention is given Illinois.

Sullivan's Book Is Likely to Become a Political Text

"BUREAUCRACY RUNS AMUCK," by Lawrence Sullivan. [Bobbs Merrill, $2.]

Reviewed by Walter Trohan.

Here in 318 fact packed pages is the pediatrics of burocracy—gargantuan offspring of government. It treats the complicated structure, yeasty growth, devious methods, selfish aims, and voracious fiscal appetite of bureaus.

This is Mr. Sullivan's fourth book on the subject in a dozen years. As a good newspaper man and able pamphleteer, he would be the last to claim his treatise is definitive, because he is aware that any work on burocracy, like any volume on current history, is somewhat out of date as it rolls from the press.

Nonetheless "Bureaucracy Runs Amuck" is going to play a part, and no minor one, in the coming Presidential campaign. As the campaign unfolds readers of this volume will find its startling facts echoing in political speeches.

Lawrence Sullivan.

He finds that 3,300,000 are now on the civil pay roll, exclusive of the military, judicial, and congressional establishments. This represents one jobholder for every three men in military service and one for every 41 men, women, and children in the nation.

He finds that the cost of government publicity comes to at least $69,200,000 a year; that the federal telephone bill, exclusive of military, runs about $30,000,000 a year; that one cabinet member is a director of 33 federally owned corporations and another has 18 executive order jobs; that federal travel expenses in 1941 were almost $68,000,000; that federal agencies added an average of 110 workers every hour, 24 hours a day, and 7 days a week during 1942, and that bureaus have issued almost as many binding directives as congress has passed laws in its last session.

• • •

Thruout the volume Mr. Sullivan emphasizes that while military services are wading thru blood for victory, burocracy in Washington is digging in for post-war permanency.

The volume reveals President Roosevelt in the role of a major prophet recalling that in a radio address from the state house at Albany, N. Y., on March 2, 1930, he declared: ". . . If we do not halt this steady process of building commissions and regulatory bodies and special legislation like huge inverted pyramids over every one of the simple constitutional provisions, we shall soon be spending many billions of dollars more."

Mr. Sullivan does not spend all his time viewing with alarm; he offers a formula for saving America from the engulfment by burocracy which Mr. Roosevelt glibly foresaw and easily forgot. The formula is return to the constitutional provisions of government thru removal of the ominous burocratic pyramids.

• • •

Mr. Sullivan is confident that America will redeem her heritage of freedom and will remove her paths of achievement and progress, not by making "a new start on untrod paths, but to set our course resolutely by the fixed stars of our bright heritage—human liberty, individual security against aggressions by government, free enterprise, freedom of speech and communication, and unyielding defense of absolute and complete national sovereignty in our relations abroad."

Has Serious Purpose as Undercurrent

"LIBERTY STREET," by I. V. Morris. [Harpers, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

The members of the Literary guild will find themselves transported in "Liberty Street," which is the club's selection for March, to an atmosphere exotic, exciting, and dramatic. In the little Caribbean town of Santa Rosa, fate—the 1943 model which held in her tragic hands so many human souls uprooted — has thrown together as strange a group as any reader could ask for.

There is, as pivot of the emotional action in the book, Marie-Té, Baroness Maria-Theresa Falkenborn, beautiful [of course], strangely and irresistibly happy despite all that has happened to herself and to those she loved — truly "gemütlich" as the Viennese were by nature and by the compulsion of always being called so. She and her 60 year old uncle and her 8 year old brother Bubi have come like many before them on a long journey, with many stops. Theirs is the not uncommon sad saga of hundreds of thousands who dreamed of getting to America to "Liberty Street."

On "Liberty Street" in Brooklyn lives the brother of Nestor Kerjanian, an Armenian who has wandered, one of the dispossessed, since 1918 all over the world. In him hope has given way to bitterness and when he finds in the American minister in Santa Rosa a man who a lifetime before had carelessly insulted him as an inferior, that bitterness becomes the black brew of death.

The American minister, Harrington, is as unpleasant a gentleman as you'd meet, so conscious of his own importance, so innately scornful of any of the unwanted. He motivates the action in the book, as Marie-Té motivates the emotion.

The refugees are all waiting for their visas to go to America, and the book's "message" is plainly a plea for the true refuge which the refugees dream of—an America with welcoming arms.

There is certainly an underlying seriousness to "Liberty Street," but it will be for most readers a gay, exotic, melodramatic tale of an oddly assorted group of rootless humans, who live for today, to forget yesterday, and for whom, even tho tomorrow holds a faint hope, there is no certainty.

• • •

Between Kerjanian and little Bubi there grows a tender affection, the first love that the sad, shabby wanderer has ever known, and when Bubi falls ill and Harrington refuses an emergency visa to Marie-Té, Kerjanian fulfills his destiny and Harrington's. Love comes to Marie-Té also, altho the love motif is a minor one in "Liberty Street."

There is a flavoring of humor as well as of excitement in the swift pages of this tale, which is as truly an "escape" book as you've read.

I. V. Morris is a Chicagoan by birth, but he has never really lived in Chicago. His father was Ira Nelson Morris, long in the diplomatic service. The author says he was "whisked away to Europe still clutching my milk bottle . . . had a home in almost every European country without finding myself at home in any one of them."

He was then "snatched from foreign playgrounds and dumped back in my own America." He went to preparatory school at Milton academy and to Harvard, where he was graduated in 1925.

Sick Children Get Valentines from Mrs. Valentine

By Thalia.

One of the nicest St. Valentine's day parties anywhere, I'm sure, was the one which was given to the sick children at the Children's Memorial hospital, appropriately by Mrs. Valentine. For the last 10 years Mrs. Patrick Valentine, one of Chicago's most distinguished older women, has red lettered the day for the little inmates of one of her favorite charities by giving them a party. This year it was more of a thrill than ever to the children. Every one of the 200 children had one pretty valentine with his or her name unmistakably on it and written on the back, "From Mrs. Valentine."

"Is Mrs. Valentine Mrs. Santa Claus, too?" was a perfectly natural question, because she sent another valentine for each child to send home. And she sent all the ice cream they could eat. And heart-shaped tarts with a warm heart in the middle. One little boy looked at Mrs. Valentine's picture and then at the cakes and said, "Did she make the tarts?" He wasn't so far wrong mistaking her for the Queen of Hearts—she is one of the most regal women Chicago has ever called its own.

This year Mrs. Valentine wasn't at her own party. She spent "Mrs. Valentine's" day quietly—she is no longer young—but probably feeling that the return of her son, Lt. Comdr. Lester Armour, from the Aleutians was as fine a valentine as she could ask for.

In the evening at another favorite charitable institution the hearts of those who have worked for its success were warmed. The board of directors of the Chicago Maternity center gathered with the staff to celebrate the center's 47th birthday and dedicate the Lena K. Witowsky Memorial library. Mrs. Howard Linn had supervised the furnishing and decorating of the room. It now has soft gray-green walls. Gay flowered chintz with a green background hangs at the windows and covers the deep armchairs in the corners. A reproduction of a beautiful 18th century breakfront bookcase against one wall holds the most valuable of the rare reference volumes. A large "bleached blond" reading table is cozily surrounded by chairs done in brown leather.

Reproductions of Audubon prints echo the garden atmosphere of the chintz. The glass door panels are something very special—the work of Mrs. E. Harris Brewer. Mrs. Linn calls them "Jack Frost" windows. The panels were painted and then a design of flowers was worked into the wet paint by Mrs. Brewer, leaving the glass clear. When the paint dried, shellac made the door panels as easy to wash as if they had never been touched, but looking prettier than curtains could have made them.

The evening was important and solemn—with moving speeches by Clark Lawrence, president of the board of directors, and Dr. Beatrice Tucker, volunteer head resident of the center. But there was hilarity, too, because the curtains arrived after the party had begun and every one helped hang them. Mrs. John Andrews King, chairman of the board of directors, was late with the punch and another member of the board, Alfred Cowles, and one of the guests, Albert Madlener, mixed the punch. Pretty Mrs. James Simpson Jr., another of the directors, served it. Her new page boy bob was much admired.

And as if fate wished to remind the guests that the library

Church Women to Mark Lent with World Prayer Day

By Irene Steyskal.

Christianity moves this week into the season of Lent. War burdened thoughts turn to a Man of Peace who, centuries ago, walking the dusty roads of Palestine, found more of beauty in the fresh, sweet chalice of a lily at the wayside than in all the costly luxuries of Solomon's sumptuous court; One who was without possessions yet could leave, as his imperishable bequest to the ages, the golden dream of a brotherhood of man.

• • •

His is a dream transcending boundaries and battle lines, and this first Friday of Lent will see millions of women in every land that has been touched by the Christian precept gathering, as in times of peace, for a world day of prayer. In this country and Canada alone, it is estimated that more than 12,000 interdenominational services will be held. In remote islands of the Pacific where missionaries have carried the gospel of Christ, in China, India, Australia, Burma, the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska women of many races will enter into the common communion of prayer, and there is assurance that there will be groups of Christians even in Japan who will remember the day. Thousands of meetings will be held in England and Scotland and, tho the printed service could not be sent them, many will meet for public prayer in the occupied countries of Europe.

• • •

Here in the Chicago area, 15 interdenominational groups of Protestant women have day long meetings planned to which they have invited women of other faiths. Special interest centers upon the downtown assembly to be held, under auspices of the Women's division of the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, in the Chicago (First Methodist) temple, 33 N. Clark st. Women attending a morning meeting in the temple at 10:30 o'clock will hear Mrs. Julia Lake Kellersberger, noted missionary, writer and speaker, and the afternoon assembly at 1:30 o'clock will be addressed by the Rev. John D. Bodger, Anglican minister and diocesan chaplain to the Episcopal bishop of New Guinea.

• • •

Mrs. Kellersberger is widely known among various Protestant denominations in this country as an outstanding speaker. Her work as a missionary in the Belgian Congo is known to many thru her books, "Congo Crosses," "God's Ravens," "Song after Sorrow" and others, and her motion picture of missionary life. Mrs. Kellersberger was sent to Africa by the Presbyterian mission board. She and her husband are both associated at this time with the board of the American Mission to Lepers. Mrs. Kellersberger was one of the speakers last year for the Chautauqua World Mission week.

Eagerly anticipated by the mothers of sons now fighting in the Pacific war theaters is Dean Bodger's talk. Subdean of the Anglican cathedral at Dogura, New Guinea, the missionary is headmaster of St. Paul's cathedral school there, which has provided many of the native Papuan guides serving the allied armies in New Guinea. Other young natives aiding Gen. MacArthur's men were educated at the 15 Anglican mission stations in the northeast coastal area about Dogura, scene of most of the fighting in New Guinea last summer.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LADDIE isn't a native of the Ozarks. He is what is known in these parts as a "come-here." But no Ozark boy could have more loyalty for these wooded hills than this tall, slim youth with the blue eyes and yellow hair. Perhaps some guardian angel established Laddie's future at his birth 14 years ago. At any rate, there has never been any doubt in Laddie's mind that he wanted to be a farmer. The fact that he chose the Ozarks is a compliment indeed, for Laddie has been over a great deal of these United States. He and his two sisters, one older than himself, one younger, were blessed with wonderfully understanding parents, young, lively, and the sort that can be companions to their children without working at it, if you know what I mean.

Laddie's father was a foreman in a packing plant in Chicago, and the family lived in a suburb southwest of the city. Income was pretty lean thru depression years, but Laddie's mother was and is the world's best dollar-stretcher. Laddie and his sisters have always been well fed, adequately dressed, and have enjoyed the usual suburban good times with other youngsters their age. And their parents believed that they should be given a chance to see America while still young and impressionable.

• • •

In his spare time Laddie's father made a trailer that would accommodate five persons. And come vacation time, away the whole family would go. East, west, north, and south they swung, and in the course of their journeys they discovered the lure of the Ozarks. Farm talk became more serious, but still they were not ready to make a decision.

He turned slowly around to look it all over.

Then, the year before the war, Laddie's father took an extra three weeks off, and for five glorious weeks they trailered thru the far west and northwest, then whisked down thru California and into Mexico. Still they had found no locality that surpassed the Ozarks, and some time last spring they decided they would make the break from the city and really take to the hills.

Intent on buying a farm, Laddie and his parents came down to the Ozarks last summer, Laddie in his blue jeans and cowboy hat and wide leather belt. For days real estate men took them around. Farms near Cabool, West Plains, Willow Springs, and Mountain Grove were investigated. Then the trio came to Mountain View and began looking at farms near Sunrise Mountain farm. They saw the one with the old mill. They saw the one with the big barn and tiny house. Another one with a dry spring. Another with a big house and no pasture land. It was pretty discouraging. Then on the last day before they had to go back to the city a real estate dealer took them out to the Jasper Tyler place.

Laddie got out of the car and stood on a carpet of pine needles in the sloping front yard. He counted the pine trees, nine in all, that towered tall and majestic above the little white frame house. He looked at the wooded valley that swept sharply down from the roadway, at the hills that stretched mile upon mile beyond. He heard the real estate dealer telling his dad that this farm ran down to Ratliff ford, the famous camping spot on Jack's fork, where the river has scooped out a bed scores of feet deep. He saw the Tyler cattle that would go with the place browsing along the lane, snipping leaves from the honeysuckle vine that clambered over the long stone fence.

He turned slowly around to look it all over. Then he spoke quietly:

"We don't need to go any farther, dad. This is it. I feel, I feel that I'd been here before!"

When the farmer came up to see the real estate man and the prospective buyers he was riding a slim-legged bay horse with friendly eyes. The farmer noticed the tall lad in the cowboy getup.

"Want to ride, son?" he asked, dismounting.

• • •

Poor Laddie! He had never been on a horse. He was helped into the saddle and only that long suffering guardian angel knows what fear was in his heart. But when he came back, after a short canter, with eyes shining and cheeks flushed red, every one knew that Laddie had found another reason for wanting to be a farmer.

"Will you sell this horse, Mr. Tyler?" he asked, anxiously.

Mr. Tyler said he would, but, of course, he couldn't go with the farm. He would be "extra." Laddie said nothing, but any one could see he was thinking long, long thoughts.

After the usual bit of haggling an option was taken on the farm and the family went back to the suburbs to sell their house and prepare to move. All Laddie could talk about was the horse he wanted to buy. There was no thought that the parents would buy it for him. It was up to Laddie himself to earn the money for the horse, and he had only two months in which to do it.

Laddie did everything a 14 year old boy could do to earn the largest amount of money in the shortest possible time. He mowed lawns. He hoed victory gardens. He delivered groceries. He rode a bicycle three miles night and morning to help harvest a farmer's crop. And, lowest of all occupations to a 14 year old's mind, he even tended babies while their parents were at the movies.

The family came down to the hills around Labor day time to take over their farm and the stock which went with it. Laddie was the most excited member of the family. He was going to the life he loved and moreover he carried in his pockets his summer's savings to buy the most wonderful horse in the world. He was desperately afraid he didn't have enough money. And even if he could buy the horse, what about saddle and bridle? They, too, cost money. Sometimes he wished that he had asked Mr. Tyler how much he wanted for the horse. And again he was glad he hadn't. If Mr. Tyler had named a great big sum that he could never have gotten together, he wouldn't have had all those wonderful dreams of owning a horse.

Bill, the horse he rides over hill and "holler," is the joy of his life.

And then, all at once, there they were at the farmhouse among the pines, with Mrs. Tyler collecting her stuff to move out, and Mr. Tyler riding around on the beautiful slim-legged bay horse. Laddie leaped from the truck and dashed toward the farmer.

• • •

Out of this pocket and that one he brought crumpled bills and pieces of change. Out of a money belt fastened around his slim waist he brought two 20 dollar bills, smooth and clean. He counted it out, $57.39.

"All right, son," said the farmer. "He's worth a lot more'n that, but y'or paw and me's got along first rate. He's y'or'n."

"The saddle and bridle," said Laddie, hesitatingly.

"Aw, son, I'll jis' throw 'em in!"

Of course, Laddie goes to school. And in addition he does a man's work on the farm, driving cows, taking care of the heifers in the valley, sawing wood, carrying water, tending chickens, and doing the million other things that a tall, active boy can do on a farm. He does all these chores with the gay lighthearted spirit of one doing work he loves. And indeed Laddie loves everything pertaining to this farm in the hills. He loves to throw himself on his stomach and drink from the rock-walled spring in Panther "holler." He loves to start huge rocks rolling down the steep hillsides and listen to them crashing thru tangled underbrush as they gather momentum far below. And most of all he loves all the living things. The cow with the big brown eyes he has named "Vesta May" after his girl friend in the Chicago suburb, honestly feeling that both cow and girl are thus honored. Bill, the horse that he rides over hill and "holler," is, of course, the greatest joy of his life. But Bill is a luxury in these days, when feed is scarce and high in price. And now and then one gets a hint of the worry that must be going on in that 14 year old mind.

• • •

Just before Christmas we were all making gay, foolish wishes as we sat in the yellow lamplight in Laddie's home, watching his mother setting the yeast for the bread she would bake next day. Thinking of the potholders and baking dishes that country stores do not carry, I said:

"I wish for $10 and one hour in a 10 cent store."

Laddie spoke without a smile:

"I wish for $15 and five minutes in a feed store, so I'd have feed to last Bill all winter."

Sick Children Get Valentines at Big Party

was only a charming accessory to the real work of the center, Dr. Tucker was called out on an emergency maternity case.

The board of directors, which numbers 31, includes Mrs. T. Philip Swift as honorary chairman; Mrs. Dexter Cummings, Mrs. Donald A. K. Brown, Mrs. William Brewer Cudahy, John V. Farwell III., Mrs. C. Daggett Harvey, Clarence C. Prentice, Mrs. T. Clifford Rodman, Mrs. Louis F. Swift, Mrs. Samuel J. Walker, and Mrs. Frederick Hampden Winston, all old inhabitants of the social register, from whose pages are composed the directorates of many of Chicago's most open handed philanthropies.

There was something very open handed about two other parties that took place on St. Valentine's day, but they could be counted as philanthropy only to those who laid down their money, for altho millions changed hands, as if by magic they had their millions and more back, plus a wonderful time. Those parties were the matinee performance of "Oklahoma" and the "Famous Chefs" dinner at the Stevens hotel to end the 4th war loan with a bang.

The performance of "Oklahoma"—contributed by the actors—netted a tidy $2,579,325, as Mrs. Walter Wolf, Cook county chairman, announced from the stage, as the last O-O-O-O-Oklahoma was sung. And if you belong to a Princeton family, you've heard that long drawn out O-O-O-O many times at the beginning of "We'll whoop 'er up for naughty eight" or "nineteen forty" or whatever papa's or sonny's class was.

The chefs' dinner at a $1,000 bond per plate, food free, piled up the staggering amount of $15,383,000, what with auction sales of this and that, including the famous chefs' favorite recipes sold by phone.

An original valentine greeting came from our delightful fellow Chicagoan, Dorothy Aldis, who is now living in Washington, where her husband, formerly Capt. Graham Aldis, has just been made a major. She lives in a nice old house in Alexandria, with John L. Lewis incidentally as a neighbor, and Chicagoans are always to be met there. When Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson were in Washington recently, the Aldises had an old home party for them, with the Wayne Chatfield Taylors and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, who grew up in Chicago as Martha Granger. Mrs. Ambrose Cramer was in Chicago visiting her mother, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, for a few days at that time, or she would have been there with Mr. Cramer. Incidentally, Katherine Meeker, Mrs. Horace Gray, was also here for a few days with her parents but left on Tuesday for her home in San Francisco.

Mrs. Aldis has since girlhood been a close friend of Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell, who writes poetry and novels under her maiden name, Marion Strobel, and is co-editor of Poetry magazine, which is sponsoring a distinguished series of lectures for its endowment fund. Mrs. Aldis, of course, can't be here for the lectures, but she sent a check to Mrs. Mitchell for the fund, enclosed in a large red heart on which was written this jingle:

Dear Modern Art Series
For you I give cheeries.
May this check that I sign
Make you mine, make me thine
Valentine.

young minister further fitted himself for his chosen career by studying tropical medicine. He left England in 1928 for Papua to join the New Guinea Anglican mission. In a period of 14 years he opened nine outlying mission stations.

Arduous religious and educational duties could not dim an enthusiasm the dean brought from his native island for athletics, and word from the Pacific indicates that he stands somewhat in the hero role of a minor league Babe Ruth to the younger generation of Papuan lads, he being the moving spirit in setting up an inter-mission program of sports events.

Dean Bodger is on his first home leave in 10 years. His trip to the United States was arranged by Gen. MacArthur as an expression of appreciation for the friendship and help which the dean and the mission have given American men in New Guinea.

During his stay here, Dean Bodger will speak at several meetings of Episcopal clergy and laymen. He is giving a talk Thursday for the clergy roundtable and the women's auxiliary of the diocese, and next week the Catholic club [Episcopal] will hear him at St. Thomas' church, Wabash av. and 38th st.

The World Day of Prayer observance at the Chicago temple Friday will be presided over by Mrs. Howard S. Bechtolt, who has succeeded Mrs. Albert W. Palmer as head of the women's division of the church federation. Mrs. Arthur L. Johnson of Oak Park arranged the two programs for the temple service. In addition to the various meetings in Chicago communities, large services are being planned in Oak Park and Evanston.

Civic Group to Hear of Travelers' Aid Work

A meeting of the joint committee on the Woman's court and Detention home, at 12:15 o'clock Thursday at the Top of the Town restaurant, will bring as guest speaker Miss Florence Walker, terminal supervisor of the Travelers' Aid society. In her talk, entitled, "People and the War as Seen by Travelers' Aid," Miss Walker will tell of the countless new problems confronting her organization because of war conditions. The joint committee, whose efforts are directed at combatting delinquency among women and girls, particularly is interested in the Aid's program of advice and material help given teen age girl travelers.

Feb. 22 Marks Peak of Miami Resort Season

Washington's birthday always has had particular meaning, aside from historical significance, in the Miami area, for it long has been regarded as the peak of the winter season. It will mean the same this year in spite of the many changes the war has brought to this resort. Many of the traditional celebrations surrounding the date will be held, and other important events will take place during the week.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

The Biscayne Bay Yacht club will hold its 58th annual chowder party Tuesday. It was on Washington's birthday in 1887 that pioneer winter residents of this area, living in Coconaut Grove, met for a regatta and picnic, to mark the peak of that winter season. This was nine years before Miami was incorporated. The occasion was such a success that those attending, most of them yacht owners, organized the Biscayne Bay Yacht club. The anniversary of the founding of this oldest club in the Miami area has marked, ever since, one of the happiest traditions here. In peace time the day is celebrated with a regatta to Key Biscayne, accessible only by water, but this year, as last, in concession to gasoline rationing, the anniversary ceremonies will take place at the clubhouse bordering Biscayne bay.

Many navy and army officers and their wives will be among guests, and among members attending will be Mr. and Mrs. Alex Merrill Balfe, she the former Eleanor E. Hutchins of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. William B. Taylor of Highland Park; Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Wilson [the former Cordelia Cole of Lake Forest], and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Cole, who are wintering in Cocoanut Grove, and Mrs. Vivyan Hall, the former Frances Barthell of Evanston, and Mr. Hall.

• • •

Washington's birthday also was celebrated at the Surf club last night with a dinner dance. Red, white, and blue decorations featured the main rooms and patio of the spacious clubhouse, and the pool reflected a huge figure of Washington as well as starlit skies overhead.

The Committee of One Hundred will celebrate the date with its regular weekly forum. Merrill [Red] Mueller, correspondent for Newsweek, survivor of nearly 800 air raids in London and Malta and holder of the Purple Heart, will speak on "Where Do We Go from Here?" Leland Stowe spoke at the forum last Tuesday.

Other traditional celebrations of the week included the annual meeting and picnic of the Fairchild Tropical garden, with addresses by Dr. E. D. Merrill, president of the garden and administrator of botanical collections of Harvard university, and Dr. Thomas Barbour, garden board member and director of the Museum of Comparative Zoology of Harvard.

• • •

Mrs. George Wickersham Ryerson of Winnetka shared honors at a luncheon given during the week by Miss Inez S. McKeown at her home in Miami Shores. Miss McKeown and her father, John C. McKeown, formerly of Hubbard Woods, winter here, and spend their summers at Pentwater, Mich. Mr. McKeown's sons, Kenneth C. and Thomas S. McKeown, live in Evanston, and another son, John L., lives in Winnetka. Mrs. Ryerson is the former Phoebe Massey, and she and Lt. Ryerson, U. S. N., and their children are living near Hollywood while he attends school in Miami.

Mrs. William Bryan Arthur Jr., the former Gayle Menk of Chicago, and Capt. Arthur, U. S. A., are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Arthur, while Capt. Arthur is on an inspection tour of military posts.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 19, 1896.

Dear Julia: I have just come from a visit to the new Young Women's Christian association residence at 288 Michigan av. The formal opening is not to be for two days, but Mrs. Leander Stone, president of the association, suggested I come in any time and see the room which Will and I, with Sandy and Martha, had given money for. I found a few minutes today and am so delighted with everything pertaining to the new building—the location, the architecture, and all arrangements. The lot on which it stands was the home of John B. Drake, who sold the property to the organization when he moved to his new home at 2114 Calumet av. The price, a specially low price, was $40,000, and the women got this paid in eight years, Mrs. Stone told me today. The lot so rapidly increased in value that by the time they were ready to build they were able to borrow $125,000 on it to begin building. This amount will be paid back in 10 years at 5 per cent interest. The fine building which is to be opened this week cost $135,000, so the entire property is valued at more than $200,000. Isn't that an achievement for a group of women to boast of? We'd think men who accomplished it had done pretty well.

John M. Coulter.

The building is most attractive and commands a fine view of the lake. Seven stories high, it contains 300 rooms. The basement is devoted to the employment bureau, gymnasium, and classrooms, besides the service rooms. The first floor has beautifully furnished parlors, a library, with well filled bookcases, and a commodious dining room and offices. On the second floor there is a large assembly room and several bedrooms, while the rest of the building is occupied by bedrooms.

Mrs. Leander Stone, who for 20 years has dreamed of and worked for this result, said that it is the largest building of its kind in the world with the possible exception of one in Philadelphia. There is the Margaret Louise home in New York, in which I know you are interested, but it isn't so large, I believe, as this. Such residences are needed for girls who come to the city from out of town to make their fortunes. It is a great protection for them to live in a home backed by a strong Christian organization. Employers and others who might impose on girls living in private homes hesitate to do anything which might bring even a query from the association's officers.

The best known people in the city have contributed to the furnishing of the rooms and in many instances the room doors will bear the names of those who have given the furnishings. Will and I preferred not to have our names on the room we furnished.

Associated with Mrs. Stone in the work of the board are Mrs. W. W. Allport, Mrs. A. L. Coe, Mrs. W. W. Wilcox, Mrs. J. G. Parker, Mrs. F. B. Meyers, Mrs. A. S. Chamberlain, and Miss M. E. True. Miss True, of an old Chicago family, is the treasurer and a most efficient one.

At the Y. W. C. A. residence I found my lovely friend, Mrs. John M. Coulter, of Lake Forest. Her husband has been president of Lake Forest college, but has just resigned to become the head of the botany department of the University of Chicago. Prof. Coulter is a botanist of national reputation and President Harper has long coveted him for his new university, but Lake Forest college was loath to let him go, so his acceptance has been delayed. I don't know who will succeed him in the Lake Forest institution. It will be hard to replace him, for, in his short regime there, he has been most successful, the number of students having increased, and the educational standards having been raised.

And now, with, love, I am your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

The Y. W. C. A. building, opened in 1896 at 288 Michigan av. [old number], is still owned by the organization, but is no longer a residence for girls, having been leased as a hotel, known as the 830 S. Michigan hotel.

Miss Grace Coulter, president of the Eleanor association, is a daughter of Prof. John M. Coulter; Merle C. Coulter, a son, is a professor of botany at the University of Chicago.

Mementoes of Paderewski.

Roman Reinowski, Berwyn, Ill., writes of many articles which once belonged to the great pianist, Paderewski, now on exhibition at the Polish Roman Catholic Union museum, 984 Milwaukee av.; his piano; his small silk hat; his watch, which plays one bar of the Paderewski minuet at a certain hour. Mr. Reinowski tells us that this museum, which collects articles bearing on the history of Poles in the United States, is to hold an exhibition of stamps beginning Friday evening and continuing thru next Sunday.

More Verses Wanted.

Mrs. F. D. Reynolds, S. River dr., Stevens Point, Wis., writes: "The response you always receive to your requests for old songs prompts me to ask for words of an old song my brother used to sing to a guitar accompaniment when I was a small girl. It began, as nearly as I can remember: 'Just a little sunshine, just a little rain.'" From Marshalltown, Ia., comes a request for two old verses. Mrs. Elmer B. Hoadley writes: "Where can I find [a] 'The Old Speckled Hen,' beginning 'Dear Uncle Ben, I take my pen,' and [b] 'This is east and this is west of the land I love best.'" Has any reader any of these verses?

Adams st. Michael L. Rosinia, head of the ordinance enforcement division of the City of Chicago law department, who is to be guest speaker, will discuss "A Christian's Observance of Judaism." Music will be provided by Miss Rita Wolfson, violinist, and the B'nai B'rith Young Women's choral group under the direction of Mrs. Lilyan Sacks.

Another Jewish group gathering this week for an interfaith program, is the Lincoln lodge No. 22 of the United Order of True Sisters. Mrs. Wendell Green, well known Negro educator, and May Willens, blind pianist, will share the program, to be presented at 1:30 p. m. Friday in the clubrooms at the Fine Arts building. Mrs. Benjamin Gasul is in charge of arrangements.

At Friday's gathering, Mrs. Morris Helperin and Mrs. Benjamin Newton will announce plans for the lodge's rummage sale, proceeds from which will go into the organization's medical fund at the Mount Sinai hospital. Costly medication at the hospital is furnished by the lodge to clinic patients, and the group also binds medical journals for use by interns and physicians in the hospital library. Mrs. Herbert Kohn is lodge president, and Mrs. Isadore Nachman is chairman of the hospital work.

Tribune Fashion Contest Entries Show a Big Gain

Interest in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S 1944 American Fashions contest reached a new high level last week. The contest selections board, attributing the rise in part to the gradual approach of deadline for filing entries, reported that the increase in weekly volume of applications from prospective competitors was marked. At the same time it pointed out that prospective entrants still have ample time for executing designs before the May 1 deadline.

The selections board announced that one of the additional factors enhancing interest in the contest is the challenge embodied in its dual theme: "What American Women Will Wear in War and Peace."

Prizes totaling $5,000, a greater purse of awards than was offered in last year's competition, will be awarded in the 1944 contest. There are two grand prizes, $2,000 for first place and $1,000 for second place.

Prospective entrants should address requests for rules and entry blanks to "American Fashions Competition, The Chicago Tribune, 435 N. Michigan av., Chicago 11, Ill."

Amazing Cough Relief, Mixed In Your Kitchen
Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.
Yes, ma'am, right in your own kitchen, you can easily mix a cough medicine that is a wonder for quick results, and gives you about four times as much for your money. And it's no trouble—a child could do it.
You'll need a syrup. Make it by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Now get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, and pour it into a pint bottle. Then add your syrup. There you have a full pint of really remarkable medicine for coughs due to colds. It lasts a family a long time, and tastes fine—children love it.
You'll say this beats anything you ever tried. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases the soreness, and lets you rest at night.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Mrs. George Poulos, the former Miss Jeanne Rehfeld, was married recently in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Rehfeld, in Wilmette. She will make her home in Colorado Springs, Colo., where Tech. Sgt. Poulos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Poulos of Galesburg, Ill., is stationed with the army medical corps. The bride was graduated from Colby Junior college and from Knox college, and Sgt. Poulos was graduated from Knox and from Cornell university.

Chicagoans Socially Active at Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

The Everglades club will celebrate Washington's birthday with a special dinner-dance with patriotic decorations and music. It was in the old days that the Washington birthday ball at the Royal Poinciana was the ultimate in the social life of the colony. It was a charity ball, and any lowly possessor of a $10 bill and evening clothes could attend. As time went on private clubs were organized and exclusiveness and privacy became the social watchwords of Palm Beach.

With the mercury soaring and the season reaching its meridian, the theme song of Palm Beach is one which seems vaguely familiar—"Happy days are here again."

The Chicago colony continues to see and to be seen at all the smart parties. Dining out is one of the most popular diversions, as the domestic staff situation continues critical.

• • •

"What are you going to do Wednesday?" some one asked Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau. "Wednesday? O, on that day I'm having a new cook," she replied. Many large homes have been closed in favor of hotel suites or small apartments, while restaurants and clubs are enjoying a huge patronage.

The only person in Palm Beach who seems to be serene about the cook situation is Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, writer and lecturer, who has explored jungles and wild lands but has never ventured far into her kitchen. She brought her cook with her to the Lake court apartments. Said cook has been with Mrs. Seton a matter of 30 years.

The Bath and Tennis club, which is immensely popular with Chicagoans, has a clever way of getting around the coupon business. Last year its astute executive secretary, R. O. Middleton began the raising of chickens in wire cages. Begun as an experiment, the scheme was immediately successful. This year Mr. Middleton has added rabbits. These, too, are raised in wire cages, their feet never touching the ground. They are ready for the table when about eight weeks old. Fed scientifically, they mature rapidly, but are tender and succulent and much in demand. The club serves roast beef as a special treat on Sundays, but the odd thing is that many prefer rabbit, or, as it is dubbed, New Zealand veal. The rabbits are served sauteed, fried, in a stew or fricasseed.

Mrs. Paul Healy, wearing a filmy black evening gown with white sequined jacket, entertained at the backgammon dinner at the Everglades club having many from Chicago in the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan entertained at a dinner party at the Beach club, while Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy had guests at the buffet froid luncheon at the Beach club.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Mansfield entertained during the cocktail hour at the Whitehall, having as guests Mrs. R. A. Cavenaugh, Mrs. John Bowen of Chicago, and the George Uihliens of Milwaukee.

The secretary of state and Mrs. Cordell Hull, at the Whitehall, have remained entirely in seclusion. The great hotel has a mammoth south porch on which the sun shines brightly all day long, and it is here that Mr. Hull is usually to be found, soaking up the sunshine.

Mrs. Albert A. Sprague of Chicago is the guest of her sister, Mrs. John C. King, at her villa in Middle rd. Mrs. A. Harris Whiting is the guest of Mrs. Oscar Johnson. Mrs. Charles W. Pflager of Evanston is the house-guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Paulson at Ocean Edge on the North Ocean blvd.

Mr. and Mrs. James Norris arrived this week to occupy a maisonette at the Everglades club until early March. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard are at the Brazilian court.

WED RECENTLY

Mrs. Leonard Gordon was married recently at the Covenant club to Cadet Gordon, who is stationed at Cornell university under the army specialized training program. She is the former Miss Lillian Charlotte Shanoff, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Shanoff of North Bernard street. Both she and her husband, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Gordon of West Van Buren street, attended Northwestern university.

American Poet to Be Guest of Literary Club

That poetic moods in the sweep of American history westward across the great plains will pervade the afternoon for Friends of American Writers when they gather Friday in the Cordon is indicated with the announcement that the guest speaker at the meeting will be John G. Neihardt, one of the literary circle's family of prize winners.

Dr. Neihardt is the author of five volumes of narrative poetry, "Cycle of the West," whose Homeric quality and content place the work, in the opinion of the Yale Review, with world literature. More integral to this country's past, the critics say, are Neihardt's "songs" than were the events of The Aeneid to the Romans or the Arthuriad to the Britons.

• • •

For his "Song of the Messiah," one of the cycle, the National Poetry center in 1936 designated Dr. Neihardt as the foremost American poet, awarding him its gold scroll medal of honor, and that volume also won him the Friends of American Writers' annual prize.

Sharpsburgh, Ill., was Dr. Neihardt's birthplace, but most of his childhood was spent in the home of pioneering grandparents, first in northwest Kansas, later in Nebraska. The boy's hunger for books his family was too poor to buy for him is reminiscent of the story of young Abraham Lincoln. Neihardt's first cherished volume was a paper bound copy of "Idylls of the King," procured as a premium for soap wrappers.

• • •

At one time or another the poet has been farm hand, hobo, bookkeeper, school teacher, reporter, restaurant porter, and university professor, each occupation serving to widen horizons of the America he was to paint in the color and music of words.

The afternoon will close with a tea which Mrs. Thomas F. Charlton will plan with a committee composed of Mrs. R. W. Gerding, Mrs. E. A. Henne, Mrs. B. A. Orr, Mrs. Herbert Schactner, and Mrs. Albert H. Vondenbosch.

Phoenix Guests See Sights Via Horse Power

By Ruth Dickinson.

The horse is again king in Arizona and most of the real fun is connected with a ride over the desert, be it on an old and trustworthy cow pony or a prancing palomino. PHOENIX, ARIZ. They both get you there over the rocks and arroyas, which is what really matters. Several Chicagoans were in the group of guests from the Camelback inn who rode over to the Valley Hereford ranch last Monday to attend an outdoor barbeque and sale. The old western hospitality still exists at these sales—a whole steer barbecued, plenty of hot coffee and food for everyone all day long. Among the riders were Mr. and Mrs. John Jennings, Leo Merrion and the John Ryans and young John Jr.

The Charles T. Foleys and their small daughter Mickey have returned to the inn for the season and already are losing the pale city look and acquiring a most becoming suntan. Mrs. Donald McMurray has joined her sister, Mrs. Addison Holton of Detroit, and the Frank Thomases have joined the John Lyle Vettes. Both Mr. Thomas and Mr. Vette were in the men's putting contest on Friday which was won by a former Chicagoan, Daniel C. Green. Mrs. O. Nordahl Hoel was the runner-up in the ladies putting contest. Mrs. Hoel is a "southpaw" and there being no "southpaw" putter available she used a right hand putter so is being awarded a gold cup for her prowess .

Between tennis, picnics, and riding it has been a busy week at the Jokake inn. In spite of the cold—it has been one of these "unusual" weeks—the Clarence Randalls, the Rollin D. Woods, and the David Irwins decided on a supper ride and built a fire out in the desert to cook hamburgers and boil coffee. There is some magic about a moonlight night on the desert, a camp fire, good comradeship, and food.

Then on Saturday noon the new outdoor grill and picnic ground at the foot of Camelback mountain was christened. Over a hundred guests climbed up the mountain to the foremost rock used as a fireplace and again the reward was a plentiful supply of juicy hamburgers. The piece de resistance was cracked crab for everyone which the Lawrence Calverts of Seattle had shipped out. The real thrill of the day was watching Jane Cheney, Peggy Strale, Mrs. Paul Russell, and Louis Volpe climb over the boulders and cacti to the very top of the mountain. At least, Mrs. Russell made the top but the others couldn't quite make that last leap upward.

The Richard O'Haras have returned to the Biltmore for their yearly visit and have with them a group of their friends, which makes for a merry time, whether it's riding, picnics, golf, swimming, or just lying on the sand down at their cabanas. With the O'Haras are the Pat Joyces, Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow Purdy and their daughter, Mrs. John Duffy, and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Landreth. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forgan are staying at the Biltmore on their first Arizona visit.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cummings and their daughter, Beatrice, are also at the Biltmore on their first Arizona visit. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturgis of New York arrived on Monday. Mrs. Sturgis was formerly Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne of Chicago and spends every winter in Phoenix, where she has many friends. On Tuesday Mrs. Taylor Strawn entertained at cocktails in her home on Lafayette road for both Mrs. Sturgis and Mrs. Frederick Woodruff. Mrs. Rollin Keyes has joined a group of her St. Louis friends for a six weeks' stay. John Llewellyn is here for his yearly visit. Judge and Mrs. John O'Connell and their daughter, Adelyn, have arrived and are among the enthusiastic desert riders.

Among the week's arrivals are Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Foster and Mrs. Julius Miner and her small daughter. Mrs. Warren Lamson and her daughter, Mrs. Warner M. Washburne, are arriving the first of the week for an extended visit and also to see Mrs. George Locke [Virginia Lamson], who was married recently and is now living permanently in Phoenix. A group of friends gathered at a cocktail party Friday night to say good-by to Mrs. Otis Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald. The party was given at the Biltmore by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ravenscroft. Other guests were Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Hammond, Capt. and Mrs. John Cavanaugh, Mrs. Frederick Schaaf, and James Offield.

Three New Art Exhibitions on View in City

By Éleanor Jewett.

Of the three new exhibitions which have recently opened in Chicago galleries that at the Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., has by far the greatest proportion of acceptable and even brilliant paintings. The artists represented there are Edwin M. R. Weiner of Beloit, Wis., who has come to painting the hard way, having been a hydraulic engineer until he was past 40; Arnold E. Turtle, and the late George Ames Aldrich.

The second show, from the standpoint of the number of pleasant pictures involved, is that which hangs in the Marshall Field galleries. Frances Foy, Hoyer, Julia Thecla, and Rainey Bennett contribute the most intriguing paintings in this show.

The last of the new exhibits is in the Room of Chicago Art at the Art institute where a group of works sponsored by the Society for Contemporary American Art is being shown. The show is quickly run thru and only four canvases appear to be of much consequence. Of these Salcia Bahnc's "Head of a Woman" is the finest. Next in interest is the self-portrait of Charles Sheeler, "The Artist Looks at Nature." He may, we reflect, be looking at it, but what he is definitely engaged upon painting is a door. Copeland Burg has a trim still life and Medard Klein has an abstraction in rather charming colors.

• • •

The exhibit in the Marshall Field galleries will continue to March 5. Frances Foy is represented by an adorable portrait of a little girl, "Julie," one of the simplest and sweetest portraits of a child you will find in many an exhibit. She also offers a still life in a modern vein, very much out of character with her customary genius, and a beautiful arrangement, "White Petunias." Hoyer has several delicious and imaginative little landscapes, each a page from a fairy story. Julia Thecla again shows her fascinating dream with a white rabbit on skates among a group of other fantastic characters, and an excellently drawn ballet dancer. Rainey Bennett offers several vigorous water colors of which the finest is "Dark Mountains."

• • •

The exhibition at the Chicago galleries, 215 N. Michigan av., is a good show. The portraits by Edwin M. R. Weiner are particularly fine. The paintings of children are delightful, curt, true, alive, and colorful. His portraits of young girls are charming and when it comes to an older man or two, or to a mature woman, he again brings off one successful painting after another. Mr. Weiner did not begin painting till after he was 40, so his brilliant use of the brush is that much more remarkable. He has studied with Wayman Adams but there is nothing of Mr. Adams in his style or technique. Mr. Weiner has developed his own approach, for which those who enjoy spirited, live portraiture that includes a good likeness will be deeply grateful. His exhibit is well worth seeing.

• • •

The little room at the Chicago galleries is hung with the poetic landscapes and romantic figure studies of Arnold E. Turtle. Mr. Turtle has a way of suggesting hidden beauty that is intriguing and his notes on Florida and New Orleans make one keen to haunt those places. Mr. Turtle has been known to make a little street in Evanston sing; he has a most amazingly romantic brush. At times one wishes he would widen his palette and break the tranquil shadow of his scenes with a penetrating flash of hot sun, but on the whole one fares well with this artist. He used, if you remember, to paint watersides and boats. Unfortunately, the present show is restricted to landscapes and figure paintings, these last warmly done, but somehow missing the touchstone of impetuous sparkle.

Clubwomen to Hear Talk on Insurance

Finance translated into terms of feminine interest tops the program offerings of two groups that have meetings scheduled on this week's club calendar. The Women's Finance forum will hear another lecture in a series by Dr. Alfred P. Haake, industrial economist, Thursday night, and the Chicago Woman's Aid has Howard Berolzheimer of Northwestern university listed for an insurance talk on the following day at a Finance for Women breakfast.

Mrs. Lorraine L. Blair. [Town House Photo.]

The forum members and their guests will meet in the restaurant of the Stevens building, 16 N. Wabash av. Dinner is set for 6:30 o'clock, and Dr. Haake will speak at 7:30. "Taxes, the Invisible Dictator" will be the theme of his talk. The forum is headed by Mrs. Lorraine L. Blair, who will preside.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Dude Ranches Offer Scenery, Western Fun

By Mildred Peterson.

WICKENBURG, Ariz.—Want a thrill? No, I didn't say a spill—altho you ma yhave both here on a dude ranch in Arizona. There's no thrill in all the world to compare with an early morning canter over desert trails just as the first fiery streaks of sunrise flame across the eastern sky; unless it be a climb up a canyon bridle path to the top of some nearby mountain to watch the sun sink in a blaze of color beyond the western hills.

Here at the many ranches near Wickenburg, which is called the "dude ranch capital of the world," you will enjoy such experiences as well as many others in these wide open spaces. Wickenburg, located on the Hassayampa river 54 miles west of Phoenix in the Valley of the Sun on the Santa Fe railroad, was named for Henry Wickenburg, who discovered the gold laden Vulture mine, 11 miles south. While the town itself has only a population of around 2,000, the visitors at the numerous guest ranches nearby make it seem much larger.

• • •

The guest season usually runs from October until May or June and this year, due to the growing popularity of life in the open, where the sun shines almost every day and it never snows and seldom rains, reservations should be made far in advance. Many ranches are now taking reservations for March and April.

If you are planning a late spring or summer vacation the ranches somewhat north, near Prescott, are suggestions. Some of these have a year 'round season but at their 5,000 foot elevation the temperature is considerably lower than that near Phoenix or Tucson.

Arizona's varied climes and altitudes offer ranch life the year 'round. In the fall and winter months when cold weather comes to the mountains, the ranches on the desert and in the broad sunny valleys are the usual choice of the northerners in order that they may ride and delax in the sun. During the summer months, ranches in the mountain regions offer rest and relaxation in cool refreshing breezes.

Such vacation spots offer the incomparable freedom of western ranch life with riding, swimming, tennis, pack trips, roundups, rodeos, and branding as fascinating and unforgettable experiences. If you choose real cattle ranches you will have the opportunity of riding the range and working along with the regular cowhands.

• • •

Ranch clothes are no problem. In addition to your vacation wardrobe, you will need blue jeans, a flannel shirt or two, a sweater and windbreaker, and don't forget a pair of work gloves and sun glasses. As to boots—either cowboy or eastern riding boots, if you have them or can afford to spend a shoe coupon, or even sneakers or golf shoes if they offer a firm grip in the stirrup.

Newcomers to the desert ranches are invariably fascinated by the many types and blossoms of cacti, and especially the giant of all, the saguaro [pronounced sah-wah-ro], which rises far above all others on the desert and resembles a branched candelabra in appearance. It grows nowhere else in the United States and is the largest, oldest, and most important cactus in Arizona.

Designer Puts Artistic Accent on Fine Details

By Rea Seeger.

Everything you expect in exquisite details, fine workmanship, the finest of fabrics and handwork, the equal of pre-war French creations, will be found in the spring collection of Sophie originals. Suits with virtually inimitable elegance and simplicity of design, skilfully designed and seamed afternoon and town dresses, day time and street clothes, and ensembles of definite distinction are included. And the collection is just as breathtaking to the discriminating spectator as were the lush collections of former days.

If anything, these current creations surpass all others. Because of the resourcefullness of the designer, the limitations have served as a challenge to be met with the utmost confidence by an enterprising, fertile mind and imagination. For it is in such a collection that shoppers are assured of true American genius, for fine detail, handwork, dash, and imagination are abundant here in this country, without the stimulation of foreign influence. These originals again click!

• • •

All the designers have availed themselves of silk shantung, but in this collection you'll see two and three colors combined with a dramatic effectiveness. Surah is used not only as effective contrast with the dull crepe of blouses, gilets or vestees, but in crisp, snappy street suits featuring small checks and criss-cross plaids. Black sheer and black lace are revived to make some of the seductive black afternoon, short evening, and dinner frocks. French prints are used with artistry and imagination in suits, in the all-American favorite of jacket and dress team, and in town and afternoon classics for a late spring or summer day.

Suits and ensembles of fine summer and spring woolens are specialties. They are spartanly simple, but with that greatly appreciated elegance and dress parade manner. Coats, too, have a dress parade flavor, yet doubly convincingly for all-purpose wear, whether they are fashioned of wool or stiff silk bengaline. Ensembles of wool coat lined with the same print as the dress sound rather classic, but they're teamed with dash and snap, and the slim simple coats have unusual dressmaker details.

• • •

Spring and summer print dresses are exceptionally effective because of the unusual colors and the amusing printed patterns. All of the dresses are cut with rationed sleeves, and there are many stunning costumes featuring dress and companion short jacket of these all-silk prints. Vivid colors dramatized with black or dark colored printed patterns, and many delightful pastels and neutral prints also are made into these wearable, practical two piecers, and are well worth the price marks on the tags.

New and distinctively designed hats have been presented with this collection: new shapes, outlines, brimmed and brimless, featuring new spring and summer materials in chalk white, gay vivid colors and the high hues of red and green. With them costumes become flawless ensembles of matched beauty.

Sketched are four of the new originals, a small part of this outstanding collection. All are available in a smart Chicago shop. For further information call Superior 0200.

NO GREATER Loneliness

To live in the same house with the man you love . . . and yet be miles apart! That is the greatest loneliness! A revealing story every wife should read!

THE silence in the living room was so deep that the ticking of the small desk clock sounded loud and sharp . . . the way it does in the middle of a sleepless night. That—and the rustle of Rod's newspaper were the only sounds in the room since dinner.

Bitterly, Enid remembered the happy evenings they once had shared. Now they shared nothing but the same roof . . . What had come between them?

DOCTORS KNOW that too many women still do not have up-to-date information about certain physical facts. And too many, who think they know, have only half-knowledge. So they still rely on ineffective or dangerous preparations.

You have a right to know about the important medical advances made during recent years in connection with this intimate problem. They affect every woman's health and happiness.

And so, with the cooperation of doctors who specialize in women's medical problems, the makers of Zonite have just published an authoritative new book, which clearly explains the facts. (See free book offer below.)

YOU SHOULD, however, be warned here about two definite threats to happiness. First, the danger of infection present every day in every woman's life. Second, the most serious deodorization problem any woman has . . . one which you may not suspect. And what to use is so important. That's why you ought to know about Zonite antiseptic.

USED IN THE DOUCHE (as well as for a simple everyday routine of external protection) Zonite is both antiseptic and deodorant. Zonite deodorizes, not by just masking, but by actually destroying odors. Leaves no lasting odor of its own.

Zonite also kills immediately all germs and bacteria on contact. Yet contains no poisons or acids. No other type of liquid antiseptic-germicide is more powerful, yet so safe. Your druggist has Zonite.

Household Forum

by LOUISE BARGELT

[Have you any household help that lightens labor or saves on materials? Is there any convenience you can enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

Mrs. George B., Chicago: I am doing my own window cleaning these days and I find I can clean dirt and dust out of corners of sash easily if I whittle a stick to a sharp point and use it for the purpose.

• • •

Helen H., Valparaiso, Ind.: My husband and I removed some old wall paper which had been varnished. It was hard to remove until we rubbed the surface down with coarse sandpaper. Then we soaked it with water and it came off. Sand paper is good to use if your wallpaper has been treated with any non-absorbent material to make it water resistive.

• • •

Mrs. Fred H., Lima, O.: I use the empty spool and container which has held adhesive tape as a parking place for absorbent cotton. This makes a good dispenser.

• • •

Mrs. Elmer R., Appleton, Wis.: When I want to wash rice quickly and well I use an egg beater, after placing rice in a large bowl with plenty of water. This is better, I think, than placing it in a sieve and pouring water over it. After I have beaten it thoroly I rinse it and it is ready to be cooked.

"If you know . . ." an old-time Swedish family, you probably already know how RY-KRISP is made...for the recipe is traditional Scandinavian! First, the dough of pure whole rye, salt and water is whipped until it's light and fluffy. Next, the feather-light dough is rolled into thin sheets, which are crisp-baked to bring out the full, rich rye flavor and to give Ralston's RY-KRISP its famous toasted crispness. As the sheets of dough go through baking ovens, they are sliced and imprinted with the name "RY-KRISP." And how tasty it is . . . and how good for you...because this 100% WHOLE grain bread is a good source of phosphorus and iron, and just about all the Vitamin B1 of whole rye. Ask your Grocer for this all-purpose bread!

Primp at your dressing table all you like...but remember, there's no hope of real charm, UNLESS there's that indefinable something about you...that assurance of personal daintiness at ALL times! So why not follow thousands of Americans who are drinking a cup of OVALTINE night and morning? It's wonderful for radiant morning freshness and vigorous days! That's because OVALTINE is a scientific FOOD-concentrate designed to foster sound sleep without drugs, and to help build-you-up as you sleep. Drink delicious OVALTINE night and morning . . . this famous 'building' food-drink can help you feel and look more sparklingly bright! Ask Grocers or Druggists for OVALTINE!

Don't forget there's an attack launched against your hands every day in winter . . . and remember that sheer hose won't give your legs much protection! Both wind and cold have a roughening, reddening and chapping effect . . . so you'd better put up a Protective Defense NOW! Just enlist PACQUINS Hand Cream . . . for what could be more helpful than this cream developed first for doctors' and nurses' hands? Theirs, you know are in and out of water from 30 to 40 times a day...and the cream that protects their hands can certainly be depended on to aid you in keeping the skin of your hands, wrists and legs from becoming chapped and red looking! Ask for PACQUINS at Drug, Department and 10c Stores!

Short Cut To Loveliness!

You've a sudden, an important business or social date . . . you're put to it to get there on time . . . and yet you've no time to go to a beauty parlor for a "pick-up" the occasion clearly demands! Well, lady,—don't moan about it . . . just get busy with that 8-minute short-cut to loveliness! It's the EDNA WALLACE HOPPER White Clay Pack I've been telling you about . . . just pat on over face and throat, allow it to dry in 8 minutes and then wash off. You'll be amazed at the radiant, YOUNG look you have . . . for HOPPER'S Clay Pack has helped "de-flake" aging and discolored top-skin to reveal the more youthful, blush-lovely skin beneath! Ask for this pack at Drug, Department or 10c Stores . . . keep it on hand ALWAYS for sudden emergencies!

Troubled Over Nothing?

If you nod your head . . . then you don't need this tip! But if you find yourself frequently in an embarrassed fret, then maybe this is one of the reasons . . . and its cure! Maybe you have that sinking sensation every time friends look into the toilet bowls in your home... for the stain from iron and other minerals found in the hard water in your community probably keeps them darkened. So why not try the PROVEN cure for such embarrassing troubles and unnecessary explanations? Just enlist SANI-FLUSH...it works CHEMICALLY to remove the most stubborn stains with no bother of scrubbing, no need for smelly disinfectants! Use SANI-FLUSH twice a week and see how easily and quickly this powder rewards with sparklingly clean toilet bowls! Removes a cause of toilet odors, too! Your Grocer has SANI-FLUSH, the all-in-one toilet sanitation BUY-LINE...just follow directions on the can!

don't forget! It may seem early for you to think of Easter Cards, but if you have a boy or a girl serving overseas, now is the time for you to make your selections and get them into the mail! All dealers featuring RUST CRAFT CARDS have a marvelous collection...so stop in the shops tomorrow to see them! It always seems to me that greeting cards are at their loveliest at Eastertime . . . they'll be like a breath of Spring to our loved ones overseas this year. Let's be sure to get them off on time!

Think of the rosy, slightly golden glow of a new-ripe peach . . . and you'll have the idea of its delightful namesake,—YARDLEY'S "Deep Peach" English Complexion Powder. It's wonderful for "toning" your winter complexion into a lovely, fresh and Spring-like flush ...blended perfectly to go with both blonde and brunette skins. Cost is $1 a box at finer shops everywhere. There are 7 other enchanting YARDLEY shades...all with the "mist-blown" smoothness that has made them such favorites!

Check . . . and then double check among all cigarette brands,—and I'll bet you won't find one that's a SMARTER cigarette for SMART women than VICEROYS! Why? . . . why you already know the answer! They're provided with a round, smooth filter tip that screens off so many tobacco irritants from the fragrant smoking blend...holds tobacco crumbs IN your cigarette instead of letting them scatter through your purse . . . gives a firm "mouthpiece," rather than the usual paper which may blot off your lipstick! Ask your Tobacconist for VICEROY Cigarettes and learn real smoking pleasure!

Skilful Cooking Saves Nutrients of Vegetables

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Vegetables may be prepared so that they are just vegetables, or they may be cooked so that they are colorful, interesting in texture and flavor, and retain their vitamins well.

You can tell a good cook by the vegetables she brings to her table. She may bake cakes light as a feather, and pastry which is flaky and tender, but if her vegetables are overcooked, off color or served lukewarm instead of steaming, she's a careless cook. It is far more important, from a dietary standpoint, to be careful in cooking vegetables, than to bake a perfect cake.

The modern, vitamin preserving way of cooking vegetables is in a very small amount of water, with a cover on the pan, for the shortest time possible.

Homemakers were just getting used to cooking vegetables in the pressure saucepan when the war came along and aluminum and stainless steel had more important missions than helping out in the kitchen. Those of us who have these cookers are fortunate, for it is possible to cook a vegetable so quickly by this means that color, texture, and vitamin retention are well near perfect. And the flavor of the vegetable is far superior to that of the same vegetable prepared in a less efficient manner.

• • •

Lacking a pressure saucepan, a heavy utensil with a tight fitting cover is to be recommended. What about cauliflower, brussels sprouts, cabbage and other strong flavored vegetables? I can hear some cook ask. Most of us were taught to cook strong flavored vegetables in a large amount of water, in an open kettle, so that objectionable cooking odors might go off in steam. But this method wastes vitamins and also minerals which may be drained away with the cooking water. If a strong flavored vegetable is cooked quickly enough it doesn't have time to develop unpleasant odor or flavor. The rule for cooking quickly in a small amount of boiling water still obtains.

The vegetable should be served in the cooking water, if possible. If it is necessary to drain it off, this cooking liquid should be collected in a glass jar and stored in the refrigerator for use in soups and sauces, for it contains dissolved minerals from the vegetable, and oftentimes, a considerable amount of flavor. Now that milk is a short commodity, collected vegetable cooking water serves a valuable purpose in making white sauces for creamed dishes of all kinds.

Vitamins don't like air, so in addition to keeping the cooking utensil covered, a cook should remember not to stir in any air while the vegetable is cooking.

• • •

Vitamin and mineral losses are high when vegetables are prepared in advance of cooking time. It is wasteful to pare the potatoes or scrape the carrots and let them stand in water for an hour or so before cooking. The procedure may save time, but at the cost of food nutrients and some flavor.

Another factor in causing vitamin and mineral losses is cutting a vegetable into small pieces for cooking. It is much better to cook it whole, and in the case of potatoes or beets, in the skin. Many of the nutrients lie next to the skin and may be lost in parings.

The old practice of adding a pinch of soda to a cooking vegetable to retain bright color is vigorously denounced by nutritionists. It destroys vitamins and also causes a kind of decomposition in the vegetable itself. A carefully cooked green vegetable retains its bright color without any foreign addition.

The final suggestion I have about preparing vegetables concerns freshness. The shorter the time from garden to dinner plate, the better the vegetable, from nutritional and flavor angles. And once prepared, a vegetable should be served promptly, for if it must wait to come to table, it has time to deteriorate in quality.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Did you ever really stop to consider how incredibly dirty hair gets? Consider how black your hands and face would be if they went unwashed for a week or two. Then consider that the hair shafts, coated as they are with some oil, gather unto themselves even more dirt than the skin does. Consider, too, that every hour, every day the scalp exudes waste matter, to say nothing of perspiration. The state of hair, except during the immediate period that follows the shampoo, doesn't make a pretty picture.

And curiously enough it's something women don't take into consideration. Too many of us go too long between shampoos—and even the most fastidious of us sometimes fails to realize that hair needs its daily cleansing, via the hair brush, just as much as the skin does via soap, water, and cleansing cream. Hair lacks luster when it's grimy, it has an objectionable odor, and it usually hangs limp.

Nowadays, when the beauty shop appointment is difficult to obtain and, sometimes, difficult to keep, a great many of us have to master the art of shampooing our own hair. If the prospect gives you the jitters, get over them. It's a simple process and an important one to the woman who treasures her reputation for grooming.

• • •

You can do at home what the good professional always does in the salon: Wield your hairbrush. Brush your hair furiously, planting the bristles firmly on the scalp and then drawing them down the length of the shaft. For this special pre-shampoo brushing, brush the hair up. Bend down and brush the hair downward. The idea is to stimulate circulation and you won't do this if you merely brush the hair down from the scalp in the usual way.

Massage your scalp, too, describing small circles at the temples, over the forehead, the crown and the back of the neck. Lift the scalp and pinch it a little and pull your own hair. Scalps respond well to this rough treatment.

Then for your shampoo use warm, not too hot water. If you use soap shave it, pop the shavings into water and boil up a not too thick liquid. Other types of shampoo should be used according to directions.

In any case, one soaping and one rinsing aren't enough. Have two, or even three. And remember that the rinsings are more important than the soapings. If you've ever watched a truly fine laundress, who turns out linens and fine things exquisitely, you'll learn that indefatigable rinsing is her big secret. Rinse until your arms ache—and even longer. Rinse until the hair strands float independently and separately on top of the water filled basin and squeak faintly when captured between the fingers.

• • •

If you rinse your hair well enough you won't need any other type of rinse, really. But if you want to make doubly certain, use one—vinegar, perhaps, or add strained lemon juice to the final water if you're blonde. Or use one of the prepared rinses—and read the directions carefully before you toss anything into the water or on your hair.

Dry your hair by hand if you can, and brush it again when it's almost dry. Then set it. It's at this point that you need deftness—only acquired by practice, as far as we can see.

Immediately after a shampoo, as you probably know from personal experience, your hair is dryer than it normally is. You can offset this by using, very, very gingerly, a light dressing or a scalp unguent. Remember tho that a little goes a long way and use sparingly.

If there is a bath spray in the house, snag it for your rinsing. Nothing is quite as good. But, of course, such things are hard come by these days. Lacking one you'll simply have to resort to the old practice of pouring water over the hair, one small saucepanful after the other!

Parsley—a Must.

What is a kitchen garden without it? To glorify the tomato cocktail, to flavor the soup, to herbalize the fish sauce, to give color to the potato salad, to camouflage the hash, to decorate the chops, to trim the roast [if and when]—you "gotta have" parsley.

Even if you're in a one room apartment you can start your war garden now with a compact little window garden. Don't get impatient if you don't see green shoots in the window garden in a day or two. Parsley just naturally takes its own time to sprout, sometimes as long as 30 or 40 days in garden soil. The year I learned that I finally wound up with three great flourishing patches of it—I kept thinking the seeds were no good, and planted more.

Making Cake.

I heard mother say it was baking day
This morning in Heaventown!
And I'm sure she is right
For come, see how light
The flour comes sifting down.

The angels are sifting and sifting and sifting
It everywhere, near and far;
They are trying to make
An angel-food cake
But O, how wasteful they are!

Good gracious! When mother lets me sift for her
With a towel in front of my dress,
I sift and I sift
And I never make
The teeniest bit of a mess.

But those foolish angels have sifted and sifted
On every bush and tree
Flour enough to make
Angel-food cake
For a million children like me!

Instinct.

A frail young tendril reared its jaunty stem
High up above the leaves that tightly clung
To the old vine that safely sheltered them,
Away from fitful gales that round them swung.
Brave little bud, it sought security,
To make for its own self a place to stay,
A place where it could thrive with surety,
With courage to go on from day to day.
So confident it was, an inner grace
Gave promise of its true fulfillment there,
An instinct that was given it to face
Life's law and order—then to do and dare.

Patterns by Clotilde

Soft, smooth, and subtle are adjectives which accurately describe these two spring dresses. One of the attractive features of this twosome is that the frocks are not the prerogative only of reedlike silhouettes. Women of ample proportions also may wear them, and handsomely.

One model buttons down the front. It has a heart shaped neck line, bracelet length sleeves, and suave, paneled lines. Plain colors are "naturals" for this dress, but tiny prints also will make up effectively.

The other design reverses the fabric order. Prints were simply "made" for this one piece model with V neck line, bodice and skirt shirring, and self-fabric belt.

Style No. 3696 is designed for sizes 10 to 40. Size 16 requires 4 yards of 39 inch fabric.

Style No. 3699 is designed for sizes 12 to 44. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 39 inch fabric.

You Can Bleach Your Skin to a Lighter, Prettier Hue with Mercolized Wax Cream

FASHION indicates the return to favor of fairer, softer skin. Ever in stride with the latest mode, Mercolized Wax Cream lends its subtle bleaching and beautifying action to help you win a fashionable, lighter, lovelier complexion. Mercolized Wax Cream hastens the natural shedding of the dull, surface skin and uncovers the fairer, softer, smoother underskin. The action takes place so gradually that the actual flaking process is not visible. But soon you become aware of the improved appearance of your complexion. Start bleaching your skin tonight using Mercolized Wax Cream according to directions and you will be pleased.

REMOVE FACIAL HAIR with PHELACTINE DEPILATORY—Phelactine not only takes off the surface hair, but actually extracts the portion embedded under the skin, leaving no fuzz or stubble. It can be applied quickly and easily in a few seconds. Not a cream or powder. Has no obnoxious odor. You will like Phelactine.

TRY SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT, the DELIGHTFUL SKIN FRESHENER. It is a quick acting, refreshing aid for daily care of the skin. Saxolite reduces excess oil on the surface skin; and its contracting action temporarily tightens the skin tissue. Simply dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and pat this lotion briskly on the skin several times daily.

Discontent of Child Traced to Generosity

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

The discontent of children, of which the signs sometimes are restlessness, rebellion, ill-temper, or a generally difficult behavior, may be due to a lack of interest and evidences of affection on the part of their parents, and a lack of normal material advantages and comforts as well.

But discontentedness in children of nearly any age, can be due to just the opposite: To too much of everything—too much attention, too much diversion. And part of the reason is that surfeit, or satiation, prevents a child from exercising his powers in creating his own amusements, discovering his own inner resources, and keeps him from the deep, satisfying human experiences of helping, sharing, and considering others.

• • •

A teacher I know tells a simple, cunning tale. The bell had rung concluding morning recess. Carl, the teacher noticed, popped a last something into his mouth after the bell, and continued chewing, his freckled sunny face serious and businesslike as usual. No mischief here. Glancing at him again some minutes later she saw he was still chewing. Going quietly to his desk she said:

"Carl, recess is over. What is it you're eating?" Thinking it must be a piece of chewing candy or delicious cookie she was surprised to hear him answer,

"It's my roll, Miss Johnson. It's my crusty roll with fresh butter on. It's so good."

The little boy was the son of the manager of one of the city's most famous hotels, in which they lived. And the teacher couldn't help thinking, as he swallowed the delicious bite and wiped his buttery young fingers, how wise his parents were, living at the hotel with its noted chef, to feed him so simply that he ate a crisp buttered roll with such keen relish.

• • •

I'm not one of those persons who believe that large quantities of trouble, poverty, and misfortune are necessary for the good of the soul, and that ease, plenty and happiness are softening to the character. I know rather that happiness and freedom from financial strain have a part of their own to play in developing character and enriching one's personality and spirit.

But I do know, too, that it is possible to have so much of good things that you don't savor them. The expression "poor little rich girl" is a true as well as a trenchant one, since so many little girls born to wealth are satiated early in life. That they often have too little of the fine, unmaterial things we don't need to go into now.

So I always feel sorry for a child, rich or not, who is surfeited with toys, clothes, attention, and indulgence. When he's little, he's smothered by them and robbed of initiative, freedom, and independence. When he's older, he's satisfied and loses his ability to savor them.

• • •

Every so often I am asked by a mother why her little boy or girl is so discontented. "The child has everything," for what she can't supply, his adoring relatives do. He has every attention from his grown-ups; they play with him and amuse him. He isn't crossed, yet he's discontented, tires easily of his toys, can't play long alone, and whines to get his own way.

Not always, but often, discontent comes from "too much." The wise parent knows that a child must learn sometimes to do without, to conform, to obey, to accept restrictions, to consider others. The wise parent finds the wholesome dividing line between too much and too little in every phase of her child's life in itself and its relation to others' lives.

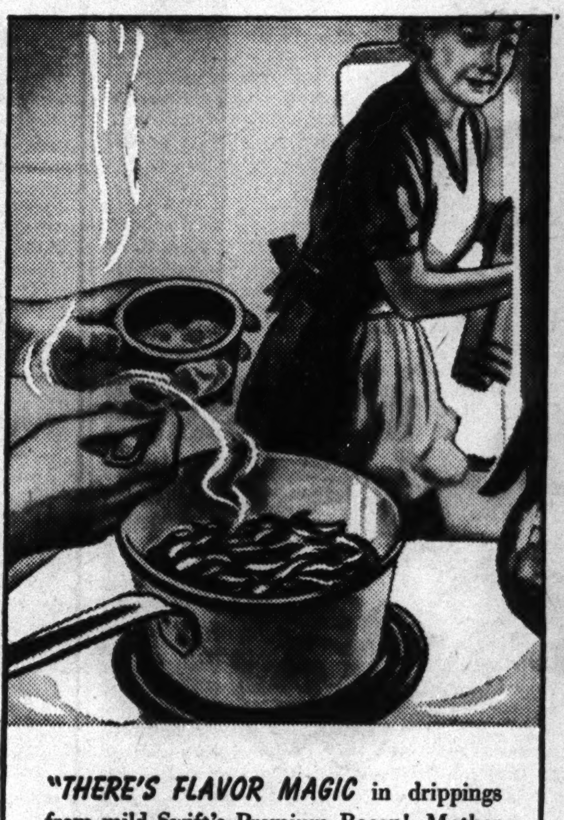
MOTHER GIVES FIRST AID TO FRAN'S "POINT" BUDGET!

"MY, BUT I WAS THRILLED when mother came to visit. Bob (who's working hard in a war plant) says it's a break for him, too . . . Mother is a famous cook! I wasn't doing too well managing our ration points and I surely needed mother's help. We talked it over and she promised some first aid right away."

"LESSON NO. 1 featured bacon. Mother says bacon is a marvelous point-stretcher, and believe me I agreed when I saw what she did with just half a pound! One thing she didn't have to tell me was to get Swift's Premium Bacon. No other kind can compare with it for wonderful mildness and rich delicious flavor."

"NOW, FRAN," Mother warned me, "cook the bacon slowly so the drippings won't burn. Then strain them and keep in the refrigerator. You want to get every bit of food and flavor value from kitchen fats before turning them in to make explosives. For breakfast, we'll have one slice each of bacon, and fried mush."



"THERE'S FLAVOR MAGIC in drippings from mild Swift's Premium Bacon! Mother uses them on vegetables (saves butter!), and for pan frying, and bread dressings. And just imagine—she makes perfect biscuits, pancakes, and waffles using bacon drippings for shortening. More ration points saved!"

"AN ELEGANT MAIN DISH for the three of us came out of that same half-pound of bacon! For each person, top 2 apple slices with 2 cooked salted sweet potato slices; bake 15 minutes at 400°; top with bacon slices and bake about 25 minutes more. Swift's Premium's sweet smoke taste flavors the whole dish!"

Swift's Premium Bacon

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

The young women who gathered in the apartment of Mrs. John B. Mallers III. the other day to make plans for the Margaret Etter Creche benefit cocktail-dance on St. Patrick's day at the Casino brought with them gifts to be used as door prizes during the evening. As the meeting was held on Valentine's day, the hostess used an especially pretty and appropriate tea table decoration—a low bowl filled with red carnations, each framed in a white heart. Vases filled with red roses added a smart color note to the soft blues and grays of the living room, and with her springlike frock of black printed all over in pink, Mrs. Mallers was wearing an old fashioned bouquet of pink flowers. Mrs. Donald F. Bowey Jr., who missed the party because of a tonsilectomy, sent a large ham. Mrs. John H. Kraft had an accident with her gift, a stunning big modern glass vase. It slipped from her hands as she got out of a taxi, and scattered in a dozen pieces over Astor street. Mrs. Frank E. Halle, chairman of the benefit, made a stunning figure in a gray dress and hat unrelieved by any color. The dress was cleverly draped and pointed up with bows of the same material and had rather a low, square decolletage. Hostess at a party to make plans for Poetry Magazine's series of benefit lectures beginning Feb. 26 at the Arts club, Mrs. Augustine J. Bowe received in a slim black gown, brightened by a gilet of jade satin, tied in a bow at the neckline and embroidered in jet beads. A fresh pink camellia added to the costume.

Mrs. John B. Mallers III.

• • •

Another chic black costume was Mrs. Ralph W. Cornelison's, a cunningly fitted black faille suit with an infinitesimal frilled peplum. In place of buttons, the jacket was fastened with rhinestone circlets laced with black velvet. Large turquoise velvet and black bows formed her hat, and one arm was tucked thru a silver fox muff. At the same gathering was Mrs. John G. McDonald, dressed in a pale blue gown that exactly matched the feather bird atop her brown felt hat. She was accompanied by her daughter, Camille, in violet wool and a little skull cap with black bows. The picture of the week was made by the patriarch of the Assyrian church, Mar Shimun, seated in the living room of the Jarvis Hunts' home with a rare 800 year old painting of a Tibetan priest hanging on the wall behind him. The contrast between the Tibetan and the bearded but young present day churchman was interesting. In the ever changing circle of guests who chatted with Mar Shimun was a particularly interested one, Mrs. Alexander B. Maley, whose husband is stationed with the navy in the patriarch's native Iran. Mar Shimun is making his headquarters in Chicago now. Mrs. Hunt, who wears her hair cut quite short and arranged becomingly to frame her face, received her guests in a sophisticated black frock with a hint of black lace thru the bodice. Attending her first party since the birth of her son, Billy, was Mrs. Arthur A. Burrows Jr., in a powder blue wool frock and a giddy little hat of silver fox. Also in pale blue was a comparative newcomer to Chicago, Mrs. George McWilliams Jr., a slender and stunning looking woman. Her hat was trimmed with mink. Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams spent the summer in Wheaton and now have an apartment in town.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1944: By Ely Culbertson.]

The percentage favoring one play over another may be very slight, but it is just such choices as this that, in the long run, determine whether a player is a winner or a loser. Consider the following typical case.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match point duplicate.

NORTH
♠Q 6
♥8 7 5
♦J 9 8 6 2
♣A J 9

WEST
♠8 7 5 4 3 2
♥A 10 3

♣7 6 4 2

EAST
♠K J 9
♥K Q 4 2
♦K 10 4
♣8 5 3

SOUTH
♠A 10
♥J 9 6
♦A Q 7 5 3
♣K Q 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

This bidding was virtually duplicated at all seven tables, and in every case West opened his fourth highest spade. Some declarers went up with the queen; others let the lead ride to their own hand, but since East had both the king and jack, this was inconsequential—in any case, South lost his only spade stopper. With the spade and heart suits now wide open, it was apparent that the only hope of fulfilling the contract was to run the diamonds without loss. No other consideration was involved.

The king-ten-four of diamonds were outstanding. As every one knows, when a declarer has 10 cards of a suit, lacking the king, the proper technique is to finesse, not to play for a drop. Therefore, in this particular deal, if the diamond king is in West's hand it will make, since there is no reason for declarer to violate the rule and lay down the ace. Thus, we must finesse, but in precisely what manner? After entering dummy with a club, should we lead a low diamond and finesse to the queen, or should we lead the jack?

The answer to this question is easy if we will merely take into account the possible distributions of the missing diamonds.

Having decided that the correct play is to finesse unless the king shows up on the first lead from dummy, we don't have to bother our heads with most of the possibilities. In every case where West has the king, we lose, and that's that. In the event that East has the king-four and king-ten it doesn't matter whether we lead the jack or a low diamond from dummy—we come out all right either way. But now take a look at another possibility. Suppose that East has the three missing diamonds, as he actually had. If we lead low from dummy, East of course plays the four and we, not being second-sighted, finesse the queen. Now East has a sure diamond trick and stopper.

The solution, obviously, is that the jack is the correct play from dummy. If East plays low we pass the jack. If East covers the jack, we win and then, as West shows out we go back to dummy and take the established finesse against the ten-spot.

Incredible as it will seem, only one South in the field made the correct play, and naturally he was the only one to bring home the contract.
